He Farms, She Teaches Ag, Together They Find Balance

Farming must generate enough income to be efficient and not rely upon income from another career, said Christine and David Williams. Farming practices implemented on Chris-Da-Will Farm help the Williams find more family time with their children, Erin, 8; Lauren, 5, and Matthew 3. A story about Erin, who is Lebanon County's Li'l Dairy Miss, also appears on page B10.

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Before Christine Williams began teaching adult farmers and vocational agriculture at Tulpehocken High School, she was advised that it isn't considered professionally astute to use one's own farm as an experiment.

"But that doesn't quite work out," she admitted.

Buoyed with knowlege from constant exposure to educational research, Christine is eager to apply classroom learning to the farm that she and her husband own in Lebanon County.

Her husband David, an avid reader of agricutural technology, is just as eager to adapt farming practices that mean less work, more profit, and more time to spend with their children, Erin, 8; Lauren, 5, and Matthew, 3.

Christine said that people often think that the money she earns as a teacher supplements farm income, but she said, "Farm income must generate enough to be self-sufficent. I don't work to pay to farm. I work because I enjoy teaching and David farms because he enjoys it."

Called Chris-Da-Will Farm, the 135-acre farm occupies the inside of a deep bend in the Little Swatara Creek. Within several minutes, almost walking distance from Jonestown, the bordering medium-sized stream provides the family isolation from crowds and urbanization.

Apply Now For Liquid Fuels Tax Refund

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Every year, those who use liquid fuels in the course of agricultural production are eligible for a refund of the taxes assessed.

According to state Treasurer Catherine Knoll, "Last year, the Board of Finance and Revenue (an official state agency chaired by Knoll) paid out a total of $2 million in liquid fuels tax refunds to 11,000 Pennsylvania farmers, with each farmer receiving an average of $176.

"However, nearly 40,000 farmers did not even apply for the refund," she added.

The reason that agriculture is allowed to recoup taxes collected by the state on liquid fuels is primarily because those taxes are collected to benefit motorists and the transportation industry, not farmers as such.

If a farmer uses liquid fuels to take a vacation and uses the state's highways for transportation, then those taxes collected wouldn't be returned.

However, taxes are returned to those who use liquid fuels to operate tractors, machinery, heating, etc., for agricultural production.

PMMB Considers Request To Lower Producer Premium

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board last week held a public hearing to collect input on a proposal from the Middle Atlantic Cooperative Milk Marketing Agency (MACMA) and the Pennsylvania Milk Dealers Association to decrease the over-order premium to 40 cents.

The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board is an agency that regulates the dairy industry, and ensures that farmers are properly compensated for the milk they deliver to processors.

The PMMB also has the authority, unique among states, to place a minimum level on the retail price of milk, and place an over-order premium on the Class I price paid to producers.

Since 1988, the PMMB has acted to add a premium to the price paid to Pennsylvania dairy producers who sell Class I (fluid) milk that retails in Pennsylvania. The prompting of that was a drought and poor milk prices paid to the producer relative to the cost of production.

The premium has remained in place since, varying in amounts, up to a temporary high of $1.35 per hundredweight, to the current low of 80 cents per cwt.

The premium is called "over-order" because it refers to the fact that the federal government milk distribution and pricing system attempts to organize and regulate the flow of milk according to "federal orders."

Those federal orders are determined according to certain sized volumes of milk being handled, and geography.

The program is part of the government's effort to ensure citizens plentiful, inexpensive food, as a basic service.

Pennsylvania producers normally directly supply several federal orders in marketing their milk, though local milk or milk products can be and are found in many places in the world.

The PMMB over-order premium is paid only on Class I milk retailed in Pennsylvania.

The basic argument for the over-order premium has been that it is necessary to help provide the resident Pennsylvania producer with a chance at a profitable sale of milk, while at the same time ensuring a dependable, fresh and high quality product for the state's citizens.

That argument follows the theme that it's better to support a neighbor in business because it's easier to know and influence the

TIPS TO IMPROVE EGGSHELL QUALITY...

Dr Milton Scott
Nutritional Consultant

"Let's get specific"

Check specific gravity of eggs on a regular basis to monitor shell quality. The percent "floaters" and "eggs in transition" in a room temperature solution of 1.08 sp. gr. is a good bench mark.

A 10 gal. bucket, a hydrometer, and an individual egg scale is all the equipment you need. Used with breeder guidelines, this test can help you fine-tune the level of oyster shell needed at each stage in the laying cycle.

For details on sp. gr. tests and the use of oyster shells, contact The Fox Co., PO Box 708, Newfield, NJ 08344. FAX 609/697-1692, Phone 800/257-7022.

60 DAY DRY COW PROGRAM
(COW WORK SCHEDULE)

1. CALF GROWTH - The majority of calf development takes place in the last Sixty (60) Days before the calf is born. Sufficient nutrients must be provided for the cow to maintain her body weight PLUS the nutrients for development of 50-60 lbs. of calf body weight. The cow will deplete her body reserve if necessary during this period in order to provide the necessary nutrients for calf development.

2. BUILD MILK SECRETORY CELLS - The 60 day period gives the cow time to rebuild the number of milk secretory cells in her udder to produce maximum milk during the upcoming lactation.

3. RESTORE NUTRIENT RESERVES - After meeting body maintenance needs and calf growth, the cow will use available nutrients to restore her body reserves. Body reserves are used to support peak milk production in the next lactation. The majority of body condition should be put on in the latter part of the previous lactation.

4. EXERCISE AND MUSCLE TONE - The 60 day period should be a time for cows to get out of the milking barn and off concrete. An exercise lot or pasture will help the cow rebuild muscle tone.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

JUNE 5-11, 1995

WORLD ENVIRONMENT DAY, JUNE 5.

EVERY DAY IS EARTH DAY

Love your Mother, as they say, in honor of our planet. The environment knows no national boundaries when it comes to air and water pollution or the consumption of resources. Recently extinct species include the dodo, the Arabian ostrich, and the Tasmanian emu. The white rhino, cheetahs, and the polar bear are among the endangered. Helen Caldicott, M.D., in If You Love This Planet, suggests compulsory voting (as in Australia) and political campaigns being 100% funded by the federal government as two steps toward healing our wounded planet. Edmund Burke (1729-1797) cautioned, "The only thing necessary for the triumph of evil is for good men to do nothing."

"One of these days" is none of these days.

TIP OF THE WEEK

FRIED DANDELIONS

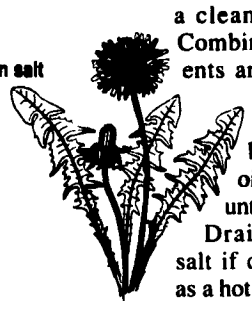
Batter:
1 egg, beaten
1 cup milk
1 cup flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
pinch of pepper



Harvest young dandelion blossoms, rinse well, and cut off the stems. Blot the flowers in a clean towel.Heat oil. Combine batter ingredients and dip each blossom in the batter. Drop the dipped blossoms into hot oil to cover and fry until lightly browned. Drain, sprinkle with salt if desired, and serve as a hot hors d' oeuvre.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

If on the eighth of June it rain,
It foretells a wet harvest, men sain.

On St. Barnabus' Day (June 11), the Sun comes to stay.

Some rain, some rest
Fine weather isn't always best.

When swans fly, it is a sign of rough weather.

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
MAY 31, 1995

Wheat bids slipped lower on harvest pressure and spillover weakness from yesterday's lower trend. Corn bids were slightly lower as forecasts still call for drying conditions in the Midwest. However, declines were limited due to good export demand. Soybean bids regained a small portion of Tuesday's sharp losses as traders felt corrections were needed. Wheat 1 to 2 cents lower and up to 16 cents lower in Portland. Corn mostly 1 cent lower. Sorghum mixed. Soybeans 1 to 4 cents higher. Profit taking pushed wheat bids lower on continued optimism for drier weather in both spring wheat and winter wheat growing areas. Harvest progress, now that spring rains have slowed, drove wheat bids lower. Spring wheat planting has been productive in many areas and is estimated at 70 percent complete overall. This figure, however, remains lower than the average of 98 percent. Concerns over disease from excessive rainfall still exists in winter wheat country. Good export demand from South Korea this morning offered slight strength to corn bids. However, profit taking on the board in reaction to warmer, drier weather expected in Corn Belt areas and the 71 percent figure for overall planting progress released by USDA, undermined bids. Soybean bids climbed slightly after drastic declines in Tuesday's close as a corrective manuver.

CHORE-TIME EQUIPMENT

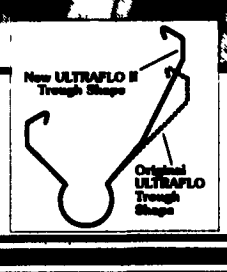
New Shape
The difference is the shape of the feeder's trough (at right). ULTRAFLO II's higher trough lip reduces feed waste by keeping it in the trough and not on the floor or in the pit.



The Right Choice in cage feeders

Chore-Time's popular ULTRAFLO® Cage Feeding System is now even more outstanding! We've developed and tested the second generation of ULTRAFLO feeders and named it the ULTRAFLO® II.

ULTRAFLO II offers you even greater reliability, durability, and outstanding feed-saving performance—up to 1 gram of feed per bird per day—over the original ULTRAFLO. And even the original ULTRAFLO was beating our competitors in feed savings!

So, join the cage feeding leader. Contact us today. Find out how Chore-Time and ULTRAFLO II can help you be a leader, too!

OPINION

You're In Good Company

They even have 700 dairy cows in Alaska. That's important because it means every state in our country has cows. All told, 9.5 million dairy cows live in the U.S. Of course, Wisconsin has the most cows, followed by California and New York. Pennsylvania comes in fourth, followed by Minnesota.

On the city side, ninety-nine percent of all U.S. households purchase milk. That's good for the dairy farmers and the agribusinesses that provide the inputs and machinery to keep the pipelines full. According to the USDA, most of the milk sold now is either lowfat or skim. Only 38 percent is plain whole milk.

But this milk provides the most important food source of calcium, providing around 300 mg per one-cup serving. Milk's importance rests on the fact that it lends itself to daily consumption. The body's need for calcium is on-going throughout life.

In addition to milk, Americans consume an astounding 26.2 pounds of cheese per person. And now that medical research data proves what we have known all along—butter is good for you—sales of this dairy product have also increased. Market observers also suggest that lower prices, along with the enlightened attitude about nutrition, has helped increase the number of new butter users.

And then there are ice cream and frozen yogurt. According to the International Ice cream Association, 1.5 billion gallons of frozen dairy products are consumed each year in the U.S. The favorite flavor is vanilla. Fruit and nut flavors are next. But only eight percent of the ice cream consumed is flavored with chocolate.

This first week of June Dairy Month is a good time to drink your milk, and eat your cheese, ice cream, and yogurt. You are in good company of people who do.

Now Is The Time

To Salute Dairy And Turkey Farmers

June is Dairy Month and Turkey Month. A month where we salute two very important agricultural industries in Pennsylvania.

In 1993, Pennsylvania's 11,800 dairy farms produced 10.2 billion pounds of milk worth more than $1.4 billion. Our turkey farmers produced 8.6 million turkeys weighing 169.4 million pounds worth $71.2 million.

Both of these industries consist of many small family farms. Through the dedicated and hard work of many family members, we enjoy a low cost, abundant and safe food supply.

We will be seeing many promotional activities informing people of the importance of farms and agriculture to our communities. We salute all our farm families and say thank you for a job well done.

To Know Heat Stress Of Cows

University of Florida dairy scientists Dave Bray and Ray Bucklin say there are three quick tests that may be used to tell if cows are heat stressed and in need of supplemental cooling.

The three indicators are:

1. Respiration rates that exceed 80 per minute.
2. Rectal temperatures exceeding 102.5 F. or
3. A drop of more than 10 percent in dry matter intake or milk production or both.

Remember that high producing cows generate more body heat and are more susceptible to heat stress. The more they pant, the more energy they expand — thus energy no longer available for milk production.

It is important to provide cows relief from heat stress during periods of hot weather.

To Reduce Heat Stress On Cows

When hot weather occurs, there are a number of things that may be done to help provide cows some relief. Provide cows with fresh, clean water. Prevent cows from turning watering sites into mastitis-causing mud holes.

Provide shade in the form of lots of trees, shade cloths, well-ventilated stable, etc. Do not let cows turn the shade area into a muddy area.

Reduce cow activity. Do not make cows walk great distances for feed, water, and shade. Keep water and shade close to the feeding area to stimulate greater dry matter intake.

Keep cows stabled in a well-ventilated barn during the heat of the day where they have a clean, comfortable stall and easy access to fresh water and feed. A ventilation system that provides cows with lots of fresh air is preferable to one that merely circulates stale air.

Feed cows during the cooler hours of the day and keep the feed fresh. Wet down cows periodically and dry them off in a breeze for evaporative cooling. These tips should help keep your cows productive, even in hot weather.

THE PATHOLOGY OF POWER
June 4, 1995

THE PATHOLOGY OF POWER
June 4, 1995

Background Scripture
I Kings 11:26 - 12:24
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 14

The story of the split between the ten northern tribes of Israel and the two southern tribes of Judah is a dusty page of history.

Yet the meaning behind what happened almost 3,000 years ago in a little Palestinian town is as current as tonight's television news or the headlines of tomorrow's newspaper. For behind this tragic event in the long ago history of the people of God was a reality that is just as much a curse in our world as it was in theirs: the misuse and abuse of power.

The late Norman Cousins is perhaps best-known in our time for his writings — Anatomy of an Illness — exploring the relationships between the mind and the body in relation to the health and wholeness of the individual. But Cousins also wrote a book about another kind of sickness, The Pathology of Power (W.W. Norton, 1987), an examination of how the lust for power contaminates and destroys the moral fabric of a nation.

POWER CORRUPTS

Cousins begins with the well-known quotation from Lord Action: "Power tends to corrupt; absolute power corrupts absolutely" and then goes on to chronicle and explore other tendencies of power that "emerge from the pages of the historians." One of these, says Cousins, is that of becoming "a theology, admitting no other gods before." Human power becomes a substitute for God!

Although King Solomon had made a good beginning in ruling Israel, along the way he succumbed to the theology of power. For the sake of power Solomon had forsaken God and "worshipped Ashtoreth, the goddess of the Sidonians, Chemosh the god of Moab, and Milcom the god of the Ammonites" (11:33) and therefore God warned, "I am about to tear the kingdom from the hand of Solomon. . ."

When Solomon died it was logical that his son, Rehoboam, should succeed to the throne. But, journeying to Schechem to receive the confirmation of the ten northern tribes, Rehoboam is confronted by their representatives with an important condition: "Your father, Solomon, made our yoke heavy. Now therefore lighten the hard service of your father and his heavy yoke upon us, and we will serve you" (12:4). It was certainly a legitimate complaint for Solomon had virtually enslaved many of his citizens to build his royal trappings.

POWER'S ARROGANCE

Before answering, Rehoboam took three days to seek the advice of first the old counselors who had served his father. Their advice: "If you will be a servant to these people today and serve them, and speak good words to them when you answer them, then they will be your servants for ever." Apparently, that wasn't the answer he wanted and instead he took the advice of his youthful advisors who counselled, "Thus shall you speak to this people . . . 'And now whereas my father laid upon you a heavy yoke, I will add to your yoke. My father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions'" (12:10,11).

Why did Rehoboam replay in such an arrogant and stupid manner? The seduction of power! Rehoboam did not possess power; it possessed him. The exercise of power became more important to him than either God or even common sense, although he was probably convinced that he was possessed of both.

Often those who abuse power most — then and today! — are those who are convinced that they are doing so with the blessing of God. As John Adams wrote to Thomas Jefferson, "Power always thinks it is doing God's service when it is violating all His laws."

Thus it was almost 3,000 years ago; thus it is even now.

LEBANON® EXTRA
Granulated Starter Fertilizer

"THERE'S MORE TO IT THAN JUST NPK"

For over 47 years, farmers throughout the Mid-Atlantic Area from New York to Virginia have produced millions of dollars of crops using Lebanon Extra fertilizer.

Lebanon Extra is an ammoniated, homogenous. granular NPK fertilizer. With the increased emphasis on using less and precise applications of plant food, Lebanon Extra provides the nutrient sources that you can depend on, and not just NPK but also secondary and six micro-nutrients. The nutrient integrity of Lebanon Extra is superior to bulk blend fertilizer products. When using row applications or banding accurate amounts of plant food it can be important to use a safe, quality, uniform grade product. If you are using a blend with MAP compare the value of Lebanon Extra.

LEBANON EXTRA PLANT FOOD
Ammoniated Granular Fertilizer

Introducing Delvotest® SP.

Buy a Delvotest® Block Heater before June 30, 1995, and get a FREE Delvotest® SP MiniKit.

Delvotest® SP is a simple, reliable, inexpensive test for detecting virtually all antibiotics which includes an increased sensitivity for sulfa residues in milk. You can set up a Delvotest® SP in 2 minutes. With the use of a timer, you can read the results at your convenience, up to 12 hours from the start of the incubation period. You run the test in your own milk room.

Why Delvotest® SP?

- Because you need to know your milk is free from all antibiotics, including sulfa residues.
- Because you need to know your milk is going into the tank truck, instead of down the drain.

Dairying Returns Full Circle To Chester Dairy Farm

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

COCHRANVILLE (Chester Co.) — To some dairy families, there's an adage that sticks: life is not a ladder, it's a circle.

Charles Moore remembers when, in the '60s, milk went from being bottled by small processors for local home delivery to huge processors with delivery to giant supermarkets.

Then, things changed. Now, because consumers want more personalized services they can trust, the Cochranville dairy farmer sees the lifecycle of the public milk supply swinging back to independent producers, and maybe even the return of the glass bottle with a paper cap, delivered right to the door, in some areas of the country.

Moore held up one of those glass bottles, embossed on the face of the glass in green with the company logo, specially produced for the 75th anniversary of the place he sells his milk: Hy-Point Dairy, near Wilmington, Del.

At one time, the Moore family managed a dairy farm near Chester, Delaware County. Up until 1954, the Lemuel L. Moore family would take the cattle out to the meadows surrounding the 98-acre farm. But the U.S. Army stepped in in 1955 and negotiated a deal which transferred the family — and their entire dairy operation — to Cochranville in 1960.

The Moore family, who operate Rol-Pen-Lyn farm (a prefix created using first names of their son and two daughters), farm a total of 180 tillable acres, including 38 at the home farm, where they raise two separate herds. Charles Moore, right, manages registered and grade Holstein, while his daughter Penny, 28, left, maintains a mixed breed, consisting of Jerseys, Linebacks, and Holsteins. In center is Charles' wife, Anna Grace. Photo by Andy Andrews

Why were they asked to leave?

"The farm was converted to a radar-guided missle sight," said Moore as he scattered wheat straw about in the stall barn.

A neighboring farm, about a mile away from the original Delaware County residence, was used for the actual rockets. The site was completed in 1956. But it was never used. Why?

The military installation "was obsolete right after they had it built," Moore said, shrugging.

What's left now is single homes, an array of condominiums, an elementary school, and fast-food restaurants.

"It doesn't look anything at all like it was long ago," said Moore.

Back in the 1950s, the Moores were selling raw milk from the Chester location. In 1985, believing perhaps that life was indeed a circle, they saw a potential market, erected a farm sign, and tried to sell

Penny cares for her own herd, milking about 20 and taking care of 18 young stock. She also works part-time for a local implement dealer. Here she tends to Sonny, son of Magnum, born late April, a ¾ Jersey and ¼ Holstein.

Taking time away from busy farm chores, Penny inspects her classic tractor collection. Here she looks at a Ford Golden Dealer Demo, the 901 Select-O-Speed.

"Bailey," which Penny shows here, is a 1-year-old mixed, ¾ Holstein and ¼ Lineback.

"The farm was converted to a radar-guided missle sight," said Moore as he scattered wheat straw about in the stall barn.

There's a new postemergence herbicide for corn just out from Ciba Crop Protection that knocks down your toughest broadleaves, then keeps them down with longer residual control. It's called Exceed.

Exceed knocks down 27 different broadleaves, including velvetleaf, ragweed, pigweed, cocklebur and lambsquarters. And it delivers up to four weeks of residual control.

But the benefits don't stop there. Exceed also gives you a wide application window and excellent crop safety. There's still time to include new Exceed in your crop plans for this year. See your dealer for details on this powerful new tool. Exceed. It gets more weeds. It gives you more time to get them.

Farmer, Rural Association Expands Membership

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Communicating for Agriculture, a national association representing 80,000 farmers, ranchers and rural business owners now has representation in Pennsylvania.

Michael Bridgehouse, local representative located in Elizabethtown, said the association has a long history of working to ensure that rural Americans are treated fairly and have the same representation as urban people. This group is expanding its efforts in Pennsylvania and is now enrolling new members.

CA has its headquarters in the farming community of Fergus Falls, MN, where it was founded in 1972. CA provides its members with legislative representation and a number of other benefits, such as a bimonthly newspaper, scholarship and exchange programs for rural youth, savings on long-distance service and travel, and endorsed health, life and accident insurance programs.

On Capitol Hill and in state legislatures, CA is well known for its work on behalf of its members, including expanding rural development programs, developing new uses for agricultural products, improving the quality of rural health care and achieving tax fairness and tax credits to encourage capital investments by family farmers.

CA continually surveys its members, and uses member input to set the policy and direction of the association. The organization also brings the voices of its members to congress through letter-writing campaigns and petition drives.

For more information about Communicating for Agriculture activities and benefits, call Michael Bridgehouse at 717-361-7897.

raw milk at the family's home farm in Cochranville, just of Rt. 796.

"It's something we did down there that we thought would work here," said Moore, "because a lot of our neighbors would say, why don't you sell milk?"

But it only lasted a year. "It cost me more for the test than I was getting out of the business," Moore said, adjusting his farm hat. "Today, you'd be afraid to do anything like that."

The Moore family, who operate Rol-Pen-Lyn farm (a prefix created using first names of their son and two daughters), farm 180 tillable acres, including 38 at the home farm, where they raise two separate herds. Charles and Anna Grace Moore manage registered and grade Holstein, while their daughter Penny, 28, maintains a mixed breed, consisting of Jerseys, Linebacks, and Holsteins.

In all, the Moore herd consists of about 100 total head and the family milks about 50. Penny is responsible for all the breeding of both herds, registration, net records, DHIA, and helps milk both herds twice a day. She also works part-time for a local implement dealer. Anna Grace is responsible for the feeding program on both herds. Charles is responsible for maintenance, crops, and manure removal, and also helps milk twice a day.

At one time, Roland, 29, worked for the family farm. In May 1994, Roland, his wife Kelly, and their three children moved to their own 150-acre dairy farm in upstate New York near the St. Lawrence Sea Way, close to the college town of Potsdam. There, the family milks 40 cows, including Holsteins, Jerseys, Ayrshires, and some mixed.

Lynn, 23, is in her senior year, studying fashion, marketing and design at Wesley College in Dover, Del. She will be graduating in December this year.

What is unique is how much farm marketing has come full circle. Where once they sold to a co-op, since 1985 they've been part of the supply for Hy-Point Dairy, which processes its own milk for a variety of schools and businesses in the greater Wilmington, Del. area.

It's this regard for the specialty markets that has turned the profitability tables for many dairies. For most farm operations, survivability depends upon finding a niche market and making the most of it.

The Moores have been receiving the stated order #4 price for their milk. However, they have no marketing dues other than the CCC and advertising, and their hauling is less than some, according to Charles. But there are some guidelines they must follow while a Hy-Point supplier — they were required to sign a commitment that "we wouldn't use BST," said Moore. "Because our customers just wouldn't allow it. Hy-Point customers said that if you use it, we won't buy your milk."

Feeding high moisture corn with a protein supplement has proven effective in raising cow productivity in the Moore herd. Rolling herd average stands at 22,400 pounds, milking twice a day from tiestall to pipeline, at 3:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. At one time, when Roland worked with the herd, the family milked three times a day and the herd average stood at 27,000 pounds. But milking that often wore down the cows — not to mention the family members — according to Moore.

On the Moore's latest test, milk protein was 689 and fat was 728.

Moore is one of 15 suppliers for Hy-Point Dairy, near Wilmington, Del., which recently celebrated its 75h anniversary. The bottle is embossed in green with the company logo.

The feed is mostly high moisture corn with a 36 percent protein topdress. High quality alfalfa and timothy mix haylage rounds out the feeding program.

Penny's rolling herd average, with 18 cows, is 21,948 pounds of milk, 728 fat, and 684 protein.

Improvements in the feeding program paid off. Last year, Moore was recognized with high protein mature cow honors at the Chester County Holstein Banquet. Moore won the award at 1,122 pounds protein with the 6-year-old Rol Pen Lyn Alfalfa, 4-07, 303d, 35,953 pounds, 3.1%.

In the latest test, Alfalfa was projected at 28,144 pounds milk, 653 fat, and 850 protein. Alfalfa still stands as the herd's top-producing cow.

For Penny's herd, Janita stands out, a pure Holstein. The 6-year-old is projected at 26,160 pounds milk. Yoyo, a 5-year-old, is projected at 28,877 pounds.

Charles is happy to be able to sell to Hy-Point, which began in 1919 and celebrated its 75th anniversary last year. Moore was on a waiting list for a year before they finally joined as a supplier 10 years ago.

"It's nice to know where your milk is going," he said. "And the milk truck driver brings your milk check on time."

Perhaps life is a circle, when you think about it.

"They're real people," said Moore. "That's what I was used to as a kid, and that's more or less what I like."

Dairy promotions and publicity kits are printed in Spanish to reach the large and growing Hispanic culture in the United States.

ADADC Targets Hispanic Market

KINGSTON (Luzerne Co.) — Market research has shown that Hispanics are large consumers of milk and dairy products.

As New York City's Hispanic population continues to grow, so do opportunities to increase milk and dairy product sales.

As a result, the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Inc. (ADADC) has adapted several of its promotion programs including food kits for newspapers, radio and television advertising and product sampling for Hispanic audiences.

Most recently, ADADC translated food publicity kits to Spanish for placement in Hispanic publications. Reaching 50,000 consumers, the first placement was made in El Diario, the largest Hispanic newspaper in metropolitan New York.

Published during American Chocolate Week, the article featured simple, kitchen-tested recipes for dairy desserts including Double Chocolate Brownies with Raspberry Sauce, Chocolate Marbled Cheesecake and Peanut Butter 'N Chocolate Fudge.

Advertising is considered critical to increasing fluid milk sales in the Hispanic market. Not only has ADADC aired "Milk. Help Yourself" television advertisements in Spanish, but they have developed original radio and television advertisements specifically for the Hispanic market.

According to ADADC Director of Advertising and Promotion Michele Martens, "Hispanics view milk as a food rather than a beverage. Our advertising campaign appeals to family values and the importance of a well-balanced diet. These are concepts that influence Hispanic consumers to buy more milk."

ADADC is also helping to launch two new cultured milk drinks targeted to Hispanics, called Kumis and Boruga.

Developed by La Calenita of North Bergen, New Jersey and packaged by Crowley Foods of Binghamton, New York, the products are being supported by ADADC through television advertising and sampling at Hispanic trade shows and street festivals.

ADADC Releases Annual Report

KINGSTON (Luzerne Co.)—The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Inc. (ADADC) has released its 1994 annual report commemorating its 35th anniversary.

According to ADADC Executive Vice President Rick Naczi, "ADADC's primary goal is to deliver cost-effective, targeted programs where they make the biggest impact."

Published as a special issue of Promotion Focus, the annual report details the organization's 1994 accomplishments.

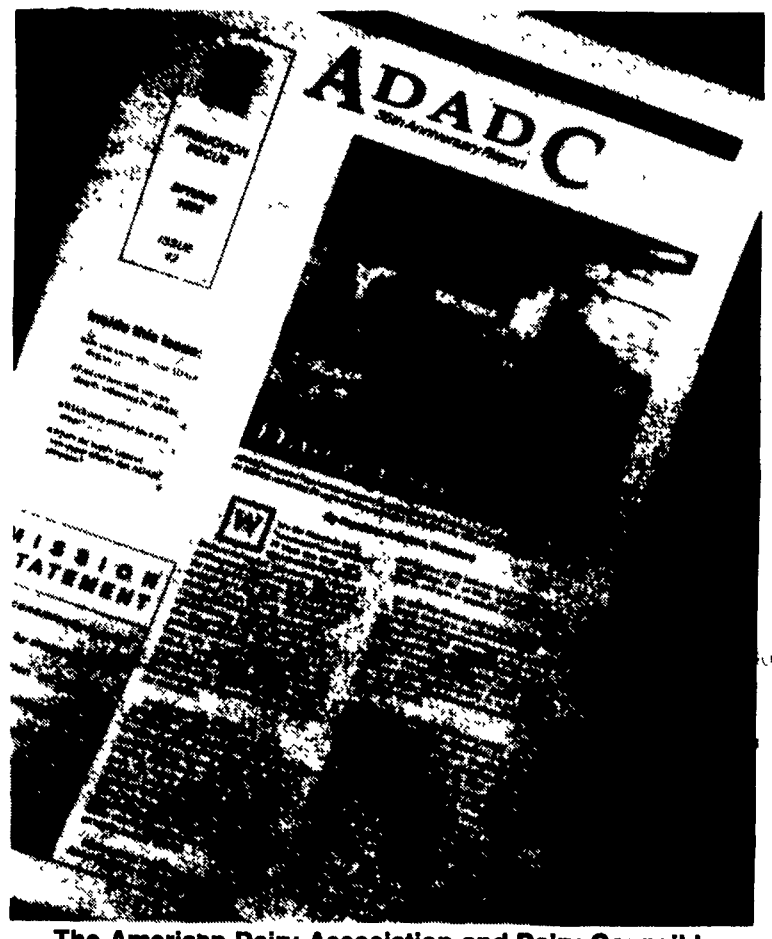
The report includes a president's message by Raymond Johnson, a dairy farmer from Schaghticoke, New York; a management message from Rick Naczi; accomplishments of ADADC's retail, nutrition education and communications work groups; and a special section on ADADC member news.

The report also includes an ADADC district and director map for all Federal Order 2 producers in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

The report suggests that ADADC directly increased milk sales in the largest dairy case in the Association's marketing area. There's also a section on how an information kit and video launched by ADADC gave chocolate milk a new image to increase milk consumption in schools.

Included are facts, such as ADADC generated over $275,000 worth of free newspaper publicity promoting milk and dairy products.

All Federal Order 2 producers were mailed a copy of the annual report. Those who did not receive a copy, should request one by writing to Stephanie Meyers, American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc., 219 South West Street, Suite 100, Syracuse, N.Y. 13202-1205.



The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Inc. 1994 annual report commemorates its 35th anniversary.

Antique Tractor Stolen

Sometime in March, a Farmall-H tractor, 1940, was reportedly stolen from a corn crib shed along Church Road in Maxatawny Township, Berks County, according to George Lichtenwalner, Wescosville, Berks County.

The tractor, which Lichtenwalner said is worth about $700, can be identified by the M&W 5-speed gearbox clearly visible. The tractor's back tires were worn. It has a standard PTO with a pressure-loaded lever.

The gearbox makes the tractor "stand out," he said. The tractor, when reportedly stolen, was equipped with an IH 325 7-foot sicklebar mower in tow. The tractor is kerosine-fueled.

A $100 reward is offered for information that leads to the return of the tractor. Lichtenwalner can be notified at 1281 Grange Road, Wescosville, PA 18106, (610) 395-5378.

Entries For 1995 Pot O' Gold Contest Due

REYNOLDSBURG, OH—Entries are due July 1 for the 1995 Pot O' Gold Production Contest. AJCA Juniors between the ages of seven and 19 enter the Pot O' Gold Production Contest by purchasing one of the animals consigned to either the Western National Pot O' Gold Sale in Puyallup, WA or the All American Pot O' Gold Sale in Louisville, KY. Funding for the contest equals 17 percent of the gross of the two sales. The records completed by heifers purchased in these sales must be submitted to the American Jersey Cattle Association no later than July 1 to be eligible for competition.

The heifer must calve before reaching 30 months of age. The actual first lactation production is adjusted to the mature equivalent (305-day, 2x milking, age and month of calving). Adjusted records are then ranked according to the mature equivalent protein to determine the placings in the contest.

All heifers must be tested in a DHI or DHIR herd owned by the purchaser or the purchaser's parents or legal guardian. In the event this is not possible, a written request must be made to the All American Executive Committee by December 31 of the year the heifer is purchased. The heifer can not be tested in the herd in which she is bred or consigned.

Junior Jersey Show Affidavits Due July 1

REYNOLDSBURG, OH—Junior exhibitors planning to show at the All American Junior Jersey Show in Louisville, KY need to be aware of the following eligibility rules.

Registration certificates must show ownership of junior's project animals registered in the name of the junior exhibitor. If the animal is not registered solely in the junior exhibitor's name, the animal must have qualified to be shown as a 4-H/FFA project in the junior exhibitor's home state by July 1 of the current show year. Affidavits of said qualifications must be received in the office of the American Jersey Cattle Association by July 1 of the year to be shown. Affidavits cannot list more than two animals for each All American Junior Show class. Transfers must be received by July 1, 1995.

Jersey Scholarships Available

REYNOLDSBURG, OH—The American Jersey Cattle Association administers eleven scholarships that are available to Jersey youth. Three V.L. Peterson Scholarships are available to youth who have completed at least one year of college. "Vic" Peterson has been called the "dean of dairy breed representatives" for his 25 years of service as an AJCA area representative.

One Paul Jackson Memorial Scholarship is awarded annually to a youth who has completed at least one year of college. Mr. Jackson was a longtime Jersey breeder, showman, and herdsman who was devoted to encouraging junior interest in Jerseys.

Jersey juniors who are graduating from high school and have been accepted by a college or university are eligible to compete for two William A. Russell scholarships. The Russell scholarship was established in 1977 to honor Bill Russell, a lifelong Jersey enthusiast who was an area representative of the American Jersey Cattle Association and National All-Jersey Inc.

Three Jack C. Nisbet Memorial Scholarships are awarded annually to participants in the National Jersey Youth Achievement Contest. Nisbet joined the AJCA staff in 1941 as an extension director. He served as executive secretary for the Association from 1943-1947.

There is an $1,000 Stanley K. Bansen Scholarship to be awarded to students working on an advanced degree (Masters of PhD) in dairy or animal science, dairy manufacturing, or agricultural business. The Bansen scholarship was established in 1992 to honor Bansen's lifelong interest and dedication to the Jersey breed and the dairy industry.

Besides these scholarships, the American Jersey Cattle Association administers the ABS/Morris B. Ewing Essay Contest sponsored by American Breeders Service. The contest winner will be awarded a $500 scholarship. Contest entries should focus on the question: "How can Jersey Breeders work with the genetic industry (AI organizations, universities, etc.) to help further the Jersey breed in the dairy industry?" To be eligible for the contest, applicants must be between 16 and 22 years of age on January 1 of the contest year. Essays should not exceed 1,000 words and will be judged on accuracy of information, creativity, and grammatical correctness.

Jersey scholarships are available to youth who own at least one registered Jersey and who are accepted or enrolled in college. Selection is based on financial need and scholarship achievement, as well as Jersey and related activities. The deadline for applying for a 1994 scholarship is July 1. Applications are available by calling the American Jersey Cattle Association (614) 861-3636 or writing to: 6486 East Main Street, Reynoldsburg, Ohio 43068-2362.

Keeping high producing cows on feed, keeping them milking well and breeding well, and keeping them healthy and alive can be a challenge during the hot mucky days of summer.

High producing cows generate a lot of body heat, and as herds continue to become more productive the impact of heat stress becomes more costly. Some of these costs are immediately visible; others are less visible and continue to be felt for several months after the heat spell is over.

The cost of heat stress appears in the form of lost production, reduced conception rates, higher breeding and vet bills, higher culling rates and perhaps higher cell counts and lower fat tests. How costly can this become? This will vary greatly from farm to farm and from year to year.

To get a handle on these costs let's make the following assumptions and estimate what they could be for a 60-cow herd averaging 65 lbs. of milk per cow per day:

•The "heat stress" period lasts 2 months.

•Milk production per cow per day drops 10 lbs. but is reduced by 5 lbs. with good ventilation and good management.

•Milk income over feed cost is $7 per cwt.

•12 cows (20% of the herd) come into heat during the "heat stress" period, and their calving interval can be reduced 42 days (2 heat periods) with good ventilation and good management.

•Breeding and vet costs can be reduced $40.00 per head for these 12 cows.

•Cows in the last 2 months of an extended lactation average 20 lbs. less milk than they did for the first 300-330 days in milk.

•Heat-stress culling rates can be reduced by 3 cows (5% of the herd) with good ventilation and good management.

•Each involuntary cull represents an $800 loss to the farmer ($1200 replacement cost or the sale value of a dairy cow or heifer minus $400 for a cull cow equals $800).

•Fat tests can be improved 1 point with good ventilation and improved intakes, thereby increasing milk prices by $0.06 per cent.

Let's now use these figures and itemize how much total cost might be reduced for the herd with good ventilation and good management:

•Reduce drop in milk production
(60 cows x 5 lb. per day x 60 days x $0.07 per lb.=$1,260.00)

•Higher milk price due to higher fat test
(60 cows x 65 cents per cow x 60 days x $0.06=$140.00)

•Reduced calving interval
(12 cows x 20 lb. less milk per day x 42 days x $0.07 per lb.=$705.60)
(12 cows x $40 savings in vet and breeding costs=$480.00)

•Fewer involuntary culls
(3 less heat-stress culls x $800=2,400)

•Total reduction in heat stress losses
$4,986

The figures shown above are estimates of the reduction in heat stress costs that might be possible with good ventilation and good management.

They do not represent the total cost of heat stress, which would be greater. As mentioned before, these costs can vary a lot from farm to farm and from year to year.

How much these costs can be reduced will also vary a lot depending in part upon feeding and herd management practices and upon the effectiveness of the ventilation system. Thus, it is important to use your own figures when making estimates for your farm.

These figures are intended to serve as a guide to help you estimate your costs and how much you can afford to spend to provide your cows more comfort during the hot mucky days of summer.

Penn State Extension Dairy Agents Keep Learning Too

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Most Penn State Extension agents have the opportunity to continually learn about the subject matter they bring to the farm.

Last week, dairy extension agents from around the state attended a day-long workshop and seminar on barn ventilation held at the Lebanon Expo Center in Lebanon.

The subject has been at the forefront of concern for dairy farmers, especially because of documented and testimonial increases in milk production and herd health associated with properly ventilated barns.

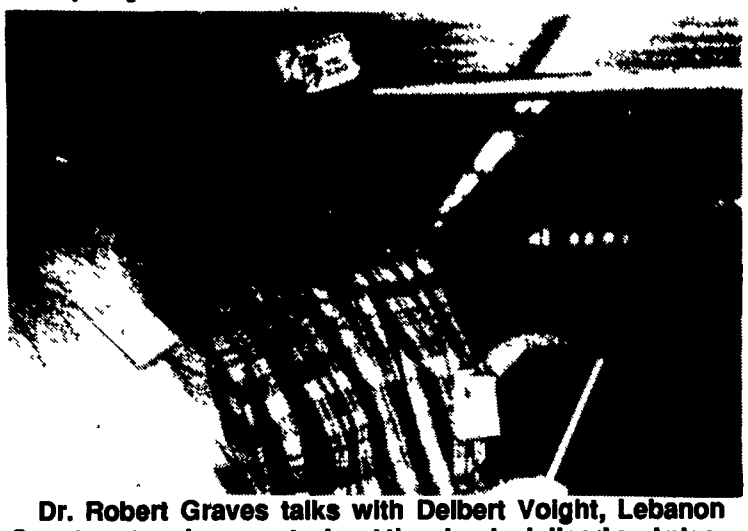
A number of older, bank barns have been retrofitted with ventilation systems in an attempt to increase the air exchange rate for better animal health and performance.

However, many have questions about ventilation because, within the dairy industry, it is a relatively new subject.

As a result of the research conducted by land grant universities such as Penn State, and because of expressed interest in the subject, Penn State Extension offered the in-service course for its agents.

The seminar was held much in the same way as the educational events agents regularly conduct; however, it was much more technical, providing a complete introduction into the details needed to be

(Turn to Page A30)



Dr. Robert Graves talks with Delbert Voight, Lebanon County extension agent, about the simple doll rod and plastic strip wind speed indicator. It serves to function much like a wind sock at an airport, though by walking around the barn with this simple tool, areas of dead air flow can be detected and corrected.

To establish enough area of opening to create tunnel ventilation, this window was enlarged at the Nelson Martin dairy farm. At the other end of the barn are four 48-inch fans.

Dairy Agents Keep Learning

understood in order to advise and help plan for a retrofitted or anticipated ventilation system.

In addition to better preparing the agents for the questions they may get during the course of their work, attendance at such seminars is considered favorable within the Extension promotion system.

Though perhaps not regularly considered, dairy agents compete for advance promotions, and are rewarded based on performance of service to the community, continuing education to support that service, and other considerations.

The purpose for such incentives is to be able to provide the quality of service that the program was intended to provide in exchange for favorable consideration from the state.

However, agents generally attend out of a desire to be of help in spreading beneficial information.

The ventilation course was taught by Robert Graves, of the Penn State Agricultural and Biological Engineering Department; Dan McFarland, a Penn State multicounty agricultural engineer; Eileen Wheeler, also with the engineering department; and John Tyson, a new Erie County extension agent who has worked for Graves in the engineering department.

Graves provided an introduction to ventilation and the physical principals of air flow. McFarland talked about inlets, their construction, and air distribution.

Wheeler discussed fans, what they do, how to plan for them, what makes a good fan setup for performance and efficiency, and how to understand the industry and academic research-based ratings on fans.

John Tyson gave a presentation on tunnel ventilation and how to calculate the fan power and opening sizes needed to create a desired flow. It was explained that air flow, though invisible, acts in a fluid manner, such as water.

A number of forces can act on air to create movement. The sun's energy more or less charges air particles, causing them to expand as molecular electromagnetic forces increase with the absorption of energy from the sun.

Thermal air movements are caused by sunlight striking a surface that reflects light, causing the air to be exposed to more energy from the sun, relative to nearby places where sunlight is absorbed, such as areas with dense plants.

The differences in energy are reflected in different measurements of temperature. The more energized air, which is the higher temperature air, becomes lighter than surrounding air and rises.

There are also mechanical forces which act upon air, such as the rotation of the earth, wave action, and the surface structures (air moves faster above trees than through them.)

And fans.

When considering the flow of air through a barn, the goal should be to create an environment most favorable for the animal. Through research, that rate of flow has been fairly well established, depending on the livestock being considered.

The core of the issue is being able to remove undesirable moisture, gases, heat, and potentially disease-bearing exhaled air, and to provide the animal with the proper humidity, cooling and fresh air to gain maximum performance.

Several other things must be considered: The dimensions and layout of the barn, the prevailing winds, the behavior of the animal (how it lies, stands, etc.), internal structures, and three seasons, in this temperate climate.

The three seasons experienced by Pennsylvania dairy farmers calls for a complete ventilation system to address the three different general conditions. In the winter, the goal is to remove exhaled air and moisture while retaining enough heat to keep the environment within the comfort level of the animal. In these cases, a negative pressure system is called for.

A negative pressure system creates a slight vacuum in the building by having the force of the exhaust fans stronger than what the air inlets will allow to enter without resistance.

In order to create an equal amount of ventilation to the animals, a series of inlet portals are constructed around the walls of the building of a size and height that corresponds to the desired air flow and fan strength.

Because they most favor the cow, conditions in the spring and fall don't requirer the negative pressure system of winter. In spring and fall, either a positive/negative pressure system - which is basically fans blowing air in, while other fans exhaust air - or natural ventilation, perhaps assisted with fans, could be an example of how to achieve a peak environment for cow performance under conditions that can vary during the day.

In the summer, many have turned to tunnel ventilation, which is more of a factor of moving air to speed by which it cools the cow by removing heat. A properly designed tunnel ventilation system moves air through the barn at a speed of about 220 feet per minute, which has been described as the pace of a brisk walk.

After spending the morning and early afternoon in the classroom going over the concepts and principles of ventilation, the group of dairy agents went to the Nelson Martin dairy farm near Prescott.

At the Martin farm, the group broke down into four subgroups and reviewed the ventilation sys-

quality of the product, and both parties share in the standards of living that result from that commerce.

Further, this position also depends on the belief that it is desirable to have local farms and that fresh drinking milk and other easily perishable milk fluids are best produced locally, and that local producers are best to supply local demand.

Arguments against the premium are that it interferes with interstate trade (some claim it violates federal interstate trade law), and hurts those attempting to sell milk at a lower price, and/or buy it at a lower price.

The theme here is that it goes against the nature of free market capitalism.

It also depends on a belief that depending on local Pennsylvanians to produce local drinking milk is obsolete.

Of course, there are other twists and other viewpoints.

As an agency, the PMMB considers proposals, such as this 40-cent reduction request, when petitioned by a sufficient number of producers or interests in the dairy industry.

While the MACMMA initially petitioned for the reduction in premium, it was joined in the petition by the Pennsylvania Milk Dealers Association.

During the May 25 hearing, held in the cafeteria of the state Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg, several organizations had representatives testify on the issue.

Support for the two groups' proposal was about split, and that was mixed.

Testifying for the reduction in premium were representatives from Milk Marketing Inc. (MMI) — which is currently the third largest milk marketing cooperative in the nation in terms of members, fourth in terms of milk shipped — and member cooperative Atlantic Dairy Cooperative (ADC).

ADC is also a member of the MACMMA, which brought the petition.

MACMMA is a marketing agency created in 1993 in the common interest of several dairy farmer cooperatives to collect and distribute over-order premiums paid through Federal Order 4, which includes some of the 80 cent PMMB Class I over-premium paid out.

Other members of MACMMA are Atlantic Processing Inc., the Coastal Division of Mid-American Dairymen, the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative, and the Eastern Region of Milk Marketing Inc.

Dennis Schad, manager of regulatory affairs for ADC, testified on behalf of the cooperative and other members of MACMMA, except the Eastern Region of Milk Marketing Inc.

In his testimony, he called for a PMMB over-order Class I premium decrease to 50 cents per hundredweight.

To the point, justification was based on the fact that the premium creates a better paying market for Class I milk in Pennsylvania than surrounding states.

According to Schad, the result of this has been out-of-state, unpriced milk is being sold by out-of-state dealers for Class I use to Pennsylvania retailers because it is cheaper.

In other words, while the PMMB has been acting to help boost the income of Pennsylvania's dairy producers to stay the decline of the family dairy farm, retailers have shown no loyalty and have sold out local producers by buying large volumes of out-of-state milk to sell as drinking milk.

Schad testified that decreasing the over-order premium would actually help Pennsylvania dairymen retake their local markets because contracts for Class I milk sales hinge on very small differences in price.

According to Schad, "Recently, Class I sales in northeastern Pennsylvania were lost by an in-state dairy to a processor in Massachusetts.

"Formerly, the dairy business (in general) was characterized by small farms selling milk and related dairy products in local markets. Currently, the structure of the dairy business is one where large regional food firms carry dairy products within a line of other food products.

"The marketing environment of the processor segment is characterized as high volume, low margin and highly competitive," he said. "Milk is viewed as a commodity by retailers and sales contracts are very price sensitive.

"As the example illustrates, dairy farmers and processors in Pennsylvania face competition for in-state Class I sales from long distances."

Schad said that because premiums in surrounding states are based on supply and demand conditions, the premiums are below 80 cents, and therefore, Pennsylvania's PMMB premium should follow suit.

He also blamed the premium as being partly responsible for continued increases in the state's milk production, which coupled with flat retail sales has oversupplied the Class I market to the point that almost all additonal marketings are being made at the Class III level.

Class III is the lowest-priced level of milk use, and when that portion of total milk sales increases, the total value of the milk produced decreases, thereby making dairying even less profitable.

(However, it should be noted that for several years most dairy producers have been told that the future belongs to farms with more than 500-cow herds, and many dairy publications have been stressing expansions as tools for survival.)

Schad said he was ultimately speaking on behalf of 5,425 Pennsylvania dairy producers who are members of the cooperatives on whose behalf he testified.

Also testifying for a reduction to 50 cents per hundredweight was the Pennsylvania State Grange.

Robert Gable, a dairy farmer from Perry County, with 350 acres and 100 dairy cattle, testified on behalf of the Grange that the premium attracts the marketing of milk from out-of-state producers thereby pressuring the market for Pennsylvania producers.

In its news release, the Grange states it "... has 33,000 members across the state ...," though it does not detail the number of member-dairy producers.

Those testifying in support of maintaining the premium at 80 cents were representatives from the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, state Rep.Sheila Miller, R-Berks County, and state Rep. Sandra Major, whose constituency district includes all of Wyoming and Sullivan, and part of Susquehanna counties.

Rep.s Miller and Major co-signed a letter to Leon Wilkinson, chairman of the now two-person PMMB (nominations for a third board member were recently sought).

In the letter, they state, "Today you are hearing testimony from farmers and related organizations who will provide more details on the cost of milk production than we, as legislators, can share with you.

"However, as members of the House Agriculture and Rural

Chester County Dairy Milk Lines

Walter Wurster Extension Dairy Agent

On May 18th, Chester County DHIA members voted to permanently merge with PA DHIA by a vote of 127 for and 3 against. The merger took effect on June 1, 1995. There will be no change in the service and reports that members receive, and the current technicians will continue to serve their present farmers.

The Board of Directors voted to keep the majority of money remaining in the treasury in a trust fund within PA DHIA with the interest being used to finance the annual meetings. These funds continue to remain separate from PA DHIA and belong to Chester County DHIA members. The balance of the money, $2,400, will be paid as a bonus to the technicians in recognition of their long and excellent service to their farmers. The bonus will be based on a percent of their 1994 salary and their years of service.

The treasurer's books were recently audited and all accounts were in order. It was decided to plan the annual meeting for December 7th or 8th in 1995 so that there could be more time between other dairy banquets, such as Holstein and 4-H.

The Board of Directors will continue to meet four times per year. They will continue to act as the contact between members and PA DHIA to resolve problems, discuss programs, review new technician applications, recruit new members, and generally oversee the entire DHIA operation in the county. They will also plan and conduct the annual meeting and act as an advisory committee for Extension programs. Members should contact one of the follow directors if they have any suggestions to improve the program or if any problems arise.

Milk Quality

Do you wonder how well the quality of milk you produce is preserved from the farm to the consumer? In 1989, milk dealers made a major commitment to extend the shelf life of fluid milk beyond 7 to 10 days. A recent survey showed that 90% of the milk sampled will keep for 14 days after processing at 45°F, which is 2 days past the open date on the container.

To achieve this longer shelf life, processing plants changed processing procedures and sanitation practices. Enough water is used the day following cleaning and just before processing to heat all milk contact surfaces to at least 170°F. Farmers have also made a significant contribution to this increased quality by lowering the PI count on raw milk from the farm.

The most important factor, however, is for retailers to keep the milk cold in their dairy cases. It should be kept at 40°F for best results. Farmers should check on their local stores and encourage the managers to properly refrigerate their dairy products so that consumers can continue to receive high quality fluid milk.

New Jersey Dairy Farmers: Milk A Cow By Hand

SYRACUSE, NY—When was the last time you actually milked a cow by hand? Do you still have the "golden touch?" The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC) has an exciting opportunity for you to show your talents.

To celebrate June Dairy Month, join ADADC at the second annual Dairy Day with the New Jersey Cardinals on Sunday, June 25, at Skylands Park in Augusta, New Jersey, at 1:00 p.m.

If at least five dairy farmers volunteer, a pre-game milking competition will be held against the New Jersey Cardinals, the 1994 New York-Penn League Champions. In order for the event to be a success ADADC needs your support.

If you're an enthusiastic farmer who is interested in milking your way to stardom in front of 3,000 fans, call Susan Cavallaro at (201) 539-4670 to join the team. Space is limited, so call today!

In addition, a limited number of complimentary general admission tickets are available to local ADADC members and their families. From all attending members, a lucky winner will be selected to throw out the traditional first pitch with ADADC's mascot, Suzy Cow. Please call Stephanie Alleyne at (201) 539-4670 to reserve tickets. Also, post-game, join Welsh Farms and Keebler cookies for an old-fashioned milk and cookies party!

ADADC is an advertising and promotion organization representing dairy farmers in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

American Dairy Assn. Provides Milk Truck Driver Training

SYRACUSE, NY—In an effort to create a better image for dairy products, the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC) has developed a "Driver Training Awareness Program." The program was created to enhance milk truck drivers' skills in handling dairy products and overall performance.

Welsh Farms in Long Valley, New Jersey, was the first processor to participate in the program. Held in Neptune, New Jersey, the workshop was attended by Welsh Farms' home-delivery and wholesale drivers. The program covered product knowledge, personal appearance, proper care of company equipment and customer interaction. In addition, an overview of the dairy industry was provided to new drivers.

The responsibilities of milk truck drivers range from administration to shelf space control. With such a variety of duties, the drivers' performance and handling techniques only improve with additional knowledge and training, resulting in a better image for dairy products.

According to ADADC Processor Relations Manager, Bob Axelrad, "This is the first of several programs that will be available to processors in our New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania area. I am excited about the positive feedback from the participants and look forward to providing this much-needed information to other processors."

He Farms, She Teaches Ag

A spring-fed pond with bass, bluegills, and waterfowl is located in a partially wooded glen off the side of the farm lane.

The pasture stretches from the barn down around tilled fields and along the flood plain of the stream. With a mature treeline and groves along the stream, the landscape almost seems unchanged from pre-urban sprawl.

The farm is most notable for using intensive grazing and three-times daily milking as a way to become more profitable.

The Williams began intensive grazing four years ago. The 66 milking cows and 56 heifers are in the pasture day and night from the beginning of April until after Thanksgiving.

"I'd recommend it to anybody," David said. "One of the things I like best about it is not needing to run that gutter cleaner every day. Our electric bill drops $100 a month when the cows are out."

The 50-acre grazing pasture is managed. Soil tests are taken. The pasture is fertilized and limed.

"We pay as much attention to pasture as we do to raising other crops. We don't just open the gate and let the cows wander around," David said.

The herd is limited to a grazing area of one-fourth to one-half acre paddocks. If the summer is dry, a bigger area is used.

"Otherwise, it would be like serving Thanksgiving turkey where everyone picks out what he likes and lets the rest set. When you limit the area, the herd eats it clean," David said.

David continues to feed total mixed rations for grain intake, but, he said, "I'd like to cut out all grains and feed straight grasses, but I hesitate to take the chance because I have fixed monthly expenses."

The Williams are often questioned about intensive grazing, but find many farmers are wary of making changes.

"They argue that I have natural pasture, but I tell them, you don't have corn fields in the spring. You make them. It's the same with pasture. We had a 12-acre section that had been installed with tile and drainage that we turned back into pasture.

"Although grazing isn't for everyone, it fits the situation. Some farmers have those big silos they want to keep using."

The Williams have two silos. Since switching to intensive grazine, one silo is no longer used.

"I can't feed enough off it keep it from spoiling," David said. Plastic wrap is used for round hay bales.

A full-time hired woman helps with the milking. She milks morning and afternoon. David takes care of the night milking in the tie-stall barn.

"We started milking three times a day on January 2. I like it, but it's a lot of labor," David said.

The herd's average is 26,800 pounds milk with 846 pounds protein, and 895 pounds butterfat.

The herd is mixed, but the Williams are working toward registration by identifying grades to register after three generations.

"It takes extra work, but I'm learning to keep a loaded camera at all times and snap a photo before letting the calves out of their hutches," Christine said.

David, Christine, Erin, Lauren, and Matthew enjoy the nature surrounding the spring-fed pond. The expanse of grazing land in the background had at one time been tiled and drained for traditional crop production. The Williams reverted it to a managed pasture.

Christine also feeds the calves kept in the hutches and bank barn.

Last year, the Williams installed cow mattresses.

"It's wonderful for cow comfort," Christine said. "The cows lay down fast after milking and it is easier on first calf heifers."

In fact, since installing the mattresses the Williams haven't lost any 2-year-olds and haven't had any problem with stepped on teats. The cows' knees and hocks do not swell.

David said that he has strong feelings about low milk prices.

"I got more for milk when I started farming than I do now. Everyone else gets pay raises but the farmer needs to get more efficient.

"It doesn't do any good to complain to neighbors or fellow dairy farmers, but I haven't found the right person yet to complain to," David said of his frustration in dealing with spiraling costs and lower prices.

But the couple strives to not waste energy debating unfair prices and concentrate instead on using available technology to make the farm more profitable.

David was not raised on a farm. His love affair with farming began in his high school years when he worked on his uncle's dairy farm.

He and Christine became acquainted through 4-H and Grange activities. She graduated from Penn State and taught for several years before the couple married.

By this time, David had purchased his own herd of dairy cows and rented a farm. In 1987, the couple purchased their present farm.

Dairy Agents Keep Learning

tems installed there.

Martin has a 64 tiestall barn that is outfitted with a system for all three seasons and ventilation strategies.

In designing a ventilation system, it was explained that a series of "stages" should be designed. These stages are in fact overlapping ventilation plans, each using a different set of fans and air inlets.

At the Martin barn, Nelson opened up one end of the barn by removing some block from around four 48-inch fans at the other end.

He also has some fans mounted in the side wall away from the silos to provide the energy for the negative pressure system for winter.

In order to provide for a range of conditions, the whole system is based on seven stages of design, ranging from the winter system to the tunnel ventilation.

Controls are located along a wall with temperature and pressure sensors located at areas most favorable to getting readings that measure best the conditions the cow is experiencing.

Because it was retrofitted with ventilation systems, Martin's setup also demonstrated the techniques which can be used to pull fresh air from the hay mow area in older barns.

McFarland explained the control settings and the triggers and how the system was coordinated to achieve different levels, or stages of air flow.

Eileen Wheeler demonstrated wind measuring devices and discussed the effects of structure on the flow of air, how to detect dead air spots, and how to fine tune a barn to get the desired effect.

Graves showed the ventilation system built into the barn's second floor hay storage area and discussed why materials were used, spacing, etc.

Tyson discussed the tunnel ventilation system and how to calculate the size and placement of the openings and fans, surface area and speed, along with some things to consider in retrofitting.

During the entire time, agents were encouraged to ask questions, and did. On top of the intensive instruction, each agent was provided with a packet of reference materials.

These types of in-service educational professional seminars are designed so most agents can be expected to be able to aid farmers in search of the latest information.

For more information on ventilation systems, contact a local dairy agent.

In addition to cows, a few sheep graze on the pasture.

"Christine inherited the sheep when we purchased the farm," David said. "At first, she got a few dollars when she had them sheared, but now she needs to pay to have them sheared."

Christine has continued teaching throughout the birth of their three children. A full-time nanny comes to the farm each school day to watch the children while Christine is working. She leaves at 7 a.m. to reach the school and often needs to work evenings with the adult farmer program and FFA activities with the students.

Both parents take turns chauffeuring their oldest daughter Erin, who is Lebanon County's Li'l Miss Dairy Miss, to dairy promotions. (See story on page B-10.)

Combining full-time teaching, farming, and raising a family isn't always easy.

Christine said, "Like everyone else, we have our ups and downs and wish we had more time to spend together as a family. We treasure family time. When we have it, we make sure it is as quality as possible."

The combination of responsibilities, Christine believes, gives her perspective. She said, "I like coming home to the farm. Farm responsibilities keep me in tune to what's going on so that I can use it in the classroom and with my adult work."

PMMB To Consider Request

Affairs Committee, we are gravely concerned about the future of our dairy industry.

"As we all know, the average age of individuals willing to devote their lives to the demands of dairy farming is growing older. Young people are not entering this career field due to cost and time commitment for marginal returns on their investments in many cases.

"In order to maintain a stable supply of milk for Pennsylvania consumers, and in order to stabilize the shrinking number of farmers in the dairy industry, we ask you to provide the price support that will enable them to continue production and cover their ever rising costs."

According to a news release, Mel Eckhaus, dairy specialist for the PFB, testified that the PFB not only supports maintaining the current 80-cents per cwt., but wouldn't mind seeing it go higher.

"In fact, if it were not for so much discussion regarding market conditions, it would be very easy to support a price higher than the 80 cents, given the cost/price squeeze dairy producers are currently under," he said in the news release.

"Beyond any shadow of doubt, this is the absolute worst time in the last five years to be considering a lowering of the over-order price," he said.

"It is absolutely clear that in the 12 months ending March 31, 1995, the average Pennsylvania dairy farm has experienced the lowest level of profit in many years."

According to Eckhaus, the margin of profit averaged 51 cents per hundredweight.

Eckhaus said that, considering additional costs for management and equity capital, USDA dairy assessments and a reasonable 3.5 percent profit, "It is no longer appropriate to speak of low profits, but rather high losses."

In response to the claim that out-of-state milk is diplacing Pennsylvania milk, Eckhaus said, "The position of Pennsylvania Farm Burueau is that market conditions are important."

However, he added that, "... in order to determine that (milk) prices should be reduced because of market conditions, we believe these conditions should be documented."

According to the PFB new release, "... the sales of Class I milk have not decreased significantly in Pennsylvania's six milk marketing areas. In two areas, fluid milk sales have increased by 1.3 percent and 3 percent, respectively.

"In the four areas where sales decreased, the largest amount was .8 percent."

The PFB stated that its organization represents 26,167 member families in 61 counties with about 44 percent of those being dairy farmers.

The state has an estimated 11,800 dairy farms.

Because membership in any of the organizations which submitted testimony is not exclusive to membership in another, it is possible and probable that some dairy farmers are being claimed to support both sides of the issue at the same time.

In the meantime, the final transcripts from the hearing have to be completed, and additional testimony compiled, and all reviewed by counsel. The PMMB is then expected to review the testimony and act accordingly.

The goal is to have the matter settled and ready to go into effect in July.

Liquid Fuels Tax Refund

The refund is not a gift to farmers, it is a matter of the state returning taxes paid in that were not owed.

To collect their money, farmers must make a claim every year.

With each claim must be either the actual receipts, copies of the receipts, or a statement from a fuel dealer showing the purchaser's name, the date, the number of gallons purchased and verification that the state tax was paid.

Until a claim is made for two consecutive years, the state will not automatically mail a claim form to a farmer who is owed money.

It is up to the farmer to seek out the claim form, which are available from the Board of Finance and Revenue, 500 C Finance Building, Harrisburg, 17120, or call (717) 787-6534.

The period for which taxes are refunded coincide with the state fiscal year, which runs from July 1 to June 30.

For those who have made claims for at least the past two years, forms are to be mailed out automatically on June 16.

If a claim form is not received within a reasonable time from June 16, or if it is a first-time claim, call Lynne Vergot, supervisor of the Board of Finance and Revenue at (717) 787-6534.

The forms also should be available through state legislator's district offices. Those offices should be listed in the local telephone directory.

Dairy Lifestyle Improves With Grazing, Season Production

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

AIRVILLE (York Co.)—Keeping up with six miles of fence could be considered almost a full-time job by many farmers.

But for the Melvin and Barbara Marks family, the six miles of fencing crisscrossing their Airville farm has lessened the time crunch on their dairy operation.

That fencing encloses and separates their 50 tillable acres into 22 paddocks, each one and one-half acres, used for intensive rotational grazing of their 40-head dairy herd.

From early April through late fall, the Marks' registered Holsteins live outside on grass, returning to the barn only for their twice-daily milkings. The benefits, say the couple, have been many.

"I can't remember the last cystic ovary we had in a cow. We've had one twisted stomach in the last three years, and I haven't trimmed a hoof in four years," said Melvin Marks.

Forage harvest equipment use is also way down, along with diesel fuel bills. Manure hauling time has been pared. And moving the cows several times daily offers some quality family time for Mel, Barb, and their three daughters.

"We wouldn't go back to dairying the other way," said Barb. "He has more time with the family, rather than being out planting corn and baling until nine or ten o'clock at night. When you're a young mother with young children, that's important."

Now the Markses, recently named 1995 Outstanding Young Cooperator winning couple for Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative, are nudging their herd toward seasonal production, to gain even greater herd efficiencies from intensive grazing.

Melvin Marks switched from field harvesting to herd harvesting of forages four years ago, in the spring of 1992. After hearing and reading about others successfully using intensive grazing techniques, he parked his tractors, tillage, and forage harvest equipment and began stringing fence.

"We had always let the dry cows have the run of the farm anyway over the winter," he said. "But when we first turned the milking herd out that first day, April 24, they didn't seem to know what to do."

An early spring had pushed the grass that first year and growth was already higher than was desirable. Some was wasted during the season because the herd could never catch up with the lushness, pushed by plentiful summer rains.

Marks ultimately rotary mowed some paddocks to maintain the grazing rotation schedule. But it was a learning season, one on which the couple has since built and fine-tuned with each successive year.

Thirty of the 50 acres of paddocks are pastured the most intensively, planted to a combination of alfalfa and orchardgrass. The other 20 acres, sown with Ladino clover, perennial ryegrass and birdsfoot trefoil, are grazed if the summer becomes hot and dry and baled for hay if not needed for pasturing. A parcel of rented ground nearby provides additional haylage and forage crops, plus added disposal acreage for winter's lagoon-held manure.

"The cows love the alfalfa and orchardgrass, but don't seem to like the clover mix quite as well," said Marks of his pasture mixes.

Milking cows go onto grass just as early as it starts to grow, usually about April 1. During periods of fastest growth, the paddocks may be split into halves or thirds, and grazed portions of the day. Grazing rate averages to about one paddock per day over the season, Marks figures, unless midsummer weather turns extremely hot and droughty.

Water is available in all paddocks through a system of hoses and moveable plastic barrels. Additional watering troughs are on this summer's things-to-do list.

While Marks purchased a flexible tine harrow to drag the pastures and break up manure clumps, he rarely uses it. Grass-diet manure remains loose and usually disappears into the soil after a single soaking rainfall.

"It's almost amazing, but the bacteria and the earthworms in the ground really help break down the manure. We've always tried to avoid harsh chemicals and fertilizers as much as possible, even before grazing. You can hardly walk through the pastures in the morning without stepping on earthworms, plus the various bugs and birds also help with breakdown," said Marks.

Manure consistency is a gauge Marks uses to regulate his feeding of other components. Both dry hay of good quality and a rougher, higher-fiber type are available to cows daily, along with the grass. High-moisture corn and a soybean meal round out the milking herd diet. In-barn feed consumption drops to less than half when grass becomes the diet mainstay.

"The cows generally get grain and hay around lunchtime and they'll come in from the pastures, if they want it, and then go right back out again. It almost seems that as soon as they consume some fiber, they'll want more grass," Barb said.

"We haven't force fed any minerals in two years," Marks said about the feeding program. Several free choice minerals are offered, and the cows seem to naturally

(Turn to Page B5)

Melvin and Barbara Marks are the 1995 Young Cooperator Couple winner for Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative. Four years ago, the Markses switched to intensive-grazing dairying and are now adjusting their herd toward a seasonal production pattern. They find they now have more time for family and community activities with their daughters, from left, Erin, Nicole, and Trisha.

HOMESTEAD NOTES

As Melvin Marks swung aside a single strand of fence to a new paddock, the family's milking herd followed right on his heels. Waiting in the wings to clean up leftovers in the previous location were the bred heifers and dry cows. A system of moveable plastic tubs and hoses make water available to all the Marks' 22 paddocks.

All models, except the 42-inch wide cutter feature oval blade pans, and the 60 and 72-inch wide models have an "in-line" shear bolt with ball bearing protection that can be replaced in a snap. An optional slip clutch is available.

The second reason for the Squealers popularity is price. Select any of 5 models, 42 to 84-inches wide, and compare prices with the competition. With a true price/quality comparison, it's easy to see why Squealers mow down the competition.

Dairy Lifestyle Improves

consume those minerals needed in their systems.

"Cows are a lot smarter than we think," Marks said. "People say cows can't decide what they need; but as they move along the different paddocks, they go for different minerals."

He credits the cows' apparent ability to balance their intake and needs with the lessened reproductive and dietary-related problems of the herd.

While rotational grazing offers many pluses, Marks pinpoints one minus in a heavy grass diet—bloat. Bloat has not generally been a problem, although the Markses did lose a few animals to it last summer. A grazing consultant who works with their herd program reported bloat problems fairly widespread last year, projecting a combination of particular weather and growing conditions as the probable reason.

"When free-choice minerals are fed, you usually have no bloat problems, especially if sodium bentonite, which buffers bloating, is always available," said Marks.

Dry cows and heifers follow the milking herd through the paddocks, cleaning up remaining grass and uneaten hay. Even young heifers are being graze-fed.

"It's working well and really cuts down on the hay and grain consumption," Marks said.

Last season, the couple raised 14 young heifers for six months on a timothy/clover paddock, sectioned down to small grazing areas. While hay and grain were available, the young stock seemed to prefer grass.

"They are some of the nicest heifers we've ever raised," said the dairyman, figuring an added bonus of considerable savings on heifer feed purchases.

Based on the efficiencies and herd health with intensive spring grazing use, the Markses are working their herd into seasonal production. This spring was their first attempt at seasonal milking, while cows and heifers were held for breeding last June. After dropping to a low of about 15 head in late winter, Marks began calving spring fresheners about mid-March.

A few of those March fresheners are already being bred back, a little early, toward spring of 1996. Marks also finds that having his cows on grass tends to bring them back into reproductive cycling more quickly and regularly.

"We don't ever expect to have the whole herd dry at any point, though we did sell quite a few that freshened last fall," he said. By mid-May, 39 of the herd's 45 head of cows were in the milking string, about two dozen of them spring fresheners.

Marks' goal is to milk 70 to 80 spring fresheners over summers, then cut back to about 30 during winter months. With a 40-stall barn, paring herd numbers eliminates switching cows for milking during wintry weather.

Along with spring freshening, the Markses hope to adapt a New Zealand-style calf-raising program which gets baby calves out on grass. Milk is fed to about two months via a barrel-type feeder with self-feed, nursing nipples.

"But we need at least 8 or 10 baby calves to make that efficient. So far this year we've had only three heifers from all our calvings," said Marks, frustrated over this season's low heifer-to-bull calf ratio.

Marks is also considering a return to 3x milking as extra, but only if extra, part-time labor is available to handle the third daily milking. During their first year of rotational grazing, the Markses ran a 3x schedule, tallying a herd average of over 21,000 pounds of milk. But herd average became less important to them than time efficiencies and cost savings.

Now the herd average tops 17,000 pounds, but costs have been cut way back.

"You can make a high herd average on grazing, but it entails more time, more field harvesting, more feed mixing, more inputs. If you can cut your inputs in half, and only reduce your production by a quarter, you're still ahead on the bottom line," said Marks.

A lower herd average from grass-dairying has also been a positive tradeoff for a better quality of life, say Mel and Barb Marks. Their three daughters, Erin, 11, Nicole, 9, and Trisha, 7, love to help move the cows through the paddocks and still thrill to the birth of a baby calf out in the pastures. All three girls are in 4-H, Trisha in her first, Cloverbud season.

Family walks together, getting to know the cows and heifers as they move the cows, and more time to participate in the girls softball activities are just some of the "quality time" benefits the Markses cite as bonuses from their shift from traditional stored feeding to grazing.

There's also more time for leadership activities in school and community. Marks serves on the Red Lion Area School Board and Barb has been president of the Clearview Elementary Parent-Teacher Organization. Both take a vital interest in their daughters' school activities. They also serve as leaders for the Milk and Money 4-H Dairy Club of southern York County and enjoy showing their cattle.

Their farming innovations toward greater profitability and community leadership were part of the consideration given when the Markses were selected Young Cooperators for the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative, Inc., Reston, Va.

Barb and Mel have been involved with the Young Cooperator activities for the past few years. As a young cooperator couple, they will represent the dairy coop's young members during board meetings, participate in various local cooperative activities, and represent Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers at upcoming National Institute of Cooperative Education and National Milk Producers Federation events.

In a study by Barbara Ainsworth and associates in 1993, exertion values were assigned to garden activities of all kinds. These values from 1 to 7 were based on the ratio of the associated metabolic rate for the specific activity divided by the resting metabolic rate. The study shows that an individual expends just as much energy performing some gardening taskes as they would participating in recommended exercise routines.

Watering your lawn or garden, standing or walking in the garden provides only slightly more physical activity as lying quietly, reclining and sleeping. Applying fertilizer, seeding a lawn or mowing your lawn with a riding mower has a value of 2.5. This would be equivalent to sitting, knitting or sewing. Trimming shrubs or trees with power tools has a value of 3.5 which is equivalent to the exercise gained by walking at a 3.0 mile per hour level at a moderate pace on a firm surface.

Using a walk-behind mower, weeding, cultivating, planting trees or trimming trees manually exerts 4.5 times as much as resting. These activities exert as much energy as bicycling at 10 mph, water aerobics, fishing, cleaning or golf.

The most strenuous gardening activities rated at 5 to 6 include chopping wood, mowing lawns with a reel-type mower, rototilling a garden, light shoveling, hauling branches or laying sod. These activities are equivalent to swimming, general aerobics, jogging or basketball.

Human-powered, push-reel mowers are making a remarkable comeback (over 200,000 units sold last year) with health reasons accounting for over 22% of the purchases. Dr. Bob Goldman, president for the National Academy of Sports Medicine in 1993 suggested that reel-type mowers provide a great cardiovascular workout. They're particularly good at strengthening the upper body. Studies have shown that pushing a reel mower burns up to 480 calories an hour-the equivalent of tennis, downhill skiing and low-impact aerobics.

Gardening activities not only help physically, but also provide therapeutic benefits to all ages. Start your gardening exercises like children would by digging and pushing sand or soil with hand tools. Individuals with alzheimer's disease, or those expericiencing memory loss should choose a simple, repetitive task. Outdoors, this would include watering with a watering can, removing withered blooms, harvesting vegetables or putting mulch around the base of plants.

In summary, gardening even the easiest of activities can be twice as hard in mid-summer. Please consult with your physician if you find any activities cause you pain or discomfort.

Cream Of The Crop

Thanks to our readers who have again flooded our mailbox with recipes that showcase the great taste of milk and other dairy products.

Recipes from the Cow Mania Drawing will be featured in every June issue of Lancaster Farming.

The recipes appear in no particular order. We consider each recipe a "Cream of the Crop" recipe because it has been tried, tested, and loved by the contributor.

Recipes included in today's issue do not mean that the contributor did or did not win one of the giveaway prizes. The names selected in a drawing will appear in the June 24 issue.

Thanks to the many who make these issues a highly prized possession by our readers. Many write to say how much they enjoy the comments and pictures that accompany the recipes.

2 eggs
½ cup sour cream
½ teaspoon almond or lemon extract
¾ cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¾ teaspoon vanilla extract
24 vanilla wafers

Place liners in 24 cupcake tins. Place vanilla wafer in bottom of each paper liner. Beat other ingredients until light and fluffy, until lumps are gone. Put large tablespoon of cream mixture over cookie. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes. Will only be slightly browned, but should be puffy. Cool completely and refrigerate. To serve, top with cherry pie filling.

I am 22 years old. I am single and live with my parents and my five brothers and one sister. I have a seasonal job at a local chocolate factory. I attend classes at the Penn State University Worthington Campus. In the future, I hope to work with and around animals. I also have a pony and help care for a few beef cattle.

I enjoy the outdoors, gardening, baking, reading, and spending time with my family. I like to listen to country music, travel, go horseback riding, and country dancing.

This recipe is one of the family's favorite. Its rich, smooth, and a creamy taste enjoyed by all. The small serving size makes it perfect to serve to guests at parties and during holidays.

Featured Recipe

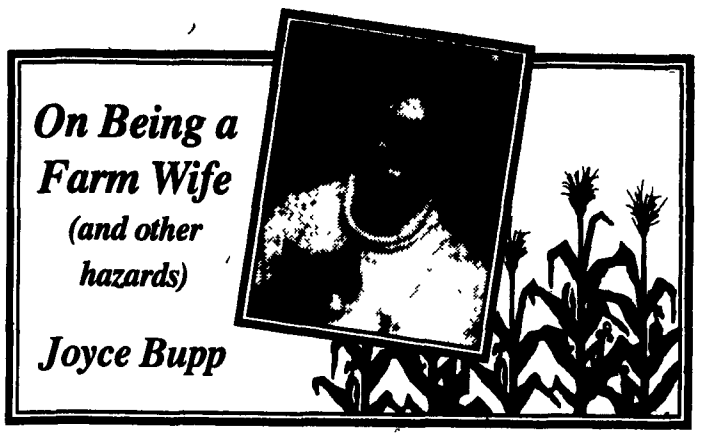
Peach And Nectarine Cobbler

Crust:
2½ cups unbleached all-purpose flour
3 tablespoons sugar
1 cup (2 sticks) unsalted butter, chilled and cut in small pieces
4 tablespoons ice water
2 large egg yolks, lightly beaten

Filling:
14 nectarines
14 peaches
8 tablespoons vanilla sugar (see Note)
4 tablespoons (½ stick) butter

Preheat the oven to 375°F. Butter two 8- or 10-inch baking dishes. Combine the flour and sugar in the bowl of a food processor. All ingredients should be cold. Add the chilled butter in pieces and process for approximately 10 seconds, or until mixture resembles coarse meal. (To mix by hand, combine the dry ingredients in large mixing bowl. Using a pastry blender or two table knives, cut in the butter until the mixture resembles coarse meal.) While machine is running, add the ice water, a few drops at a time, along with the egg yolks, one at a time, through the feed tube, just until the dough holds together without being wet or sticky. Do not over-process; 30 seconds should be sufficient. Test the dough at this point by squeezing a small amount together. If it is too crumbly, add a bit more water. Divide the dough into two equal amounts. Place each on a piece of plastic wrap and press the dough into a flat circle with your fists. (This makes rolling easier than if the pastry is chilled as a ball.) Wrap and chill well, at least 1 hour. Wash and dry the fruit. Cut into wedges and evenly distribute between the two prepared baking dishes. Sprinkle the fruit with 3 tablespoons of the vanilla sugar per dish and dot with the butter, 2 tablespoons per dish. Roll out each piece of dough large enough to cover the top of each baking dish. Place the dough over the fruit and pinch around the edge of the baking dish to seal. Trim the excess dough. Make 4 or 5 slits in the dough to allow steam to escape and divide the remaining sugar, sprinkling it over the top of each crust. Bake for 45 minutes until the crust in golden brown. Serve warm or cooled. Yield: Two 8- or 10-inch cobblers.

NOTE: To make vanilla sugar, store 6 to 8 fresh vanilla beans in a covered quart jar filled with white sugar. Replenish the sugar as you use it.



Just the sound warned of an animal in distress.

From the end of the dairy barn where the box stalls are located came the long, low bovine bawl of pain. Though we were halfway through the evening's milking and several dozen yards down through the dairy barn, the problem was evident without looking. But we had just milked her boxstall partner a half hour before and the bawling heifer hadn't appeared ready to calve.

For several days, we'd kept her in a boxstall where we could watch for calving signs. A couple of times, we'd found her stretched on her side as if in labor, but they had all been false alarms.

This did not sound like a false alarm.

Leaving my milking partner, Angie, to handle the milker equipment alone, I checked the heifer. When she had finally decided to calve, she'd been quick about it. The calf's nose and front feet had already cleared the birth canal and it's tongue hung limply to the side. But the heifer was not pushing and this delivery seemed to be somewhat on hold.

A half-born calf can be lost pretty quickly; it was time to lend this mother-to-be a hand.

Over the loud hum of the milking equipment, I shouted to Angie that I was going for help. While I've delivered one or two calves by myself in emergencies, these babies usually take more pulling strength than I can muster.

No trucks around. No tractors around. No one in the machinery shop.

Great. At this point, there was no time to wait for someone to show up.

One of the most useful calf-delivery tools is baling twine...I fastened pieces of clean twine above each soft, sticky hoof, tied their other ends to the gate between the two stalls (luckily the heifer was standing at the perfect spot), leaned one shoulder into the gate and tried to get my hands between the calf's head and the outer edge of the birth canal to help stretch it a bit.

That just wasn't enough leverage. A plea for help brought Angie running from halfway down through the barn; milking would have to go on hold. She backed up against the gate, applying the needed steady, gentle pull to help deliver the calf, while I worked to free its head.

Within about thirty seconds, the calf's white head slipped free. While Angie continued her steady, firm, reverse-push against the gate, I grabbed the calf's front legs for added leverage.

Moments more, and we had its shoulders free. Big calf. Bigger than expected for this average-sized heifer.

With a few more teamwork-tugs, the calf's hips cleared the birth passage and the large, white calf fell to the clean sawdust bedding. After cleaning birth fluids and mucous from its nose, and brushing the bobbing head free of sawdust, I dragged the calf front to the heifer for her to sniff and lick clean.

This heifer had no great maternal instincts. She made a few perfunctory sniffs of the calf, then buried her muzzle in the feed trough that had been made available with the opening of the gate to the adjoining pen. An hour later, her muzzle was still buried in silage.

Maternity is hard work; a mother must replenish her energy.

The evening was airy and warm, and Mother Nature soon dried off our newborn to a soft, silky white. Since "Mom" didn't seem too interested in her new responsibility, the calf's critical first meal of rich colostrum came out of the freezer, selected reserves from mature cows we always keep on hand.

Anyone interested in midwifery services, let us know.

In The Pantry...

Stock your pantry with a variety of canned beans; cans of tuna, salmon, sardines; soups and broths; roasted red peppers; pastas; lentils and split peas; quick-cooking rice and barley, as well as instant potato flakes; handy seasoned rice and pasta mixes. Also, jarred gravy, canned broth or bouillon cubes; croutons and taco shells. Don't overlook condiments such as mustards, chutneys, pickles, relishes and sauces (including all the Asian-inspired, from the basic soy to hoisin, oyster and beyond), and a wide variety of spices, particularly the seasoning blends.

In The Refrigerator...

Keep handy a supply of chopped garlic and ginger, fresh pasta, bags of ready-to-serve salads, precut coleslaw and precut vegetables. Stock a wide variety of cheeses, from processed American for instant sauces to classic Cheddar and Swiss; try new flavored varieties, like seasoned fetas and peppered Monterey Jack. Remember eggs or egg substitutes. Also salad dressings, horseradish, cottage cheese and yogurt.

In Your Freezer...

Load up your freezer with bags of mixed veggies cut in chunks (some preseasoned); cooked, cleaned shrimp; precut boneless chicken and turkey, thinly sliced beef for quick stir-frys, sautees and grilling (naturally all properly wrapped for freezing). Also pizza bread shells, flour tortillas and egg roll wrappers.

It's that time again...

Dairy Month Celebrates Best

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)—June Dairy Month, designated in 1937, is a time for the dairy industry to celebrate its accomplishments and to promote the contributions of dairy products to the American diet and lifestyle.

With the heightened attention on dairy products, the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program has planned a variety of promotions in June to encourage consumers to buy real dairy products.

To kick-off the month-long celebration, more than three million Pennsylvania consumers will receive a free milk coupon in their Sunday newspapers on June 4. The coupon is part of a promotion developed by PDPP and the Davis Cookie Company, Rimersburg, maker of Archway Cookies.

The coupon, redeemed by the Davis Company, is worth up to ninety cents toward the purchase of milk when the consumer buys any two packages of Archway cookies. The campaign combines Pennsylvania milk with Pennsylvania cookies. It is also designed to support the "Milk. Help Yourself" advertising campaign premise that consumers choose milk more often than other beverages when snacking on cookies.

To attract attention to fluid milk in the dairy case, PDPP sent point-of-sale materials to fluid milk processors and grocery stores. The materials, which include milk pricing static clings and a milk and cookies point-of-sale kit, reinforce the Dairy Month message while the consumer is in the store. By placing point-of-sale materials where milk is purchased, consumers receive that extra reminder to buy dairy products and, therefore, increase sales.

Media outlets provide dairy promotion numerous opportunities to reach consumers. With the assistance of Dairy Management Inc., PDPP sent food editors a Dairy Month publicity kit. The kit features dairy recipes by celebritites like Willard Scott, Barbara Streisand and Joe Theisman, color slides of the recipes, dairy facts and a copy of the new Dairy Month logo.

Another highly valued outlet for promotion is radio. PDPP will visit radio stations throughout the state to promote activities and the dairy industry. Public service announcements which encourage consumers to eat real dairy products also will air on radio stations for the month of June.

Dairy Day promotions in Pittsburgh and Altoona remain the most popular events during June. The special events feature local dairies and their products. Thanks to the generosity of the dairies, all the proceeds of the events will benefit local charities.

PDPP and Mid East UDIA again will sponsor "Dairy Day at the Zoo" on Saturday, June 3 from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m. at the Pittsburgh Zoo. For a $2 donation, patrons will be able to sample all the dairy products they can eat. Fike's, Turner's, Marburger's, and Reinhold's dairies, Kraft Cheese, and Taylor Milk will supply treats for approximately 2,000 visitors.

While sampling ice cream, milk, cheese, yogurt and novelties, zoo visitors will be entertained by the band Woodsmoke, be able to meet the Pirate Parrot and other characters and cheer for their favorite team during the ice cream eating contest. Donations will continue to support the children's zoo, a recently opened addition to the growing Pittsburgh Zoo.

The second annual "Lakemont Park Dairy Day" will be held on Saturday, June 24 from noon until 5 p.m. at Lakemont Park, Altoona. A $2 donation will benefit the Blair County Big Brothers/Big Sisters chapter.

The Pirate Parrot, Clarabelle the Clown, a magician and puppet show are just a few of the many activities scheduled throughout the day. Truly a family event, "Lakemont Park Dairy Day" will feature ice cream, milk and novelties from Galliker's Dairy, Hershey's Ice Cream and Sani-Dairy.

QUESTION — Brenda Scott, Bellefonte, wants a recipe for a basting sauce to baste a 225-pound roasting pig as it's being cooked in a large pig cooker.

QUESTION — Janet Rutz, Carlisle, would like recipes to use dried cranberry beans.

QUESTION — Frank T. Cat of Millerstown, would like a recipe for English toffee cookies like those sold by Weis Markets. The cookies are great tasting and don't crumble for children.

ANSWER — A Potter County reader wanted a recipe for sweet gherkin pickles. Thanks to Judith Zimmerman, Lebanon, for sending her recipe.

Sweet Gherkins

7 pounds (1½ -3-inch) cucumbers
½ cup salt
8 cups sugar
6 cups vinegar
¾ teaspoon turmeric
2 teaspoons celery seed
2 teaspoons pickling spice
8 (1-inch) pieces stick cinnamon

First morning: Wash cucumbers; cover with boiling water. That evening, drain and cover again with boiling water.

Second morning: Drain and cover with boiling water. That evening, drain. Add salt and cover with boiling water.

Third day: Drain, prick cucumbers with fork. Make syrup of 2½ cups sugar and 2½ cups vinegar. Add turmeric and spices (not cinnamon). Heat to boiling and pour over cucumbers. Will only be partly covered.

That evening, drain syrup. Add 2 cups sugar, 2 cups vinegar, and cinnamon. Bring to a boil and pour over pickles.

Fourth day: Drain syrup and add 2 cups sugar and 1 cup vinegar to syrup. Boil and pour over pickles. That evening, drain syrup and add 1½ cups sugar and ½ cup vinegar. Boil. Pack pickles into jars and cover with boiling syrup. Can 5 minutes in boiling water bath. Makes 9-10 pints.

ANSWER — Dorothy Carvell wanted a recipe for wild rice soup. Thanks to Josephine Matenus for sending a recipe.

Minnesota Wild Rice Soup

2 tablespoons butter
½ cup finely chopped onion
¼ cup finely chopped celery
1½ cups coarsely sliced fresh mushrooms
¼ cup all-purpose flour
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon freshly ground white pepper
2 cups beef stock
1 cup half and half
1 cup cooked wild rice
⅛ teaspoon bitters
1 tablespoon minced fresh chervil

In deep saucepan, melt the butter over medium heat. Add onions, celery, and carrot, and saute for three minutes or until the onion is wilted, lower the heat to medium-low, add the mushrooms, and cook 3 to 4 minutes longer. Add flour, salt, and pepper. Cook until the mixture bubbles and begins to turn golden. Add the stock and half and half. Cook and whisk until thick and smooth. Add the wild rice, bitters, and chervil and heat thoroughly. Makes 4-6 servings.

At first taste, it is hard to identify the subtle nutlike flavor of wild rice in this satisfying soup. The carrots and onions give it color and the mushrooms (use more if possible) play nicely off the firm texture of the rice.

DUMP CAKE

1 stick butter

Melt in 13X9X2 pan in oven.

Dump 1 large can crushed pineapple with juice included on melted butter.

Put ½ package of yellow cake mix on top of pineapple.

Add 1 can of cherry pie filling.

Add remaining package of cake mix.

Cover this with 1 more stick of butter dotted over the top of cake mix.

Bake at 375 degrees for 45 minutes.

I like this recipe because it's very delicious and quick to make if you need something to serve at the last minute. It's great served hot right from the oven with vanilla ice cream and milk.

We have three children, Renae 13, Ryan 11, and Reuben 8, and milk cows on a farm in Atglen. We enjoy being outdoors and having a big garden. I enjoy cooking, baking, sewing, and doing counted cross stitch. I enjoy reading recipes and trying ones that I think our family would like.

Gene and Susan Hess add to milking parlor memories on their Marietta farm.

I enjoy serving meals to my husband Gene. He also treats me from time to time with a breakfast or supper which I do enjoy!

We both love farming here on Gene's home farm. I grew up on the mission field of Papua, New Guinea. So when I met Gene I knew nothing about farm life. He was more than happy to let me help and learn. I was given my engagement ring on top of our 60-foot Harvestore silo. A real "high" time in our lives.

Now, a few years later, we are still adding to our milking parlor memories. We milk 65 Holsteins three times a day. The cows are doing very well and we thank the Lord for His goodness to us in farming.

On The Farm With Lebanon County Li'l Dairy Miss

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Although Erin Williams is only eight years old, she already has a job.

Her job as Lebanon County's Li'l Dairy Miss requires her to promote milk. That means handing out cheese and milk samples to people in shopping malls, fairs, and other places where large crowds gather.

When she is on the job, Erin wears a tiara, which is commonly called a crown, and a banner with the words Lebanon County Li'l Dairy Miss.

Shoppers often ask questions and Erin is quick to encourage them to drink milk every day for healthy bones and teeth.

This year, Erin and her parents, Christine and David Williams, held a milk promotion on their 135-acre farm for two school classes.

Erin led the farm tour and told the students about the animals on the farm and how they are fed. She fed the calves and the students were allowed to pet the calves, cats, and Erin's rabbit. The children peeped into the milk tank to see how much milk 66 cows are capable of producing.

Erin's dad took the students on a hay ride.

Before the students came to the farm, Erin helped her mom bake cupcakes in cones and decorate them like cow faces. The children enjoyed eating the cow cupcakes for a snack.

Sometimes, Erin needs to miss school to work at her job. The school allows this because Erin's job is an educational event. Her job has helped her become very articulate. That means Erin is able to speak clearly and concisely to people. Her job has made her knowledgeable about dairy products and the difference between lowfat, nofat, and regular milk and milk products.

Although Erin enjoys her job, she doesn't like to miss school.

"I like school. Science and math are my favorite subjects and I like reading books and doing stuff with other kids," Erin said.

Erin's mother teaches agriculture at Tulpuhocken High School. Her mother was a former alternate dairy princess for Berks County.

"That made me want to become the Li'l Dairy Miss. I'd like to become a dairy princess when I'm old enough," Erin said.

She will need to wait many years to become dairy princess because that requires contestants to be 16 years old or older.

Erin is in second grade at Jonestown Elementary School.

Lebanon County Li'l Dairy Miss Erin Williams compiled a big scrapbook with pictures of her helping dairy princesses

Five-year-old Lauren hopes someday to be a Li'l Dairy Miss.

Although Erin is busy with duties as Li'l Dairy Miss, she still enjoys playing just like other children her age.

The Williams family take a walk on the lane that leads toward their home.

Three-year-old Matthew spends much of his time loading hay with his equipment.

MEETS THE CHALLENGE

Consuming Thoughts

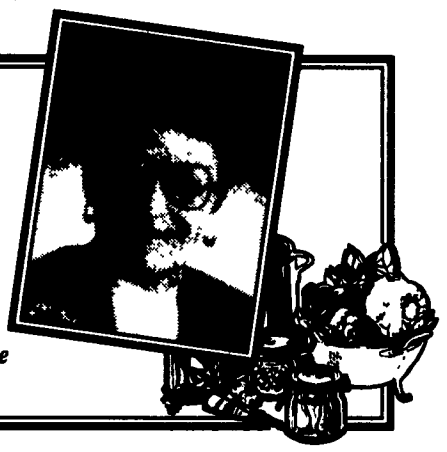
Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.



Encouraged by the new food guidelines depicted in the food pyramid, many Americans are trying to eat more fruits and vegetables.

One of the first fruits to appear in local markets is the luscious strawberry. With more than seven varieties grown locally, the harvest season is generally late May through late June. However, Tristar and Tribute are day-neutral strawberries. They are available mid-June and again from August through the first hard frost. Tribute is one week later than Tristar.

Locally grown fruit has some big advantages in cost, flavor and accessibility. If you decide to go pick your own strawberries, you'll want to select the best variety for freezing and choose the best variety for eating fresh and/or making jams and jellies by asking the grower. Many pick-your-own farms have the Penn State brochure called "Enjoy Nature's Fresh Strawberries," available for the customer. This leaflet has the most popular Pennsylvania strawberry varieties listed, along with information on the harvest season, berry characteristics and uses.

Whether you pick your own or purchase picked berries, you'll want to select fully ripe and appropriate colored strawberries with intact green caps. White or pale pink berries do not become sweeter after they are picked and should not be purchased. Strawberries with bruises or without caps do not store well and should not be purchased.

Twelve very large berries or 36 small berries equals a pint. An average of 1 pound of strawberries makes 1 pint of frozen berries. One pint yields about 3¼ cups whole, 2¼ cups sliced, or 1⅔ cups pureed berries.

Always remove bruised, rotted, or molded berries before storing. Strawberries should be refrigerated immediately after purchasing. Never rinse the berries or remove the caps before storing. Removing the cap early can reduce flavor, texture, and nutrient quality. Strawberries can only be stored for a couple days in the refrigerator. If held longer than this, a grey mold may develop. For optimal refrigeration, place berries no more than two berries deep in a shallow container or tray covered with waxed paper or plastic wrap.

When ready to use the berries remove caps and gently wash berries with cool water just prior to using.

One cup of unsweetened strawberries provides 150% of the USDA of vitamin C and has only 45 calories. Strawberries are high in potassium (247 mg), low in sodium (2 mg) and have 1.3-3.0 grams of dietary fiber.

Fresh, frozen or sliced they make just the right topping for cereal, waffles, pancakes or French toast. Forget the syrup and orange juice for a while. Also try stirring finely chopped strawberries into softened cream cheese and spread on bagels or toast.

Make a refreshing strawberry cooler by combining equal amounts of sliced strawberries, yogurt, and milk in a blender. Sweeten with honey to taste.

Dip whole, rinsed strawberries into melted semi-sweet chocolate, then place on waxed paper and chill until chocolate hardens. Or try making strawberry butter by beating together ½ cup pureed strawberries, 1 tablespoon honey and ½ cup butter or margarine. Spread on toast, muffins, pancakes, rolls, broiled chicken, or fish. Strawberries can also be used in many desserts, salads, sauces, and drinks, or just eaten plain.

For additional information on freezing strawberries, contact your local Penn State Cooperative Extension Office and ask for the "Let's Preserve Strawberries" fact sheet.

Quality Starts On The Farm

COLUMBUS, Ohio — When it comes to food the United States has not only one of the most plentiful food supplies in the world, but one of the safest.

Perhaps the safest product of them all is milk. Consumers can be assured that milk is safe, because it's the most monitored product in the entire food supply, according to the National Institutes of Health.

The milk safety inspection system involves a series of tests by federal and state inspectors and by the dairy industry itself to confirm the safety of all milk and dairy products. From the cow to your store, at least 10 checks, tests and inspections are made to ensure that consumers have only wholesome, healthy and safe products from which to select at their local supermarket dairy case.

Quality Starts On The Farm

The continuing high quality of milk starts on the dairy farm. Even beyond natural pride, producers have a real incentive to produce the safest milk possible. If they don't, they lose money. Dairy farmers work closely with their herd veterinarian to practice sound disease prevention, conduct careful medical treatment and maintain timely accurate records. State and federal regulations require on-farm cleanliness and equipment sanitation. Many dairy producers even do their own on-farm testing to further ensure milk quality.

Milk delivered to the dairy plant is tested before it is unloaded. Any load that does not pass inspection is dumped without ever entering the plant. Recent studies have shown that well over 99 percent of all milk delivered by farmers passes inspection.

FDA Supervision

Two branches of the Federal Food and Drug Administration (FDA) work to ensure the safety of dairy foods. The Milk Safety Branch enforces the Pasteurized Milk Ordinance, the basic federal reference for all milk-testing programs. The FDA Center for Veterinary Medicine (CVM) reviews all animal medications to be used on milk-producing cows. Test medications must meet stringent CVM standards regarding effectiveness and safety before being approved. FDA doesn't just rest there. Above and beyond all other tests, last year alone FDA also made 5,500 random tests of milk samples inspected by state regulators to ensure testing accuracy. In addition, FDA distributed 5,000 medication-specific test kits to state regulators for their use.

Additional Protection

In addition to federal testing, each of the 50 states, as well as the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico, carries out extensive dairy-safe and milk-quality tests. Each state also tests pasteurized milk and milk products. Dairy farms and dairy plants handling fluid milk production are covered by the National Conference on Interstate Milk Shipments, an organization of federal and state health officials and regulators, state agricultural regulators and representatives of the dairy industry. This group make recommendations on strengthening the Pasteurized Milk Ordinance and coordinates voluntary efforts of local, state and federal regulatory agencies as they oversee and ensure the production, processing and handling of quality milk and dairy products.

Finished Milk Testing

As milk is processed, pasteurized and homogenized, laboratory checks are made to evaluate the color, odor, appearance, temperature and taste of milk. Butterfat content is analyzed for accuracy and tests are conducted to ensure proper pasteurization.

Next, a laboratory runs additional tests to ensure safety. Shelf-like testing is conducted to ensure that the code life is correctly stated. Routine tests are also made to ensure package integrity and weight, and to offer a final check for the presence of animal medication residues or added water.

Finally, there's the ultimate test. Consumer satisfaction. Each day, millions of Americans give their stamp of approval to wholesome, healthy and safe milk.

To learn more about the extra steps your dairy is taking to ensure your safety and to complete your satisfaction with dairy products, call Mid East United Dairy Industry Association at 614/890-1800.

We have two active daugthers. Elisabeth, just turned 4, and Emily will be 2 in July. They both enjoy farm life, especially playing all around the barnyard and taking care of their many pets.

Betsy and Emily would like to say, "hi," and "I love you," to Grandma and Grandpa Mahler (Walter and Marjorie Mahler of Somerset County).

We live on a dairy farm not far from Somerset. We have approximately 60 dairy cows and raise all our steers to be sold for beef.

Kurt and I have been married for almost 10 years and I'm still learning what it takes to be a good farm wife. Luckily, I have lots of good teachers to show me the ropes.

We have one son, Daniel, who is 5. He enjoys running around on the farm and playing with the barn cats.

CREAM OF BROCCOLI SOUP

1 cup water
10-ounce package broccoli or fresh head broccoli
3 cups milk
8-ounces processed cheese, cubed
⅓ cup flour
½ cup shredded carrots
Croutons for garnish

In large saucepan, cook broccoli in the water. Do not drain. Put milk, cheese cubes, and flour into blended container. Cover and puree. Add mixture to broccoli. Cook, stirring frequently over medium heat until hot and mixture thickens. Add carrots. Serve garnished with croutons. (Hint: I like to cook in the microwave so I don't have to be concerned about scorching. You still need to stir frequently when microwaving as the mixture thickens.

I am the mother of four children from 13 to 4 years old. We all enjoy this recipe very much. My husband Ken and I both grew up on farms, but, we do not farm now.

The children have market lambs with the Lancaster County 4-H Woolies Club. Ken is president of Lancaster Level-Flo, Inc., a manufacturer of silo filling systems and accessories.

I help at the children's schools, am active in our church, and a board member of the S. June Smith Center Foundation.

My family lives on Vista Grande Farm. My husband, Lowell, works full time for Dave Bitler, milking cows, doing farm and field work, works on farm machinery and runs the manure truck. Our son Brandon helped last summer by feeding calves and other odd jobs. This summer, he'll be busy working to pay for his own calf to show in 4-H. I used to help milk with Dave's wife, Phoebe, but now I work at Weaver's Hardware.

I also clean Dave and Phoebe's church once a week plus babysit the neighbor's children whenever needed. Lowell's interests are dairy farming, racing, and football. He hopes to have his own dairy farm someday, but for right now, we are all happy where we are.

Brandon likes to play the drums, football, reading, listening to the radio and watching television. I like crafts, cooking, and baking, cats, collecting cows (figurines) reading, and country music.

CHEDDAR CHEESE CHOWDER

2 cups water
2 cups cubed potatoes
¼ cup onion, diced
½ cup chopped or grated carrots
½ cup celery, diced
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup of either ham, bacon, tuna, salmon, sausage, or hamburger)
2 cups grated cheese

White Sauce

¼ cup butter
¼ cup flour
2 cups milk

Cook together first 7 ingredients until vegetables are tender. Don't drain. Meanwhile, fry meat if using hamburger, sausage, or bacon. Drain. In saucepan melt butter and stir in flour. Cook together and then add milk and cook until thick. Stir this mixture, meat, and cheese into cooked vegetables. heat. Serve piping hot. Serves 6.

Variation: if using bacon, omit ¼ cup butter in white sauce. Use 2 tablespoons bacon drippings and 2 tablespoons butter instead. This gives the chowder an excellent flavor. This hearty soup is delicious on a cold winter day! We especially like it made with bacon.

My husband Dale 27, and I, Janet 20, live in the northern part of Northumberland County. Here we farm over 200 acres and milk over 40 cows. We raise most of our calves and feed a few steers on the side.

I enjoy helping in the barn morning and evening. I also enjoy gardening, cooking, and sewing. Even though farm life can be hectic, Dale and I love living here!

MUSHROOM HEAVEN

8 ounces fresh mushrooms, chop slightly
4 tablespoons butter
2 medium onions, chopped

Saute until onion is soft. Add:

8 ounces cream cheese
2-3 tablespoons milk

Cook on very low heat until cream cheese is melted. Can add a little more milk to use as a dip. Serve on toast points.

I am a widow of a farmer. My children are Kara, 14, and Sasha, almost 11. I've gone back to school to make a living for me and my children. Tom died two years ago from cancer. In my heart I believe it was from early exposure to insecticides and herbicides.

SPANISH CREAM RECIPE

4 cups milk
¾ cup sugar
1 pint whipping cream
12 maraschino cherries, halved
2 ¼ packages Knox gelatine
4 whole eggs, separated
1 cup fresh grated coconut

Mix milk and gelatine, heat very slowly in a 2-quart saucepan. Heat until very hot, but do not boil. Beat egg yokes and sugar until a ribbon color, then add to hot milk and gelatine mix, again, very slowly. Beat egg white and stir in while still warm. Place in 2-quart serving dish and place in refrigerator to cool. It will set up slowly. When set, spread whipped cream on top. To add flair, spread grated coconut on top and then halves of maraschino cherries.

This is a delightful dessert dish that will catch everyone's fancy. From my earliest days, I enjoyed my mother's cooking. This dessert was her favorite to make for her family and entertaining company. It was a pretty dish and a delight to her family and guests, because that was when she added the grated coconut and maraschino cherries.

I grew up in a family operated bakery, Henry's Homemade Cakes and Pies, where I worked until my parents' retirement in 1968 from Lancaster Central and Southern Markets.

My grandmother was a good cook, who passed it on to my mother, who was an inspiration. I became eager to please my family and guests and still make Spanish Cream for all. It is my favorite as I cook for family and friends.

½ cup sugar

Combine graham cracker crumbs, 3 tablespoons sugar, and ⅓ cup melted butter and line 13X9 inch pan with it. Press firmly to bottom. Put cream cheese in bowl and gradually add 1 cup sugar. Add eggs, one at a time, mixing well after each one. Add 2 teaspoons vanilla and pour into prepared pan. Bake at 300 degrees for 1 hour. Cool 5 minutes. Combine 3 cups sour cream, 1 teaspoon vanilla and ½ cup sugar, and pour over cheesecake and bake 5 more minutes. Cool and serve with favorite topping.

RASPBERRY DOWN

2 cups boiling water
2 cups ice with water
2 boxes sugar-free raspberry Jell-O
2 cups plain yogurt

In a large mixing bowl, dissolve Jell-O in boiling water. Add cold water to two cups ice and stir into Jell-O until mixture begins to thicken. Remove any unmelted ice. Stir in yogurt, beating with a wire whisk until mixture is smooth and creamy. Pour into a 1½ quart bowl or mold and refrigerate until firm. Can make up to two days in advance.

Variations: Substitute any flavor of Jell-O that you like. Swirl Jam or whipped cream through mixture after adding yogurt, Line mold with ladyfingers spread with jam before adding Jell-O mixture. (Soak the ladyfingers first in a flavored liqueur if you like). Thinly slice lemons with rinds on, sprinkle with sugar and line mold with lemon rounds before filling with a lemon Jell-O mixture. Decorate a strawberry Jell-O mixture with strawberries and whipped cream. Use mixture as a pie filling with a graham cracker crust.

This quick and inexpensive dish can be dressed up for an elegant company dessert; nobody will ever guess it has such simple ingredients because it looks and tastes like a creamy, subtly tart mousse that takes much more preparation than it does. It's good for people on a sugar-free diet since it satisfies the craving for something sweet without sugar. It's a year-round favorite at our house.

We live on 65 acres in the orchard country of western New York. I used to be involved in dairying in Delaware and enjoy reading "Lancaster Farming" to keep up with farming trends and prices in the area.

I also enjoy "On Being a Farm Wife," by Joyce Bupp and the recipes in B section. The recipes are a great combination of old standards and new recipes that are fast to prepare or use ingredients from all over the world that are now so easily available. I love to cook by "making it up" as I go along, and the only cookbook I ever use is my big, fat scrapbook of recipes clipped over the years from B section. It's nice to see the same names of contributors and requestors over and over. Hey, Betty Light — you're a terrific cook — your shoo-fly bread invention is great! How are you with a chunky salsa that's not too runny?

GRAHAM DESSERT

½ cup milk
1 cup chocolate chips
30 marshmallows

Pour half on bottom layers of crackers. Put cracker crumbs on top, then the remaining chocolate mixture. Garnish top with a few cracker crumbs. Serve cold with whipped cream.

We have been subscribers to the "Lancaster Farming" for many years. My two daughters, Michelle and Betty, look forward to the "Home On The Range" section every week to try new recipes.

June is a very special month with lots of new recipes and learning about the many families who subscribe.

EASY MAC AND CHEESE

2 cups uncooked macaroni
3½ cups milk
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon salt
2½ cups shredded cheese
Paprika

In greased 2-quart baking dish, stir together uncooked macaroni, milk, Worcestershire sauce, salt, and 1½ cups cheese until well blended. Cover tightly with foil. Bake 50 minutes. Uncover, top with remaining 1 cup cheese. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake 10 minutes more. Let stand 10 minutes before serving.

I live with my husband and two daughters, Alexa, 3, and Lacey, 21 months, in a home we rent on my parents' 225-acre dairy farm. My girls love the farm life and enjoy their farm pets, a donkey, pony, baby chickens, pig, and several cats and dogs.

My life is filled just trying to keep up to the girls as they grow and learn new things every day. When my dad receives his "Lancaster Farming," I reach for the recipe section. I love reading the question and answer columns and trying new recipes.

I recently purchased a sewing machine and am trying to teach myself to sew. My husband and I also enjoy making crafts such as woodworking projects and crocheting and cross stitching. We're never without a project in the works!

QUESTION — Marian Mosemann, Summit Hill, would like paper puzzles that were sometimes given away by the John Deere tractor franchises. The puzzles were made either out of thin cardboard or thick paper. The puzzle pieces were packaged inside a letter-sized envelope with instructions to solve the puzzle printed on the outside of the envelope.

QUESTION — Marian Mosemann, Summit Hill, would like to know where to purchase gift boxes for jellies and breads. Candy boxes are too small.

ANSWER — Betty Bixler, 2710 Maytown Rd., Marietta, Pa. 17547 subscribes to "Country Woman," but did not receive the Nov.-Dec. 1994 issue. The company is sold out. Betty is collecting the issues, and offered to pay the cost of the magazine and postage to someone who no longer wants their copy. Thanks to Florence Schlicher, Zionsville, who wrote that she has the magazine and will send it to her.

ANSWER — Tiffany Marino, Ephrata, wanted to know how to remove paint from fabric. Thanks to a reader who wrote that a stain eraser by Helmac works great to remove paint, correction fluid, and much more. She used it on clothes that were washed before the stain was removed and it works wonders. The stain eraser comes in a pen-like tube and is sold by Ebersol's Fabrics, 558 Gibbons Rd., Bird-in-Hand, Pa. 17505.

ANSWER — Linda Miller wanted to know how to raise thick stalks of rhubarb. Thanks to Lowell Pepple, Orrtown; and Karen Kinnane, Shartlesville; and Catherine Parrish, for sending tips.

Lime in the fall and in early March before rhubarb comes up. A high analysis fertilizer (19-19-19) is good to put an application on top of the ground.

Rhubarb plants should be divided every 4 to 5 years otherwise the stalks become very thin. Divide and fertilize heavily with horse and cow manure.

Catherine writes that she puts rabbit manure over the stalks in August or September, and the rhubarb is beautiful and thick.

ANSWER — Anna Grace Moore, Cochranville, wanted to know how to make crafts with Christmas or birthday cards. Thanks to Karen Kinnane, Shartlesville, for writing that the cards make great gift cards for packages.

- Open card, cut apart the four parts with scissors.
- Put together the front of card and the all white section from the back.
- Cut through both layers around design with pinking shears.
- Punch two tiny holes near top or on right side. Thread thin, coordinating ribbon through holes and make a neat bow on picture side.

Use the remaining parts of cards for scratch paper and notes to friends who are interested in ecology.

ANSWER — A Lehighton subscriber has an appliance called Merit Quik Chef Fast Grille with the card and plug with it. She wanted to know where she could purchase a plug or have the address of the company that makes the grill so that she could purchase some instructions? Thanks to Pat Birley, New Park, who writes that the address for the company to replace parts is Appliance Service Center, 140 Thomas St., Newark, N.J. 07114.

ANSWER — Marian Mosemann, Summit Hill, wanted a wire jig that can be used for making patterns in any shape and size by bending the wire. Thanks to George Ueltzen, Saylorsburg, who writes that the jigs are sold at Wrought Iron Handicrafts, Kosy Creations, 1620 38th St. N.W., Rochester, MN 55901 or call 1-800-456-7738.

Susan Iezzi, owner of Hillside Herb Farm, talks about the many uses of herbs. The luncheon will show both culinary and decorative uses. She will also show heirloom roses and arrange them with herbs for the table centerpieces, which will be given away as door prizes. Tickets for the luncheon must be purchased immediately.

Luncheon To Feature Heirloom Herbs And Roses

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — The fragrance of heirloom roses will mingle with the scents of herbal quiche and honey mint carrots at a luncheon planned by the Lebanon County Flower Club for June 13.

It promises to be a touch of Victorian living at its best. Served on china and crystal set on round tables with white linen tablecloths and pink napkins, the entire luncheon will feature items made with herbs.

Susan Iezzi, owner of Hillside Herb Farm, will talk about herbs and heirloom roses such as the Seven Sister Rose, which has seven different looks, the Fairy rose, tea rose and the damask rose.

"I've been fascinated with herbs ever since I was a 3-year-old working by the side of my grandmother," Iezzi said.

She's become adept at cooking and decorating with herbs. She and her husband Greg started Hillside Herb Farm in Newmanstown several years ago.

Iezzi teaches classes in herbal culinary uses and sells potted herbs, topiaries, books, wreaths, potpourris, and unique herbal gifts at the farm.

She also teaches classes on herbs at Harrisburg Area Community College, the Advantage Learning Center in Cleona, and at workshops and seminars.

The menu includes salad with mixed greens, edible flowers, herbal salad dressing, herbal quiche, honey mint carrots, rolls with herb butters, raspberry sherbet, and lemon poppyseed cake with mint.

The luncheon will be made by using Iezzi's own collection of herbal recipes. The centerpieces designed with herbs and roses will be given as door prizes.

"The purpose of the luncheon is to encourage people to use herbs instead of only looking," Iezzi said. "Many people think that raising herbs is just a fad. But herbs that have been used for thousands of years are making a comeback," she said.

The noon luncheon will be held at Quality Inn, 625 Quentin Rd., along Route 72 in Lebanon.

All are welcome to attend the luncheon and program. Tickets must be paid in advance and reservations should be made by June 5. Send your name, address, and $15 for each ticket to Lily Hershey, 325 Dairy Rd., Lebanon, Pa. 17042, (717) 274-1303.

Here is a recipe that will be served at the luncheon.

HONEY MINTED CARROTS

2 cups carrots, sliced ¼ -inch thick
½ cup water
¼ cup toasted sliced almonds
1 tablespoon fresh mint, chopped
1 tablespoon butter
½ teaspoon dry mustard
⅛ teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg
2 tablespoons honey

Steam carrots in water for 8-10 minutes. Drain, add remaining ingredients. Heat thoroughly before serving.

Yields 4 (½ cup) servings.

CONDUCTIVITY

The Metatron is now a tool for measuring milk conductivity to aid in diagnosing mammary disorders at an early stage. Such disorders are accompanied by changes in the concentration of electrolytes contained in milk such as sodium and chlorine due to injury of the cell walls in the mammary gland. This subsequent rise in salt content results in the increased electrical conductivity of milk.
Normal milk from cows generally has an electrical conductivity range of 4.5 to 5.5 mS/cm (mS percent). Conductivity measurement is a tool for use in the most modern dairy management. As such a tool, it can aid in detecting high stress to each cow, physical injury to the udder from "heat activity," and as an indicator for mastitis detection.

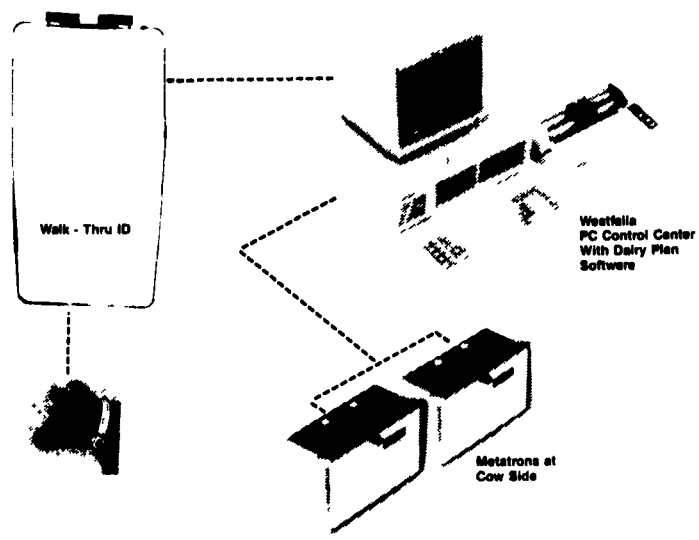
A. Guidelines for using conductivity:

1. Thirty to forty (30-40%) percent of cows with high conductivity,are due to physical injury from being in heat, especially on concrete.
2. Another 30-40 percent are from cows due to other high stress factors and injury or bruising to the udder.
3. Only about 20-30% of cows with a high conductivity will be positive to the California mastitis test - CMT.
4. The CMT is a subjective test that should be used to check each quarter of every high cow for a quick observation of SCC's as to the degree of concentration; ie. N-T-1-2-3. If the CMT test is positive, immediately pull a milk sample for culture and analysis to determine if an infective organism is present.
5. Approximately 60 percent of cows that have high SCC's due to some infective organism cure themselves with no therapeutic treatment within 7 to 10 days. These are generally from Intra-mammary infections of unknown origin and cause.

B. As a Management Tool

1. Each cow establishes and maintains her own data base and acts as her own control within Dairy Plan.
2. Metatrons with conductivity controls can be calibrated for a first alert flagging at cow side immediately after milking prior to the milking information transfer to Dairy Plan.
3. As a tool and management guide
   a. Milk cows thoroughly. Ensure they are completely milking out.
   b. Possibly inject with oxytocin half-way through each individual milking to ensure as complete a milk-out as possible for 2-3 days.
   c. Milk more times per day. Milk first and last at each milking; ie. 2 times to 4 times, 3 times to 6 times.
4. Therapy (Consult with your local veterinarian).
   Field reports indicate veterinarians are suggesting to inject cows with an anti-inflammatory for one to three days (or as necessary to limit swelling and maintain the mammary gland.
   a. Banamine - One to two injections ($10.00-$15.00 per dose)
   b. Dipyrone - Controls fever ($1.00 per dose)
   c. 4 Boluses Oral Aspirin - Over the counter ($1.50 per dose)
   d. Ketofin - Anti-inflammatory ($7.00 per dose)
   Anti-inflammatory drugs are "extra-label" and require veterinary approval for use. Most anti-inflammatories do not have known withholding/withdrawal times established.
   Some people have used "heat rubs" similar to those that athletes use on bruises to help control physical injuries and promote more rapid healing.
5. Summary
   With a law correlation between high conductivity and an IMI (intra-mammary infections), supportive therapy is a first step. This should be simultaneous with obtaining a milk sample for culture and sensitivity testing to identify the 20 to 25% of the cows that may be infected in order to treat with appropriate drugs. Proper complete milk out and reducing excessive stress on the cow is necessary for her own defense mechanism to reduce damage to the mammary gland.

WALK THRU AUTOMATIC ID SYSTEM



ID SYSTEM

Westfalia provides a unique Walk-Thru identification system, activated by a coded unit on the cow's comfort collar which indentifies the cow to a particular ID number. The Walk-Thru ID can be mounted at the entrance of the herringbone stall or a parallel stall to identify individual cows as they walk through.

MANAGEMENT BY EXCEPTION

Sophisticated technology that's simple to use, Metatron can be connected to the Westfalia PC Operating System with Dairy Plan for an integrated management program. The system will automatically notify the operator if a cow is off milk after cluster removal. Once a cow ID is entered, the Metatron control box automatically signals for observations of cow for heat, do not milk, or health code needs. This provides early and economical detection of possible health problems, allowing the operator to concentrate on individual cows.

Now available: Cow Pedometer activity units with complete cow identification and heat detection.

SCALLOPED POTATOES

Melt ½ cup butter
Add 1 teaspoon parsley flakes
¼ cup chopped onions
1 teaspoon dry or prepared mustard
¼ cup American or Velveeta cheese
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ cup milk
6 medium boiled potatoes

Dice potatoes and place in casserle. Pour sauce over and bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes.

I live on a dairy farm with 40 cows. We have about 70 chickens, 2 horses, 1 pony, and 7 mules. I do not have any brothers, but I have 2 sisters. Their names are Mary Elizabeth, age 7, and Rachel, age 5. I am the oldest of the children so I have to help with milking. I like living on a farm. I also like reading Lancaster Farming. The Kids' Korner is my favorite.

GELATIN SALAD

1 small can crushed pineapple
1 cup sugar
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
2 8 ounce packages cream cheese
1 small jar maraschino cherries chopped, drain but reserve juice
¼ cup chopped nuts
1 pint heavy whipping cream

Dissolve gelatin in ¼ cup reserved cherry juice. Bring sugar and pineapple to boil in small pan. Remove from heat. Add gelatin mixture. Set aside to cool. Cream cheese in large bowl and add cooled pineapple mixture. Mix well. Add nuts and cherries.

Whip cream until stiff and fold into cream cheese mixture. Pour into pan or mold and chill to set. This is a very good dessert and is nice for the summer as it doesn't have to be baked.

My husband and I both grew up on dairy farms. I milked with my dad until I moved away from home. We don't farm now, but we are blessed to live in farming country and our work often brings us in contact with farmers. We do excavating and hauling, and I drive dump truck and whatever else needs doing. I have loved to bake and cook since I was young and that still is one of my favorite things to do.

Even though we don't miss milking twice a day, we do miss the farming way of life.

OUR FAVORITE BARS

¾ cup butter
2 cups quick oats
1¼ cup flour
1 cup packed brown sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ teaspoon baking soda
⅓ cup dark corn syrup
½ cup peanut butter
1 cup chocolate chips

Melt butter. Then add remaining ingredients, except peanut butter and chocolate chips. Press into greased 9 by 13 pan. Bake at 375 degrees for 20-25 minutes or until light, golden brown. Do no overbake. Spoon peanut butter and chocolate chips over hot bars. When soft, spread to frost. I like to cut them when they're warm.

We live on a 100 acre farm and milk about 55 cows. We enjoy the farm very much. It's very interesting and never a dull moment. We have four children, three girls and one boy. Colleen is 6, Joel 3, and twin girls Judith and Jewel, 14 months-old. Having twins is lots of work but also lots of joys. I enjoy Lancaster Farming recipe section and look forward to the June recipes.

WORK WATCH

The Work Watch Is Back!

In the mid-1980's we sold hundreds of work watches to hard-working individuals like yourself who needed an accurate, dependable timepiece. They needed a watch that would withstand the dust, moisture, bumps, and temperatures encountered on the farm, in the orchard, and in the woods. Many who bought the work watch told us it was the best watch they had ever owned. Now, due to the past success and the present need, we are again offering the work watch through Lancaster Farming.

Our work watch has all the features needed to endure the punishment you will put it through. The WATER RESISTANT seal will protect your watch when you irrigate fields, fix broken water systems, get milk splashed on your arm while feeding calves, or walk the fence in the rain, to find out where your cattle are getting out. Being SHOCK RESISTANT, your work watch will continue to work when it is slapped by a cow's tail, a falling board, or the belt shield that your arm slams against when your wrench slips off the bolt. While your watch is scraped by branches, rubbed against walls, and knocked against machinery, the low profile, SCRATCH RESISTANT, glass crystal will resist the scratches and cracks that render watches unreadable. Finally, the BATTERY POWERED QUARTZ movement of your work watch is accurate to within 2 minutes per year, and does not need to be wound, meaning that your watch will be on time, all the time, without any effort on your part.

A final proof of the strength of this watch and of its suitability to your needs is the warranty. If your work watch stops running within THREE YEARS of the date of purchase, the manufacturer will repair or replace your watch at no charge. This is one of the longest warranties in the watch industry. The manufacturer's confidence in this watch means that you can have confidence in its durability and can know that this is the only work watch you will need to buy for the next three years.

Dairy Promotion Demands Sacrifice But Worth It, Says Melissa Bicksler

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

BERNVILLE (Berks Co.) — "Do you live in a castle?"

"Are you rich?"

These are a few of the questions that Melissa Bicksler answers during classroom presentations as the Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princess and as the former Berks County Dairy Princess.

Far weighty questions are asked when she promotes milk to consumers during supermarket and mall promotions.

Skeptical of the fat content, some consumers are downright nasty when offered cheese and milk punch. But Missy remains the "smiling princess" who is knowledgeable about low and non-fat dairy products and the importance of including them in a healthful diet.

The impertinence of some consumers doesn't faze Missy. She likes working with the public so much that she has changed her career path since becoming a dairy princess.

Previously she wanted to become a veterinarian because she liked giving shots and pills to the cows. But her reign showed her that working with people is much more suited to her temperament. Now she plans to become a nurse in order to give shots to people instead of animals.

"I won't be able to corner a person like I do when giving shots to a cow, but dealing with the public teaches me to take life as it comes," Missy said.

The 18-year-old will graduate from Tulpehocken High School this week, and will enter Reading Hospital School of Nursing in the fall.

That doesn't mean she plans to give up her ties to farming. She owns 17 of the 60-cow herd owned by her parents, Thomas and Cathy Bicksler.

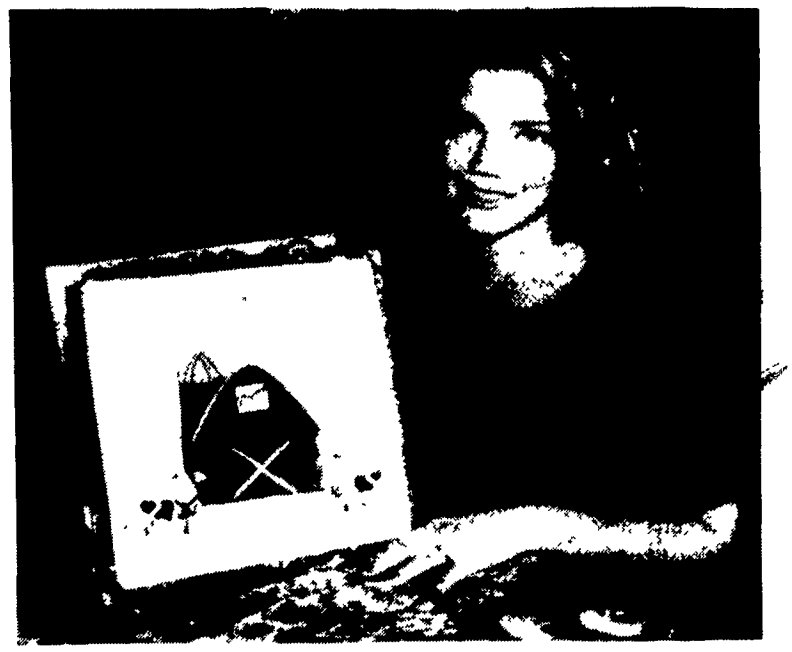
"I expect to stay in farming," she said.

Balancing a dual career won't be entirely new to Missy. This past year, she has had plenty of experience balancing school, dairy princess, farm, FFA, and 4-H responsibilities.

"I milk almost every night. It makes life challenging, but it teaches me to manage my time," she said.

Pennsylvania State Alternate Dairy Princess Melissa Bicksler plans to show this calf at fair and farm show competitions this year.

The Bicksiers recently erected this 70-head tie stall barn with closed ventilation fans.



Melissa or "Missy" as she prefers to be called compiled a scrapbook of the many events where she participated in dairy promotion throughout the year. She said that despite being too busy for a social life and giving up field hockey, the sacrifices were well worth it.

Dogs, cows, and cats get equal attention on the Bicksler farm according to Cathy Bicksler, left, with husband Thomas and daughter Melissa.

Missy is president of the ELCO 4-H dairy club and is a member of the Lebanon County Junior Holstein Club. For the last three years, she has been a team member of the Dairy Bowl and the dairy judging team, which requires lots of additional reading to keep abreast on dairy issues. A 4-H member for 10 years, Missy's dairy judging team won state competition last year.

Although she was vice president of FFA and received the Keystone Degree, Missy found that dairy princesses activities sometimes needed to take precedence over FFA and 4-H events. But, she believes that her involvement in 4-H and FFA helped her do a better job as princess.

For example, public speaking in FFA resulted in her placing first in county and fourth in regional competitions. And, participating in Dairy Bowl made her even more knowlegeable about the dairy industry.

There are only 400 students at Tulpehocken High School.

"We have the biggest land mass but one of the smallest in student numbers," she said.

Missy, who knows every student in the school, believes a small school has its advantages. "We have a higher teacher-student ratio."

Although she was a member of the school's field hockey team for five years, Missy gave it up to devote more time toward dairy princess duties. Despite her field hockey team qualifying for state playoffs, Missy said that giving it up for being a dairy princess was worth it.

"I loved every minute of being a dairy princess. I learned how to communicate with people and how the dairy industry really works."

Missy's reign also affects her parents' schedules. Her mother often drives her to activities, while her father does all the work in the barn.

Another time-consuming job for the Bicksler family happened since Missy was crowned as state alternate in September. Her family moved from a Myerstown farm to a Bernville one. They are renting about 90 acres but own their own cows and replacements. They built a new 70-head tie stall barn on the property with closed ventilation fans. Rotational grazing is not used but the cows are put out for half a day.

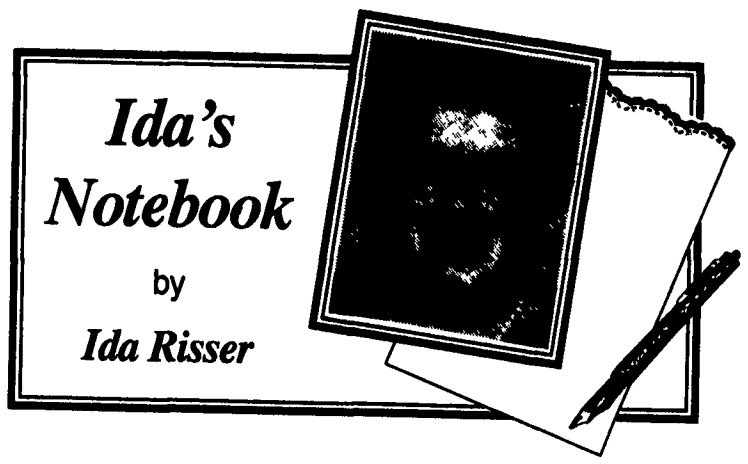
The Bicksiers believe that it is important to pay close attention to the cows, because the herd changes from day to day. They feed grains individually because some cows need more or less than the average one.

"Consumers don't understand all the behind-the-scenes work of caring for a dairy herd. They think all you need is a cow that gives milk," Missy said.

She tries to help the public understand the hard work that goes into producing high quality milk.

It's been a busy year for Melissa who crowned her Berks County successor in May and will give up her state alternate crown in September at the state pageant.

She said, "I have had no social life. I'm away almost every weekend. But it's been worth it."



Our house is surrounded by large trees in full foliage. There are so many leaves that we no longer can see our nearest neighbors. And, there are many birds in these trees. This year we've been blessed with lots of bluebirds. In fact, they're using one of the birdhouses that Allen built. On Sunday afternoon I saw a goldfinch on my peony buds. Then I watched a kingbird as it darted from its perch on our railfence after insects in true flycatcher fashion.

My large beds of iris are blooming along this same fence and I was able to supply several bouquets for our church as they helped to celebrate our pastor's birthday. Talking of birthdays, I'll have one soon and I believe that my family is planning a small gathering to help me celebrate.

It will be nice to see some of my children that live far away. I am especially looking forward to seeing for the first time our youngest grandson who lives in Texas. They plan to visit us this summer. Our daughter phones us every Sunday and all that I've heard are few cooing sounds. They tell me that he is growing fast.

Recently I attended a Women's Day Luncheon. The array of food was awesome — all salads. The program consisted of women who have made a career of music. One was a singer, one a teacher, one a choreographer, and one a musical director and composer. They were all very talented and dedicated to their chosen field.

My chosen field is homemaking and gardening. Speaking of that, I'd better get busy and cook dinner for my husband.

FFA HAPPENINGS

National FFA Winners to Tour Europe, Gain International Perspective on Agriculture

For their achievements as national award winners, 35 FFA members from across the United States will be traveling to Europe for a 13-day seminar.

The award winners, announced last November in Kansas City, Mo., during the 67th National FFA Convention, will be leaving the Washington, D.C., area on June 18. Highlights of the tour include stops in Germany, Belgium and Luxembourg.

During the seminar, the students will observe typical agricultural practices in Eastern and Western Europe. As a part of their European cultural experience, the FFA members will: •Visit agricultural cooperatives (collective farms) in Germany. •Explore the city of Berlin. •Receive a briefing on German agriculture by a member of the Ministry of Food, Agriculture and Forestry. •Take a cruise on the Rhine River. •Stay with a host family at Grossenhain, Germany (formerly East Germany). •Receive a briefing from officials of the European Commission on GATT in Brussels. •Visit a breeder of the well known double-muscled "Belgium White-Blue" cattle. •Visit the American cemetery in Luxembourg where General Patton is buried. •Visit the Paffendorf Castle to observe the restorations of farm land following open-pit mining.

To give them a more accurate taste of European life, the students will stay with host families for part of their trip. They will also participate in the families' daily activities.

The travel seminar is only one part of each winner's award package. The seminar, in addition to the cash awards and plaques presented last November, is made possible by business and industry contributions to the National FFA Foundation, Inc.

"American agriculture has a significant stake in the global marketplace," said Dr. Larry Case, national FFA adviser. "There is no substitute for first-hand experience in learning to work with other cultures, and the investment we make today in these top young leaders will help secure our future in international trade."

According to Case, the travel seminar follows closely the goals of the Strategic Plan for Agricultural Education. "This activity is one way the National FFA Organization fulfills some goals of the strategic plan. A global perspective is a vital ingredient in education today. This trip will illustrate the similarities and differences in agriculture worldwide and help these students develop creativity in entrepreneurship."

Accompanying the students on this seminar will be National FFA staff members Robert Seefeldt, teacher services specialist and Rod Duckworth, teacher services specialist, as well as Scott Stump, student services specialist and Edward Stephens, an agriculture teacher from Carthage, Mo. Stephens also serves as a member of the National FFA Board of Directors.

Remove Refrigerator Odors

To remove odor from your refrigerator or freezer, follow the manufacturer's instructions for care or use general cleaning procedures as follows:

Wash the inside of the cabinet with detergent and water. Rinse with a clean cloth and clear water, and wipe dry. The plastic gasket which seals the door is likely to hold odors. Wash it thoroughly, rinse and dry carefully.

If odor remains, wash with a solution of 1 teaspoon baking soda for each quart of warm water.

In addition to the old standby of baking soda, activated charcoal will soak up persistent odors. Spread about 3 ounces of the fine powdered charcoal on a sheet of aluminum foil or in a shallow pan. Place on refrigerator or freezer shelf. Foods can remain in the refrigerator with the charcoal.

After 6 to 8 hours, put the pan of charcoal in a moderate 350 degree oven for 20 minutes. This will reactivate the charcoal so it can be re-used many times. Put the charcoal back in the refrigerator. Repeat the process until the odor disappears.

Activated charcoal can be purchased at aquarium supply stores, agricultural supply stores, or at a pharmacy; prices vary greatly according to source with the aquarium supply store generally being the least expensive.

Chlorophyll cat litter also absorbs odors. Put the cat litter in about a ½ inch layer in a shallow pan and place in the refrigerator or freezer.

Child Care Providers

WILLIAMSPORT (Lycoming Co.)—A satellite workshop, "Kids in the Outdoors" will be held on June 6, at the Montoursville High School. Registration will start at 6:45 p.m., and the satellite broadcast is from 7:00 to 8:15 p.m.

Child care providers will receive new ideas on outdoor play activities, packing food for picnics, field trips, playground safety, children's songs and reading to children.

The training is free, but registration is required. To register, call the Lycoming County Extension office at (717) 327-2350 before June 2. The workshop meets the training requirements as specified by the Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare.

All individuals involved in child-care are encouraged to attend this training. You do not have to be a licensed provider to participate.

No Question About It: Dairy Industry Has The Answer

TOWSON, Md. — There's no dairy question too tough, or trival, for the staff of Dairy Management, Inc.'s (DMI) Information Resources Center in Rosemont, Ill.

Mary Van Sickle and Karin Rausert field hundreds of questions every year — mostly from local DAIRY COUNCILs® across the country which, in turn, have received calls from everyone from authors to homemakers to home economists. What do people ask most often about dairy products? Here is a sampling of questions Van Sickle and Rausert have received in the past few months, along with the answers.

Q: How much calcium do nurtitionists recommend in our daily diets? Besides building strong bones, are there any other health benefits to calcium?

A: The National Institutes of Health expert panel recommends 1,000 milligrams a day for adult men (25-65) and women (25-50); 1,000-1,500 for women after menopause; 1,500 mg for men and women over 65, and 1,200-1,500 mg for males and females age 11-24: A calcium-rich diet has also been found to prevent high blood pressure and reduce the risk of colon cancer and kidney stones. Milk and dairy foods are clearly the easiest and most popular sources of calcium, so drinking three glasses (or more) of milk a day is good advise for people of all ages. The beta-carotene in milk has been linked to deceased incidences of heart attacks and deaths due to heart disease.

Q: Does drinking milk really make a cold worse?

A: That's an old wives' tale. Drinking milk does not cause an increase in congestion or nasal secretions, according to Australian researchers. A milk allergy can produce a stuffy or runny nose, which might be confused with a cold.

Q: What does the "REAL" logo on dairy products really mean?

A: The "REAL"® Seal is a registered trademark of the United Dairy Industry Association. It identifies genuine dairy products that meet Food and Drug Administration (FDA) standards of identity regulating product uniformity, value and wholesomeness. Standards of identity govern such things as the moisture content of cheese, the weight per gallon of ice cream and the milkfat content of cream.

Q: Can my ice cream be refrozen once it has thawed?

A: Yes, but you may not like the taste of it. As ice cream thaws, some of its water content, in the form of tiny ice crystals, will separate from the fat content and reform into larger ice crystals — giving the ice cream an icy (grainy) texture.

Q: How do I go about making butter, cheese or ice cream at home?

A: Ask your local public library to help you find books on the subject and check them out. Other sources of information are home economists at local colleges and county agricultural extension services.

Q: How can I make sure my milk and other dairy products are fresh when I buy them?

A: Dairy products are highly perishable, so consumers have to be extra careful — in the store and at home. Check the "sell-by" date after which the product should be withdrawn from retail sale. Generally, products remain fresh and usable for a few days after the sell-by date. In the store, check containers for leaks and other damage and put dairy products in your cart at the end of your shopping trip just before checking out, especially in hot weather. Once home, refrigerate products at once.

Callers to the DMI Information Resources Center don't always have weighty questions. Consider these:

Q: Is it really true that drinking milk is the best way to cool my tongue after eating hot peppers?

A: Yes, this is not an old wives' tale. Casein, the main protein in milk, acts like a detergent, washing away capsaicin, the substance that gives hot peppers their "fire."

Q: Why does a milking stool have three legs?

A: If it had two legs, it would fall over. Seriously, a reliable dairy source claims that it is easier to balance three legs (as opposed to four) on an uneven surface such as a barn floor.

Do's and Dont's of Jelly Making

Strawberry season is here and people are starting to make their favorite jams and jellies. This also starts the season of frantic phone calls from people having problems with their jellies. Here are answers to some frequently asked questions.

?Can I substitute brands of pectin in recipes? No! Each brand of pectin has a different formulation and the recipe has been developed for that specific brand of pectin. If you substitute brands, you could end up with a jam or jelly that does not set.

?Is is all right to add a little more juice or cut down on the sugar in the recipe? Accurate measurements are a must! Sugar should be measured in dry measuring cups made of metal or plastic and leveled off with the straight edge of a spatula or knife. Prepared fruit should be measured in liquid measuring cups made of glass or plastic and read at eye level. A variation of ¼ cup more or less fruit can yield a thinner or thicker jelly or jam. Do not cut down on the sugar in the recipe. There are several new "light" products available to use in making low sugar jellies. Look for them in local markets.

?Do I have to be precise about how long I boil my jam or jelly? Yes! Start watching the clock when the jam or jelly comes to a full rolling boil (a boil that does not stop when stirred). A rolling boil allows for evaporation that concentrates the fruit mixture to the ideal sugar level. Too long or too short a cooking time may cause setting problems such as a "no set," "soft set," or a "pan set" (jam or jelly that sets in the pan before it can be poured into jars).

?Can I salvage jelly or jam that is too soft? If your jelly is too soft, try one of the following methods for recooking jelly or jam based on the type of pectin used.

Remaking Soft Jellies

Measure jelly to be recooked. Work with no more than 4 to 6 cups at a time.

To remake with powdered pectin: For each quart of jelly, mix ¼ cup sugar, ½ cup water, 2 tablespoons bottled lemon juice, and 4 teaspoons powdered pectin. Bring to a boil while stirring. Add jelly and bring to a rolling boil over high heat, stirring constantly. Boil hard ½ minute. Remove from heat, quickly skim foam off jelly, and fill sterile jars, leaving ¼ inch headspace. Adjust new lids and process 5 minutes.

To remake with liquid pectin: For each quart of jelly, measure ¾ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons bottled lemon juice, and 2 tablespoons liquid pectin. Bring jelly only to boil over high heat, while stirring. Remove from heat and quickly add the sugar, lemon juice, and pectin. Bring to a full rolling boil, stirring constantly. Boil hard for 1 minute. Quickly skim off foam and fill sterile jars, leaving ¼ inch headspace. Adjust new lids and process 5 minutes.

To remove without added pectin: For each quart of jelly, add 2 tablespoons bottled lemon juice. Heat to boiling and boil for 3 to 4 minutes. Remove from heat, quickly skim off foam, and fill sterile jars, leaving ¼ inch headspace. Adjust new lids and process 5 minutes.

If you have questions about food preservation call your local extension office or 1-800-43PECTIN.

Dairy Facts And Figures

The salt in butter not only adds flavor but also increases its shelf life by acting as a preservative. Unsalted butter has a shorter shelf life and is best kept frozen until ready to use.

Compound or flavored butters can quickly dress up grilled meats and poultry, cooked vegetables and breads. Simply soften butter and stir in a flavoring ingredient. Try minced fresh basil, finely chopped garlic, finely chopped sun-dried tomatoes, grated lime peel and ground cumin, finely chopped hazelnuts or crumbled Blue cheese.

Ice cream and cookies is one summertime combo that never goes out of style. For a quick cookies 'n' cream sundae, crumble a cookie in a dessert dish, top with a scoop of ice cream, your favorite ice cream topping and another crumbled cookie. Finish off with a dollop of whipped cream.

According to John Mariani (American Way, November 15, 1994), Americans annually consume 1,929,590,000 pounds of Mozzarella cheese and 3,710,750,000 pounds of tomatoes on their pizzas.

What ice cream flavors score high marks with kids? According to Prepared Foods (March 1995), kids ages six to 12 "very strongly" prefer Vanilla, Rocky Road, S'mores, Cookie Dough, Chocolate and Peanut Butter. Fruity flavors like cherry, banana, even watermelon, did well, too; but kids gave a thumbs down to lemon, blueberry and cranberry.

What do cappuccino, cafe latte, cafe au lait, cafe con leche and cafe mocha have in common? Milk. Each of these popular coffee drinks contains or is served with milk.

Dairy Name Reflects A Way Of Life

LORETTA GOLDEN
Cambria Co. Correspondent

EBENSBURG (Cambria Co.) — What's in a name? Jim Harteis of Friend-Lea Farm near Ebensburg hopes that the name says it all.

The "friend" part is self-explanatory — friendly people, friendly animals, in general just a very friendly atmosphere. "Lea" is a word which means "pasture" or "grassland." In choosing a name for his farm, Harteis wanted a label which was "transportable" so that it could be taken with him in the event of a move. He also wanted a name which was a reflection of his philosophies and way of life, not merely something which was a dot on a map.

Harteis grew up on a farm in the Ebensburg area. After graduating with a degree in dairy husbandry from Delaware Valley College, Bucks County, Harteis began his farming career in the "Friend's Cove" area of Bedford County.

For a short while, he worked as an extension agent in Bedford County and then taught chemistry and physics at Chestnut Ridge

LORETTA GOLDEN
Cambria Co. Correspondent

Loretta has been the Cambria County correspondent for Lancaster Farming for only a short period of time. Born and raised in Johnstown, she had no experience with farming until she married her husband Vince Golden in 1978.

She was a former junior high school math teacher in the Greater Johnstown School District and has a master's degree in secondary education from the University of Pittsburgh.

When twins Katie and Beth (now 14 years old) were born, Loretta became a full-time "stay-at-home" mom. Three more children — Andy, age 12, Julie, age 10, and Emily, age 8 — complete the family. They live on Golden Farms, a 300-acre cash crop operation specializing in growing and marketing buckwheat. The farm is located in the Portage area of Cambria County.

The family is quite active and Loretta is the "logistics manager," making sure that everyone is where they are supposed to be when they are supposed to be there. This is in addition to keeping farm records, being "parts runner," etc.

While Loretta is not too familiar with the technical aspects of farming, she enjoys writing the articles which are family-oriented and those dealing with education, cooking, and crafts.

High School.

It was at Chestnut Ridge that he also coached football and wrestling. In 1969, the farm which neighbors his homestead in Cambria County came up for sale. Harteis decided to buy it and "come home."

Harteis and his wife Dena have

A major structural fire in 1977 caused $245,000 in damage — with marginal insurance coverage. It was a challenge to rebuild from that point.

One of the newest additions which Harteis is very proud of is a modified Virginia-style barn with slotted floor and manure pit underneath. It's an unusual type of barn for this area and Harteis had to travel east to see a few of these before deciding on a definite design.

There are 140 head of cattle, his "salvage crew," in this barn, but the design style enables all of the cattle here to be adequately cared for in one man-hour per day.

The 100-head milking herd, all registered Holsteins, has been the top DHIA herd in Cambria County for a number of years. The most recent figures show a herd average of 24,878 pounds of milk, 897 pounds butterfat, and 779 pounds protein. Some of the milk is marketed at the Friend-Lea Dairy store, (owned by Jim's brother), and the rest is sent to Sani-Dairy, in Johnstown.

Friend-Lea Farm employs only two full-time workers. Harteis and his hired help handle all the milking with the youngest two Harteis sons helping out on weekends. They are on a 3X schedule. Automatic feeding is done and each cow is programmed with a totally mixed ration. A supplemental TMR is given to the higher-producing cows every four hours.

Harteis is considered to be fairly innovative. He credits his dad, Lawrence, who passed away last September, with giving him the example of being receptive to new ideas and being open-minded.

For instance, the farm has been using shredded newspaper as bedding for the past five years. In fact, Ebensburg area residents who bring their papers to the farm now call them "moospapers."

Gravity gutters and liquid manure pits have been in place since the late 1960s. Friend-Lea Farm has been environmentally friendly before it was "chic" to be so.

In 1994, 400 acres were put into crops. The total commercial fertilizer use for the farm was only nine tons. Harteis points out that this is the result of his "judicious use of manure." All the manure is stored and then spread in the spring or fall. The results of soil tests determine which fields need the most fertilizer. These will receive the most manure.

Diversification is also another reason for the success of Friend-

Lea Dairy Farm. All bull calves are raised and finished out as steers. Twelve to 20 head of registered Holstein breeding cattle are sold each year and there are two bulls in the active lineups of the bull banks.

Harteis also notes that the extended use of his equipment and facilities helps to make a significant difference in the gross income of the farm. His recent purchase of a large square baler has enabled him to put away 60 acres of hay in one afternoon with the help of only one or two other employees. The bales are 2 feet x 3 feet x 7 feet and weigh 600 pounds apiece. They are easily handled with forks on a loader and stack nicely for storage. A fair amount of hay is sold to farmers in Virginia and Ohio.

More diversity is practiced on the farm by the rest of the family. Jim's wife, Dena, takes care of all of the calves up through weaning along with the record-keeping and helping out with the dogs and chicks. This is in addition to caring for the family and doing all the car-pool duties, etc. which are necessary.

Harteis credits his wife with making things run smoothly and helping out wherever she is needed.

The rest of the Harteis clan includes oldest son, Michael; 13-year-old Luke; 12-year-old Jonathan; and daughter Lindsey, 10. The three younger children are all students in the Central Cambria School District.

Mike is a recent Penn State graduate with a major in ag business management. This major, along with his strong farm background, has helped him to land a position with Hanover Foods, Hanover. Recently, he and his wife Heather have become the parents of a little girl, Sydney.

The younger Harteis children all have their special projects on the farm. They help out where needed, but Jim is quick to point out that they are still a bit young.

The family is involved in dog breeding. This is looked at as a business venture and not merely a hobby. Each of the children has purchased their own dogs for this purpose and the proceeds from the litters are being banked for future education. Right now they are raising dobermans, dalmatians, and a Great Dane. Ten-year-old Lindsay delivers most of the pups.

Another project that the family is involved in is raising Cornish roasting hens. They raise two batches, approximately 160 total. When finished out, they are taken to a commercial slaughterhouse. The children are responsible for doing all of their own marketing. Again, the profits are banked for education.

When asked what he raises on the farm, Harteis was quick with "kids, cows, canines, chickens, and cats!" He admits that his priorities have changed over the years, and the three-per-day milking is the result of his putting his family first. Hired help does the first milking and this allows him the opportunity to get up at the same time as the rest of the family and have breakfast with them. In the afternoon, he finishes in the barn at suppertime so the family is together again. The evening is free to attend children's events and the last milking is done when the children are going to bed.

During the winter months, Harteis runs an elementary level wrestling program for both boys and girls in the Central Cambria School District. This began 16 years ago when his oldest son, Mike, was in second grade. This past year he had 75 wrestlers and does all of this on a voluntary basis. He truly enjoys working with the young children and believes he is "giving back" something to the community.

Harteis is proud of the fact that he is a member of the Allied Milk Producers. He is also a past chairman of the State Dairy Promotion Board, and had been a director of the Farm Credit Board for some time. He is also a member of the Farmer's Union. Again, he points out that he has curtailed many of his activities for the moment to give the time to his family.

Harteis is looking at his operation to see where there may be room for improvement. At the present time, the diverse use of equipment and facilities "dovetails" together and adds a good bit to the cash flow so that he is not totally dependent on a milk check. This constant re-evaluation is a survival technique.

His advice to other farmers who are struggling is to try "to continue to change as the need arises and make good use of your resources."

He said that in some ways he believes that "technology is moving more quickly than traditional dairying" and farmers who are in the business must be flexible to change when it suits their operation.

Don't Let Dairy Myths Block Good Nutrition

Someone somewhere started the notion that any food that tastes good can't possibly be good for you — and vice versa. While most of us know that's not true, many people still harbor a lot of myths about milk and dairy products.

In reverse order, let's scope out the Top Ten Milk Myths and the scientific facts that dispel them.

Myth #10: Milk Has a Lot of Fat.

Fact: Milk is available in a wide variety of milk fat levels, ranging from whole (3.25 percent milkfat) to skim products. There is also a wide variety of other lowfat and nonfat dairy products on the market — including yogurt, cheese, sour cream, dips and spreads — for people who need to control their fat intake. The fact is, dairy products contribute only about 12 percent of the total dietary fat available in the U.S. food supply.

And here's more good news. Consuming more dairy products doesn't mean you'll gain weight. A recent study found that 9- to 13-year-old girls who increased their dairy food intake increased their bone density without increasing either their fat intake or rate of weight gain.

Myth #9. Only Kids Need Milk.

Fact: Kids benefit from milk, of course, but so do adults. The National Institutes of Health (NIH) Expert Panel recommends that adult men and women consume calcium at levels above the RDA. They recommend 1,000 mg of calcium per day for men and women beginning at age 25, and 1,500 mg per day for postmenopausal women not taking estrogen and for all adults over age 65. Milk and dairy products provide the richest and one of the most economical sources of calcium in the American diet.

Myth #8: I Can Get By on One Glass a Day.

Fact: With an RDA of 800 mg of calcium per day and a minimum of 1,000 mg recommended by NIH, adult men and women need at least three servings of milk and dairy foods daily to get the calcium they need. Low calcium intake is a risk factor for osteoporosis — a bone-thinning disease that strikes 25 million Americans, including 5 million men!

Myth #7: Do Fortified Foods Instead.

Fact: In the last few years, a number of calcium-fortified foods have come on the market. While these products do contribute to daily calcium intake, none are an adequate substitute for milk, which contributes vitamins A, B_6, and B_{12} as well as riboflavin, phophorus and magnesium.

Myth #6: Milk is Hard to Digest.

While most people have no problem digesting milk, some people do have low levels of the intestinal enzyme lactase, which breaks down the milk sugar lactose. Simple dietary management steps can help address this problem. For example, you could drink milk in servings of one cup or less, especially with a meal or other foods. Or, try well-tolerated dairy foods like aged cheeses or yogurt with active cultures. Another solution involves purchasing lactose-reduced or lactose-free products.

Myth #5: Milk Produces Phlegm.

Fact: Although some people believe you should not drink milk when you have a cold or respiratory infection, thinking that milk produces mucus, science has shown otherwise. In a carefully controlled study in Australia, milk drinkers were infected with a cold virus, then consumed 2.7 glasses a day. No link was found between milk consumption and mucus production.

Myth #4. Teens Can Do without Calcium.

Fact: Calcium intake and weight-bearing exercise during the teen years are especially important to help support skeletal growth. The added benefit of the other vitamins and minerals found in milk are also important to developing bone structures. Unfortunately, less than a quarter of teenage girls today meet their RDA for calcium.

Myth #3. Need Calcium? Just Eat Broccoli.

Fact: While broccoli may have a high level of calcium for a vegetable, it pales by comparison. And that's not just George Bush talking! A half cup of broccoli contains only 36 milligrams pf calcium. A cup of skim milk contains 302 milligrams — equal to more than 4 cups of cooked broccoli. An adult male would have to eat more than 22 servings of cooked broccoli to meet his RDA for calcium. A much easier choice would be 3 cups of milk.

Myth #2: Chocolate Milk Makes Kids Hyperactive.

Fact: The cause of hyperactivity in children is unknown. The alleged tie between sugar in chocolate milk and increased hyperactivity is not supported by science. A recent study published in the New England Journal of Medicine demonstrated that even when preschool and elementary school children consumed larger-than-normal amounts of sugar, their behavior, mood and ability to perform tasks were not affected. And children love chocolate milk. One study conducted in Pennsylvania schools found that chocolate milk was preferred by 60% of all students.

Myth #1: Dairy Foods Are Wholesome, But Wholesome is Bor--ring.

Fact: Dairy foods are indeed wholesome, but boring? Just look at the dairy case in your supermarket. The hundreds of different products you will find offer exciting taste opportunities and cooking ingredients. Who says it can't be healthy and taste-tempting at the same time?

Dairy Facts And Figures

A little bit of history...

• A letter written in 1700 by a guest of Governor William Bladen of Maryland became the first recorded account of ice cream being served in the New World.

• The first advertisement for ice cream in this country was placed in the New York Gazette by confectioner Philip Lenzi on May 12, 1777, announcing that ice cream was available "almost every day."

• During the 18th century, ice cream was a rare and exotic dessert enjoyed only by the elite. Dolly Madison served a strawberry ice cream creation for dessert at President Madion's second inaugural banquet in 1812 at the White House.

(Source: International Ice Cream Association.)

According to a 1993 study, the top selling flavors of ice cream in the U.S. are: vanilla (28 percent); fruit flavors (15 percent); nut flavors (14 percent); candy mix-in flavors (13 percent); chocolate (8 percent); Neapolitan (7 percent) and cake/cookie flavors (7 percent).

Nearly one-third of American households consume at least one gallon of ice cream and related products every two weeks.

Five quarts of milk are required to make one pound of cheese.

Store unopened cheese refrigerated in its original wrapper. Once it has been opened, rewrap the unused portion in plastic wrap and refrigerate.

Cheeseburger, cheeseburger. Top grilled burgers with cheese for a real flavor boost—popular choices include: Cheddar, Monterey Jack, Swiss, crumbled blue, Mozzarella, Provolone and smoked Gouda.

The annual per capita consumption of butter in the U.S. hit 4.2 pounds in 1994, the highest it has been since 1977. At the turn of the century, we were consuming 18 pounds per person.

Deep freeze for cheese? For best results, cut large blocks of cheese into one to one-half pound pieces and wrap airtight before freezing up to six months. Firm cheeses such as Cheddar, Swiss, Edam and Mozzarella freeze most successfully. Thawed cheeses are best used in cooking; freezing changes the texture, making them crumbly.

Time-Saving Tactics For Speed-Scratch Cooking

TOWSON, Md. — Home cooking is alive and well, and family dinners are the norm in millions of households, said Delia Hammock, associate director of the Good Housekeeping Institute and director/editor of "Nutrition and Fitness."

In fact, almost 80 percent of Good Housekeeping readers polled in a 1994 survey said they are still home-on-the-range five to seven evenings a week. But while the symbolic meaning of dinner may not have changed much, the preparation of it certainly has.

Convenience is now a prerequisite for both the novice cook and the experienced culinary whiz, and no one is apologizing for it, Hammock said. Women see choosing foods that are easier to prepare, to serve, to eat and to clean up as "smart," because it allows them to work outside the home and still get the evening meal on the table.

But while convenience is king (or queen) in the kitchen, this doesn't necessarily mean that consumers want more packaged convenience foods to zap in the microwave, Hammock said. In fact, there has been a definite retreat from such heat-and-eat fare.

"In the past three years, we've seen sales of many well-known microwaveable brands shrink, and the number of new entries in the microwaveable category decline," she said.

Instead, women are rethinking meal preparation with an eye toward shortcuts that don't require a major sacrifice in quality or taste. The result is a new style of cooking which has been dubbed "speed scratch" by trend watchers. Speed-scratch bears little resemblance to the traditional "cooking from scratch" which often meant spending hours in the kitchen, or to the old straight-from-the-can cooking which never fooled anyone.

The '95 version of home cooking is characterized by a combined use of ready-to-use and readily available fresh and processed convenience products. These include pre-packaged and ready-to-cook fresh vegetables, pre-washed lettuce mixes, meat pre-cut for stir-fry or kebabs, pre-seasoned beef cuts, marinated chicken cutlets, rotisserie chicken, jarred sauces, spice blends, frozen vegetable medleys (or stir-fry vegetable and sauce combinations), and high quality canned foods. It's a culinary compromise that blends fast and simple with wholesome and delicious.

Cheese is a perfect speed-scratch ingredient — a ready to use refrigerator staple in most households. Its versatility can take the hasty home cook from hors d'oeuvre to dessert with flair, and it adds nutrition as well as a fresh homemade flavor to any dish — all without a lot of extra work.

Today, cheese can be found in the dairy case sliced, shredded, grated, even cubed. Many varieties now come in resealable bags that further enhance the convenience factor. Flavored cheeses also make it easy to give a meal an ethnic flair without buying special ingredients.

A taco-flavored combination of shredded Cheddar and Monterey Jack is perfect for giving a dish a Tex-Mex twist, or buildng a gourmet pizza in minutes by teaming up a ready-made pizza shell and tomato sauce with one of the shredded pizza cheese blends on the market.

Cheese also appeals to the increasing number of "part-time" vegetarians who are interested in consuming more meatless meals but still want taste, convenience and nutrition.

Speed-scratch cooking doesn't necessarily start with a traditional step-by-step recipe. Instead, it may originate with a meal kit which includes the exact amount of each necessary ingredient. Or it may be as simple as pairing a prepared product with a fresh product and adding a creative garnish.

Speed-scratch recipes are streamlined — ingredient lists are short, steps are few, and preparation utensils are held to a minimum. This short-cut cooking allows the cook to customize the dish to meet the family's needs and taste preferences, Hammock said, and it also offers the emotional involvement and payoff of "homemade" with a minimum of effort. The bottom line? More control, less guilt.

Shopping Tips

During your next shopping trip, look at the shelves with an eye toward streamlining your time in the kitchen. There's a palate-pleasing assortment of convenience foods including:

On the Grocery Shelves...

- The wide variety of pasta sauces from the standard marinara to Italian regional varieties; from creamy to extra-chunky, seasoned with pesto, sun-dried tomatoes, peppers, garlic, etc.
- Stewed tomatoes, seasoned in a variety of ways, the start of quick soups and casseroles — as sauces for meat and poultry.
- Canned soups and beans in countless varieties— the basis of quick meals.
- Flavored vinegars, croutons, packaged salad fixings — all for speedy salad making.
- Condiments like mustards, chutneys and relishes to quickly add flavor to super-fast meal preparation.
- The large assortment of salsas, barbecue sauces and marinades.
- The seemingly unlimited assortment of seasoned rice, pasta and potato mixes, ready to be turned into a main dish with chunks of cheese, meat or poultry.

In the Dairy Case...

- The broad array of cheeses, sliced, cubed and shredded; others spiced for tacos and pizzas as well as blends of two or more shredded cheeses, packed in easily resealable bags.
- Seasoned soft cheeses shaped in logs or balls for instant party food or snacks.
- The many new flavors and packages of cottage cheese and yogurt.

Speed-Scratch Cooking

At the Meat Counter...

• Meat and poultry cut into cubes or thin slices, some pre-seasoned, ready for kebabs, stir-frying or grilling. (The thinner the cut the quicker it cooks.)

In the Freezer Case...

• Endless combinations of frozen vegetables cut into chunks, ready for steaming, stir-frying and quick casseroles.

• Veggies in sauces. Try them tossed with pasta.

• Frozen shrimp for salads and stir-frys.

In the Produce Department...

• Ready-to-serve bags of salad greens and coleslaw.

• Packaged precut vegetables like broccoli, celery and carrots.

And don't forget...

• The washed and sliced vegetables and fruits at the salad bar, as well as the hardcooked eggs, cooked beans, sprouts and olives.

• Tortillas, Italian bread shells and egg roll wrappers.

Here are some ways to put delicious home-cooked meals on the table in less time with less fuss:

•Use shredded cheeses for instant "sauces" on veggies, casseroles, meat and poultry (if using cheese as a topping on a baked dish, add at the last minute.)

•Use salsa as an instant cooking sauce for chicken, ground beef and fish, or stir into pastas, rice and beans.

•Go "one-pot" and save on clean-up. When serving pasta and vegetables, add vegetables to the pasta pot during the last few minutes of cooking.

•To shorten marinating time, pierce meat and poultry with fork tines.

•Fill ready-to-bake pie shells with thin slices of unpeeled peaches or pears; sprinkle with sugar and chopped nuts, dot with butter and bake.

•Make a 10-minute chili with canned beans, chili-style stewed tomatoes and browned ground beef. Top with shredded hot-pepper Jack cheese.

•Stir chunks of creamy herbed cheese into hot pasta to make a rich, delicious sauce instantly.

•No need to peel carrots, potatoes and asparagus before cooking; just trim then scrub with a vegetable brush.

•Sprinkle bottled salad dressing and a shake of Parmesan cheese over hot cooked vegetables.

•Use melted jam or jelly as a no-work dessert sauce on fruit, pudding, ice cream or pound cake.

CHEDDAR CHOWDER

2 cups water
2 cups diced potatoes
½ cup grated carrots
½ cup diced celery
¼ cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

White Sauce:

¼ cup butter
¼ cup flour
2 cups milk
2 cups grated cheddar cheese
1 cup cubed ham

Combine water, potatoes, carrots, celery, onion, salt, and pepper in huge kettle and boil 10-12 minutes. Meanwhile, in small saucepan, make white sauce by melting butter. Add flour and stir until smooth (about one minute). Slowly add milk and cook until thickened. Add grated cheese to white sauce; stir until melted. Add white sauce and cubed ham to undrained, cooked vegetables. Heat thoroughly. Makes six servings.

This is a delicious soup and I like all the dairy products you use to make it, since we are dairy farmers. My husband, Richard, and I and our daughters milk 61 cows. We ship our milk to Clover Farms Dairy. We also farm 260 acres. We grow corn, hay, soybeans, barley, wheat, and oats.

I enjoy the Home on the Range section of Lancaster Farming. I enjoy trying new recipes. I hope you enjoy this recipe.

PEARL TAPIOCA PUDDING

2 tablespoons pearl tapioca
2 cups milk
1 egg
⅓ cup sugar
Dash salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Heat milk and tapioca slowly in heavy saucepan. Boil 5 to 10 minutes. Beat egg and sugar, add a little hot milk to egg mixture and pour into tapioca, stirring constantly. Bring to a boil, add vanilla. Stir ocassionally as it cools to make a creamy pudding.

We live on a farm in Tucker County, W.Va. At the moment, we only have cattle. We used to raise purebred Landrace hogs but have gotten out of them.

My husband is 80 years old and still perking along. He was in the hospital earlier this spring. We grow a garden, make hay, and sometimes grown corn.

CHICKEN CORDON BLEU

Stir together:

1 10¾ ounce can cream of chicken soup
½ cup milk. Set aside.

Filling mixture:

Cook 1-3 stalks celery and onion in ½ cup butter until tender. Beat together 2 eggs and 2 cups milk. Combine all with one 12-ounce bag of bread cubes. Set aside.

In buttered 9-inch by 13-inch baking dish, put a small amount of soup mixture on bottom. Layer in order:

2-3 cups cooked chicken
½ -1 pound chipped ham

Add slices of Swiss or white American cheese, filling mixture, and rest of soup mixture on top. Bake at 300 degrees for 1½ hours.

Some of the ingredient amounts can be varied to your liking. This recipe is well worth your time!

My husband John and I milk 70 cows. I was introduced to the dairy life when I met him. A lot of work is involved but we find it satisfying. We both like animals and the outdoors.

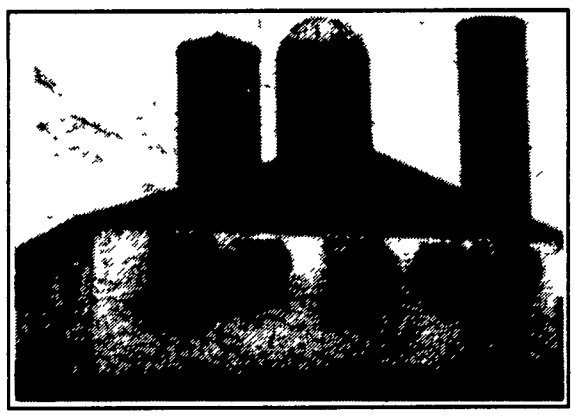
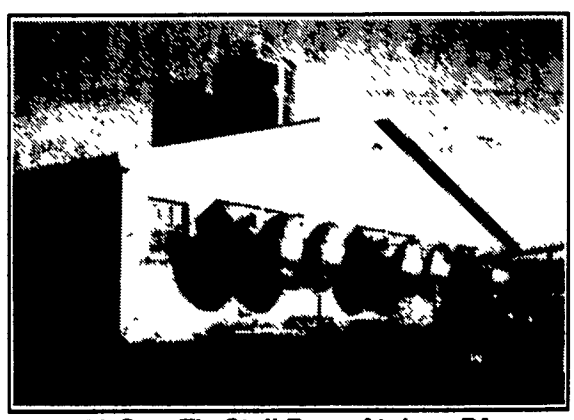
TUNNEL VENTILATION SYSTEMS



76 Cow Total Ventilation, Denver, PA



90 Cow Tie Stall Barn, Atglen, PA

126 Cow Tie Stall Barn, Quarryville, PA

Lapp's Barn Equipment can install a high-performance/high efficiency tunnel ventilation system in your barn. A tunnel ventilation system will give you an even air flow throughout your barn of 2-5 mph. This gives you the advantage of better controlling temperature to give your cows more comfort which means more milk!! Also, a tunnel ventilation system eliminates circulating fans, provides summer and winter ventilation and controls fly problems! An optional unit can even automate your ventilation so you will never even have to worry about it when you're not there, so you can concentrate on other things!

At Lapp's, we sell high quality ventilation systems manufactured by Acme Engineering, Acme products feature such things as

Galvanized Construction - Corrosion resistant, long lasting (Aluminum also available)

Wide Cambered Propeller - Huge airflow, low energy cost, high CFM/Watt.

Rivited Blades - Control Critical stresses

Unique Captured Bearings - Strong formed bearing casing maintains proper alignment and spacing.

Vertical Support Frame - Supports both frame and motor to assist pulley alignment and easy adjusting.

Screens Pre-Cut - For easy, quick mounting of motor.

CHOCOLATE ECLAIR CAKE

1 box (1 pound) graham crackers
2 packages (3¾ ounces) instant vanilla pudding
3½ cup milk
8 ounces whipped cream

Butter bottom of 9-inch by 13-inch baking dish. Line with some of the whole graham crackers. Mix pudding with milk. Beat at medium speed for two minutes. Blend in whipped cream. Pour half of mixture over crackers and place second layer of crackers over pudding. Pour remaining pudding over this and cover with more crackers. Refridgerate two hours and frost and refridge overnight.

Frosting:
6 tablespoons cocoa
2 tablespoons oil
2 teaspoons light corn syrup
2 teaspoons vanilla
3 tablespoons butter, softened
1½ cups confectioners' sugar
3 tablespoons milk

I usually make this recipe in the morning and use that same day what I can. The longer it sets, the soggier it gets! And if you don't have eight ounces of whipped cream, use about four cups of Dream Whip. Good luck!

SOFT SUGAR COOKIE

2 cups sugar
3 eggs
1 cup and 1 tablespoon vegetable shortening
5-6 cups flour
1 cup sour milk
1 teaspoon baking soda
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon lemong flavoring
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon nutmeg

If you do not have sour milk, make the following substitution. Put 2 teaspoons of lemon juice in cup and fill with milk. Microwave one minute.

Cream sugar, eggs, vegetable oil, lemon flavoring, salt, vanilla and nutmeg.

Add ½ of the flour and all the milk and mix real good. Add rest of flour, baking soda, and baking powder. Mix. Roll out and cut into shapes. You do not have to chill dough first. Bake at 350 degrees for 12 minutes.

This is a real good cookie recipe to have with your cookes and milk break. It makes a lot and can be frosted.

We live on a farm and enjoy country living. I have 120 cows in my kitchen, and I'm not counting dish towels.

'Til The Cow Comes Home

Home, home on the range
Where the cow comes home to play
Where seldom is heard, a discouraging word
And she finds yet a new home to stay

SOUTHAMPTON (Bucks Co.)—It was a homecoming of sorts when Geraldine, the fiberglass Holstein, returned here to the Dairy Council office to officially launch its 75th anniversary celebration.

But it was only a temporary visit, as it was also a desperate search for a new home for the black-and-white spotted cow.

Geraldine was put out to pasture when her long-time resident, the Philadelphia Civic Center Museum, closed recently. There, thousands of school children came to see her to learn about farming and dairy products.

By bringing her back to Dairy Council, Inc., to announce her newfound homelessness, employees hoped that they'd find a new permanent residence for their most loyal staff member—a home where she could continue to be surrounded by curious children. And that is just what happened.

Dairy Council is pleased to report that Geraldine can now be found at Philadelphia School District's Fox Chase Farm.

A long-time employee of Dairy Council, Inc., Geraldine joined the staff in 1964—and she hit the ground running, so to speak. Throughout the 1960s, riding on the back of her own trailer, Geraldine could be seen on the streets of the Delaware Valley, traveling from event to event at shopping centers, museums, schoolyards, and county fairs.

Her resume includes being the first cow to ride an escalator in the Sheraton Hotel (and probably any escalator in the state, for that matter!) to attend the Philadelphia Area Dairy Princess Contest, getting a ticket for stopping traffic in front of City Hall on busy Broad Street to vainly pose for a June Dairy Month photo, and showing off as "Exhibit of the Week" at the famed Cherry Hill Mall.

Like most celebrities, she followed suit by having her own makeup artist. After having her markings delicately feathered, her horns highlighted and her udded tinted, she found herself with a whole new personality and a great deal more confidence.

Geraldine is actually the fourth "Geraldine" cow to serve Dairy Council. Geraldine the First is a character in one of DCI's popular classroom storybooks for grade school children. Geraldine II is a tail-swishing, 3-D. mechanical Guernsey Geraldine III is the real thing, presented as a calf several years ago to the Philadelphia High School of Agriculture.

And Geraldine IV, officially titled field representative for Dairy Council, Inc., will proudly continue her reign as the preeminent bovine on nutrition education for children.

PROFESSIONAL DAIRY MANAGERS OF PENNSYLVANIA MEET TO STUDY NUTRIENT MANAGEMENT

Peter Wright
Animal Waste Specialist
Cornell
Cooperative Extension

The Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania continue to meet and grow in focus and purpose. Cliff Hawbaker, a dairy farmer from Chambersburg, leads the group. The last quarterly meeting was hosted by Dan Mains at Mains Acres dairy near Newville.

Attending dairy managers were treated to a walking tour and discussion of farm management, manure management, and milk hauling. After the tour and discussion, the group retired to the home farm office for lunch and a presentation by Peter Wright from Cornell University, a position partially funded by the Northeast Dairy Managers.

Peter Wright summarized the day's discussion and his presentation by e-mail:

Manure Management

Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania, Mains Acres, Newville, met April 27, 1995.

One of the biggest challenges facing dairy farmers today is handling their manure in a low cost, efficient and environmentally friendly way. Often manure systems consist of tradeoff between these goals.

There are many manure handling options for the farmer to choose from and often each farm needs the equipment and management skills to handle manure in a variety of ways.

A small group of dairy managers explained how they each dealt with the manure on their farms. They shared their successes and their problems in dealing with this important issue.

Peter Wright, manure management specialist from Cornell, gave his perspective of the problem and the opportunities.

The lowest cost system is often daily spreading, especially for smaller farms.

The disadvantages of daily spreading include compaction of the cropland while spreading in saturated conditions, unavailability of land during the growing season, and nutrient losses when manure is spread over the winter.

Larger farms will find that storing the manure, in an earthen storage, and then irrigating it is the lowest cost method. The disadvantages of this method include odors from the stored manure are released as the manure pit is agitated and as the manure is sprayed into the air, pumping to non contiguous land is difficult, and higher management is needed.

Environmentally the best systems include soil and manure analysis, timing manure application so it is applied as close as possible to when the nutrients are needed, applied at the correct rate, and applied evenly like fertilizer should be applied. Incorporation of the manure as it is applied or immediately after will retain the ammonia as additional nitrogen fertilizer.

An added benefit with incorporation is the reduction of odors. The draghose system of pumping the manure to a flexible hose that is dragged behind the tractor and a tillage implement has the potential to provide these advantages.

There are additional components such as liquid solid separation, methane generation, and satellite storage that were discussed. These components need to be developed to meet the needs of the dairy industry.

The next meeting of the PDM of Pa. will be July 27 in Carlisle to study milk hauling and contracting. Dairy managers that have questions regarding the PDM of Pa. should contact Cliff Hawbaker (717) 263-9577, Franklin County; Greta Rech (610) 869-8116, Chester County; or Janice Burkholder, Franklin County, (717) 263-9690.

If a local group wishes to start another regional dairy managers group in the state, they should contact Bill Heald at (814) 863-3918 or CWH3@PSU.EDU.

FARM MANAGEMENT

FARM COMPUTER TRAINING

Roland P. Freund
Penn State
Regional Farm
Management Agent

The Farm Management Computer Classroom on Wheels from Virginia Tech is coming soon to southcentral Pennsylvania.

Farmers here will also have the opportunity to participate in hands-on computer training, which has been tried and tested in Virginia. Two-day workshops have been scheduled in Cumberland and Adams counties.

The Cumberland workshops will be at the Cumberland County Extension Office, downstairs meeting room, on June 20 and June 22. The program runs from 8:45 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day.

The same program, which is geared to the needs of intermediate and beginning computer operators, will be conducted at Hoss's Restaurant, Rt.30 east, Gettysburg, on June 21 and June 23. Meals will be at cost at each location.

Advanced registration with payment of $95 by June 16 is required for this program. Agrilenders and agribusiness are pledging financial support, which may enable us to rebate some meal or registration cost to participants.

Virginia Farm Management Extension staff have developed the "Computer Classroom on Wheels" and have used it extensively with great success in Virginia. They have 16 notebook computers, each with extended keyboard and mouse to equip each pupil with the MS-DOS and Windows environment that is common to most farm computers.

Instructors use efficient overhead projection equipment to display the materials being taught. All this equipment can be packed conveniently into a van for transport to any place where a group can be assembled in a classroom.

Instructors from V.P.I. will be Gordon Groover and Jim Pease. Tim Beck and Laura Watts of Penn State Extension will be assisting them with our workshops.

Topics will be presented in modules, each lasting three hours. Four modules will be presented at each site. These will include:

- Introduction To Farm Business Computing. This will include basic skills to operate Windows-based software and a brief overview of hardware and software applications to agriculture.
- Introduction to Farm Record Keeping with "Quicken". Introduce you to keeping your farm records, check writing, statement reconciliation, and financial reports.
- Intermediate Farm Record Keeping. Provide you with details on customizing "Quicken" to your farm operation, enterprise accounts, and generating financial reports.
- Farm Management Using "Lotus 1-2-3". Introduce you to spreadsheet, budgets, and "what if?" analysis or Introduction to "Farm Trac", field and pesticide record keeping and reporting.

In case of insufficient registrations, we reserve the right to cancel these workshops and refund all payments in full. No promotion, exclusivere commendation, or endorsement of any product is intended or implied.

The Farm Management Computer Classroom on Wheels has been provided by generous donations from NationsBank, Virginia Corn Board, Virginia Soybean Board, Virginia State Dairymen's Association, Virginia Small Grains Board, Virginia Farm Credit Associations, Tennessee Valley Authority, and Virginia Cooperative Extension.

For more information, contact Roland Freund, Farm Management Agent, 1100 Claremont Road, Carlisle, PA 17013-8802, (717) 240-6500; or Tim Beck, (717) 757-9657; or Laura Watts, (717) 240-6500.

Agway, Universal Dairy Form Alliance

SYRACUSE, N.Y.—Agway Inc. and Universal Dairy Equipment Inc. have announced the creation of an alliance that will provide dairy farmers and Agway members throughout the Northeast with improved and expanded dairy equipment, installation and service as well as dairy supplies.

Agway provides service and dairy supplies through its network of service centers and route trucks throughout the Northeast. Universal is part of a worldwide network of companies offering equipment and supplies to the dairy industry. The new alliance, Universal Dairy Direct, will enhance service to dairy farms.

"Agway and Universal teaming up is not new. Agway has been our largest customer for some time now and we have enjoyed a very good relationship," said Walt Mahary, president of Universal." Our best growth in sales has come from the Northeast in the past few years as a result of our very successful partnership with Agway.

Don Schalk, vice president of Agway's agriculture and related services, and Bobby Fischer, vice president of Agway agricultural products, say that the alliance enhances the level of service Northeast farmers can expect and offers growth opportunities for both companies.

"This new alliance will improve dairy route sales and service and benefit the installation market," said Fischer. "The alliance with Universal makes sense for Agway, our customers and members."

The meeting in Leesport was the third of six regional forums designed to begin a national dialogue on the strength and promise of rural America. The forums, which are being held all around the country, will lead up to President Clinton's National Rural Conference at Iowa State University, in Ames, Iowa.

Ciba Seeds Receives Deregulation For Transgenic Corn

GREENSBORO, N.C.—Ciba Seeds (a division of Ciba-Geigy Corporation) was granted deregulation by the USDA of corn hybrids genetically engineered for protection against crop pests.

This represents the first time the USDA has deregulated a transgenic corn crop under its jurisdiction. The USDA has previously deregulated a transgenic corn crop under its jurisdiction. The USDA has previously deregulated genetically engineered tomato, soybean, cotton, squash, canola, and potato.

Commonly referred to as "Bt" or "ECB" corn, this particular product is genetically modified for protection against European corn borer, an insect pest that annually costs U.S. corn producers nearly $1 billion in yield losses.

Ciba Seeds has conducted numerous field trials with its ECB corn since 1992 under the USDA's regulations. Prior to this decision, ECB corn required USDA approval for interstate movement, importation, and environmental release. Deregulation by the USDA is based on extensive information collected through field trials and laboratory testing that was provided to the Department in a formal petition late in 1994.

Numerous favorable public comments supporting a positive decision by the USDA were submitted during the open comment period by corn growers, university professors, cooperative extension personnel, grower groups, and others.

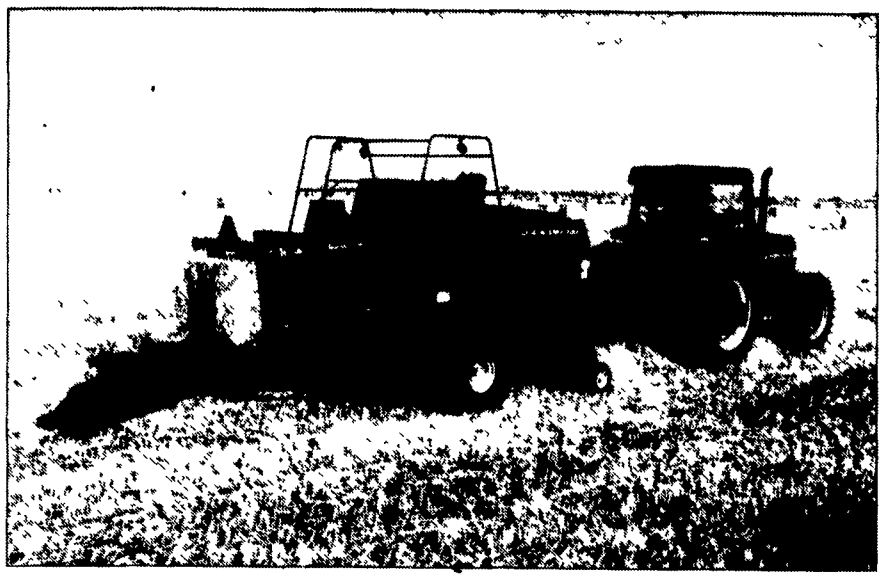
Best Values in New Equipment

We hear you.



Like most aspects of farming, baling has changed dramatically over the last 20 years. Once it involved rounding up a bunch of kids to load wagons; slowly, it has evolved into the era of one man and big round bales. And now, in response to your requests, this evolution continues.

With continued improvements, the Case International 8570 mid-sized rectangular baler and its big brother, the 8580 large rectangular baler, make baling more convenient than ever. Both are proof that we do indeed hear you.

These machines produce a bale size and weight up to 1,000 lbs. for the 8570 and 2,200 lbs. for the 8580 that's easy to stack, store, transport and feed.

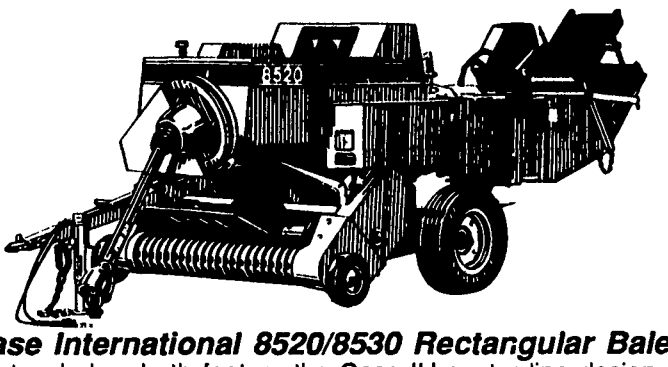
Formed with easy-separating flakes, these bales can be fed by hand, processed, or pulled apart by livestock. They're tight and dense for handling and shipping ease. And thanks to the design of the 8500 Series balers, they're packed with nutrition.

A wide, low-profile pickup reduces the loss of valuable leaves, while the pre-packer chamber keeps nutrients contained within the bale. And each pre-formed flake is exceptionally uniform in size and weight.

The Case International 8570 and 8580 rectangular balers. You asked for an evolution in baling, and we heard you. Find out more from your Case IH dealer today.

And ask about Total Product Support. It's the commitment that ensures the performance and overall value of every Case International product.

OUTSTANDING BALER PERFORMANCE MEANS GREATER NUTRITION AT AN ECONOMICAL PRICE



Case International 8520/8530 Rectangular Balers

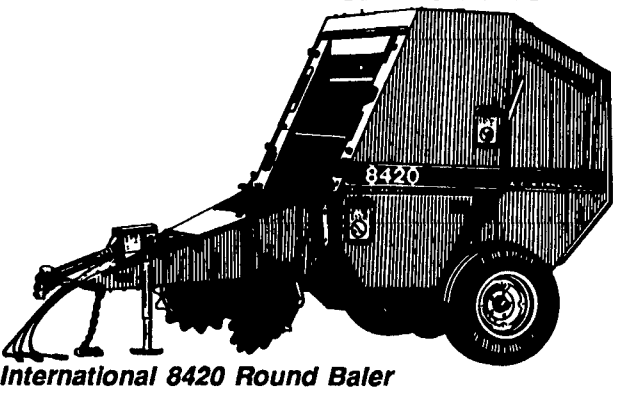
These two balers both feature the Case IH center line design. Eliminates turning corners with the crop to get it into the bale chamber, as is common with conventional designs. This saves valuable protein-rich leaves. Also saves time because you don't have to change from field to road position for transport.

Other outstanding features are:

- Low-profile baler design provides excellent visibility to the rear of the baler.
- Low-profile pickup... reduces crop lifting height, saving nutritious leaves.
- Hay goes straight into the unique prepacker chamber... regardless of windrow size.. for uniform flake and bale density.

Come in soon for the rest of the story!

THE COMPACT BALER WITH BIG-BALER FEATURES



Case International 8420 Round Baler

Produce consistent 39x54-inch bales using only a 30-PTO horsepower tractor. Yet reap the advantage of direct feed, open-throat chamber design so bales build fast, sure and tight. Other big-baler features:

- Aggressive starter roll so each bale starts right.
- Audible signal when bales are done and ready for wrapping
- Cam-actuated low-profile pickup, close tine spacing for clean sweeping of heavy windrows.
- Optional hydraulic twine wrapping system

Recent Findings About Mastitis

GEORGE F.W. HAENLEIN
Extension Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del.—Mastitis is gone.

How we wish this was so!

As a boy milking cows by hand, I learned about mastitis. People often said then that milking machines caused mastitis. Yet even though we milked by hand, our cows had mastitis, too.

When I went to a school for professional milkers, I learned that mastitits is the reaction to many different causes, including bacteria, yeasts, injuries, heat stress and hormonal effects.

I also learned how to operate milking machines properly so that they do not contribute to mastitis.

This was still in the times before antibiotics, when in addition to sulfa drugs, frequent milking-out was usually the primary treatment. Even in today's mastitis control, frequent milking-out is still very effective.

Then antibiotics—the panacea for most anything—arrived on the scene, and vaccinations were used effectively against mastitis.

It soon became apparent that identifying a specific cause from the multiple of mastitis-causing possibilities was required. Culturing of samples was necessary in order to supply specific treatments rather than a "shotgun" approach.

Today, we are much more interested in prevention than in treatments, not only because of the expense, but because of the level of resignation and frustration with the many causes of mastitis.

This situation is compounded by the variety of only partially effective treatments and treatments that are effective for only a limited time.

This is still the case although we have the most sophisticated milking machines ever, with differential pulsation speeds, quatro milk hoses, automatic take-offs, different size teat lines and automated disinfection between cows. We also have ever-new and varied antibiotics.

Still mastitis costs the U.S. dairy farmer approximately $200/cow/year on average, and it remains the number-one disease on the dairy farm.

We have learned the hard way that for every one case of clinical mastitis with visibly abnormal milk, we have at least four other so-called subclinical cases that do not have visibly abnormal milk, but that exhibit beginning inflammations.

These inflammations, which are being fought by the cow's defense system, can break out into clinical cases at any time and have already reduced normal levels of milk production.

The new powerful tool giving us all this information is the measurement of "somatic cell counts" in milk, an indication of the state of the cow's defense activities.

Not all somatic cell counts are the result of inflammation.

Older cows typically have more than young cows. Milk at the beginning and end of lactation is normally high in somatic cell counts, and so is foremilk and after strippings, in particular.

Also, cows in estrus have higher somatic cell counts in their milk, and summer heat stress will also elevate somatic cell count levels.

Nonetheless, monthly testing of every cow in a herd has become a powerful tool for reducing mastitis incidence. It has even led to reducing some typical pathogenic bacteria as causes of mastitis because they are encountered less frequently.

The recent issue of the newsletter of the National Mastitis Council (February-March 1995) gives some disconcerting information in this direction. Typically found mastitis-causing bacteria are Streptococcus agalactiae and Staphylococcus aureus.

Now it is reported that in "well-managed" herds other so-called coagulase-negative staphylococcus species are the most prevalent causes of mastitis.

They used to be considered "minor" pathogens and were ignored in control programs. Now it is fournd that these bacteria cause "mild" mastitis in 5-15 percent of udder quarters and raise somatic cell counts significantly.

They occur more frequently in first-lactation cows than in older cows, and more in the beginning of lactation. They are neither contagious nor "environmental," but are called "skin opportunists."

Fortunately, these pathogens are controllable with teat dip programs as was found in studies of prepartum heifers in very cold weather when teat dipping was interrupted during the dry period.

Different teat-dip preparations are now available to make prevention more effective. Iodine or chlorine have been the logical choices, but other chemical preparations are also useful.

A new compound, sodium dicholoroisocyanurate, provides hypocholorous acid.

Tested in Louisiana studies on 140 cows, Staphylococcus aureus was reduced by 74 percent and Streptococcus agalactiae by 65 percent without irritating teat ends or milker's hands.

But what about the stubbornly remaining 26 or 35 percent?

This is where we get the next generation of resistance to our treatments. Other preventive measures have to be found.

For some time the idea of disinfecting the teat end and actually sealing it against pathogenic invasions has been pursued by researchers, only to find that the ideal sealant material has not yet been discovered.

Iowa research with sealant antibiotic wax significantly prevented new infections, and even cured existing infections, during the dry period if the sealant stayed in place for several weeks. Industry still needs to meet this challenge with new inventions.

Meanwhile, let's get back to what can be done during the dry period.

There is news from New Zealand—that highly successful dairy land—about their new program called SAMM, under which they treat all dry cows if the herd bulk tank test is above 400,000 somatic cell counts. Below that level, only selective dry-cow treatment is recommended.

I wish that National Mastitis Council Newsletter could reach each dairy farmer regularly. For a small membership fee, much can be learned, especially in the area of dairy farm profits.

'Do Things To Stay In Business'

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — "I do think there is a future in milking and in the cow business if you're willing to do things to stay in business," said Darren Peachey of Peach View Farm.

Doing things to stay in business for Darren and his wife Caryn means building a tentative game-plan around principles you believe in, constant self-education to make informed decisions, working hard, and, of course, counting on a bit of luck.

Because of these things, Darren has been able to make his own respectable mark in the dairy industry, especially in the field of breeding, even though this just-turned 30-year-old has been farming on his own for only eight years.

Darren and Caryn are fourth-generation dairy farmers on his 100-acre home farm where they milk 42 cows. And because Caryn's father retired from milking this past year, they milk another 55 on her 120-acre home farm. The farms border each other along Route 655 in Big Valley, making a short, one-mile drive between milkings, at 3:30 both morning and evening on the home farm and at 5 twice a day on the other farm.

This unusual situation is temporary, Darren said. But there are a few things he wants to learn before combining the herds in the next year or two.

Darren believes he can manage for maximizing production and for marketing high demand cows. But with milk prices the same as they were 20 years ago, the only other alternative is to look at inputs."

"In the '70s, milk prices jumped, everyone got bigger and made good money. Milk prices are still the same. You only can get so much production and so efficient. We're looking to cut inputs."

The dual herd trial is one way for Darren to see what intensive grazing can do in regards to input costs and production.

"The herd on Caryn's farm is mostly on pasture. We've just started intensive grazing there this spring. They've been out three weeks and have gone up in production, but most do when put out in the spring. What will tell the story is in July and August.

"It's too hectic with two herds. But we're feeling our way through it (intensive grazing), being flexible, finding the best way to do it."

One production area Darren is particular about is making good quality forage. Working with an orchard grass/alfalfa mix, he believes in mowing on time and will "work like crazy" until it's done. Darren relies on custom help for planting corn, chopping silage, and drilling hay. For him there's no machinery investment and it cuts down on his time. Caryn's father helps chop hay as does Darren's farm help, Ben Hartzler. Helping Darren farm for almost four years, Ben owns eight cows and six heifers.

In spite of not paying much attention to herd average as a whole, Darren still maintains a herd average of between 24,000-27,000 pounds.

"I try to find the most profitable point of production. High production per cow has been that for me.

"I put a lot of emphasis on breeding because there's a lot more potential with registered cows than grade. That's not to say grade cows can't produce. The $6 investment to register is worth it for the potential, Every registered calf has opportunity to rise to the top.

"I breed for a good functional cow. You can't sacrifice type. You can always sell a good type cow. I look for cow families that have index potential, and use high index bulls. I look at udders, protein, feet and legs."

Darren's whole breeding philosophy centers on learning what works for others and, at the same time, breeding for something unique others don't have.

Although Darren admits luck is involved and that he's made his mistakes, his theory pays off occasionally as it did with Peach View Aerostar.

"Aerostar was a shot in the dark and we lucked out. She's from a high protein bull in Canada and I didn't know what he would do in the U.S. I've got quite a few bull contracts on her. We bought her dam, Y-Brookside Star (Ex 91 and Gold Medal Dam), five years ago at the State Convention at State College. She was consigned by Mark S. Yoder. We flushed her twice and ended up with one Leadman bull and two Leadman heifers. We sold one heifer as a calf and raised the Aerostar. Both heifers went very good as 2-year-olds. The bull went to Sire Power."

Aerostar follows on the heels of an Excellent 91 cow, Peach View Count Brooke, who stole several grand champion ribbons over the years. Still in the herd, Darren flushed Brooke once and got a Chesapeake calf. He gave the calf to his son Chase - his first calf.

But before taking a chance on embryo transfers, Darren offers this advice — make sure you're being successful milking cows before getting into extra work. He also says not to get discouraged, that not everything is going to work.

Whether it's intensive grazing or selective breeding, Darren spends time reading, attending meetings, and talking to people.

"He does a lot of homework. He reads a lot. He's on the phone all the time," Caryn said of Darren staying on top of things. "He goes to conferences and meetings. Having registered Holsteins has given us opportunity to meet a lot of good people."

Darren said his parents taught him to work hard, keep a positive attitude, have pride in what you do, and to give the good Lord credit. He believes these will influence his own children, 7-year-old Chase and 5-year-old Allyson.

"What we have we owe to our parents for giving us a chance to be on our own at such a young age. They gave us a chance to make mistakes and to learn from them.

"I'm big on time away, too. My parents gave me a chance to do things like sports and 4-H. We're youth sponsors at church and do things with them. It sure is nice having good help (Ben) to be able to go away and not worry."

As for the future, Darren believes being financially responsible now helps with debt reduction. He wants to build a profitable business he can pass down, and, he said, "I'll always try to breed a better cow."

Real Dairy Means Real Profit

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The number of items in the average supermarket has doubled in the last 10 years.

This is happening storewide, including the dairy case.

The majority of the products in the refrigerated section is real dairy products. However, non-dairy based refrigerated products, like dough, pasta and other fresh foods, are continually trying to seize space in the refrigerated case away from dairy-based foods.

But there is good news for the dairy industry — real dairy foods are the driving factor to the profitability of the entire case.

The American Dairy Association Mid East has a program designed to help supermarket managers to realize just that — the more space devoted to real dairy products, the more profit potential! The program is called "Category Management."

The category management program analyzes space allocation, product movement and profit potential of each product in the dairy case. It allows retailers to identify their most successful product mix and stock dairy cases with the products consumers want to buy most.

Retailers have been receptive to ADA Mid East's category management because the focus is on all dairy products, not a specific brand or product.

Nationally, dairy accounts for 8.2 percent of consumers' total grocery spending.

"The goal of the program is to make retailers aware that dairy products are profitable and deserving of increased space in the dairy case," says June Wedd, regional marketing manager for ADA Mid East. "By analyzing data specific to a retail chain, we can clearly show that dairy products are money-makers."

For example, even though the gross margin on milk is low, when you factor in the number of times every gallon of milk on the shelf sells, it's overwhelming how profitable the milk category becomes. By pointing out errors in space allocation, ADA Mid East has been able to get an additional 12 percent to 25 percent more shelf space for milk, leading to increases of as much as 11 percent in milk sales.

For more information about Category Management, please call June Wedd at (614) 890-1800.

Food, Ag Groups Ask Congress Not To Single Out Agriculture

WASHINGTON, D.C. — In a letter to the full House and Senate Budget Committees, nearly 100 food and agriculture groups urged that agriculture not be singled out for a disproportionate share of spending cuts as part of any budget proposal.

Over the past 10 years, farm program spending has been reduced from $25.8 billion to $8.5 billion — a two-thirds reduction — and now accounts for only one percent of total federal spending, the group pointed out. By contrast, total federal spending rose by 50 percent. If all other federal programs had taken the same level of cuts during that time, the U.S. would now be basking in a substantial budget surplus.

The groups told legislators how agriculture has played a major role in shaping America's economy. They noted that U.S. agriculture and food industries account for nearly 16 percent of the gross domestic product. In addition, U.S. consumers pay just eight percent of their disposable income on food — the lowest level in the world. Overseas, U.S. agricultural exports will account for more than $48.5 billion this year. That translates into $8 billion in federal tax revenues, an $18 billion positive trade balance, and $100 billion in economic activity.

The group also pointed out that unfairly targeting agriculture for disproportionate spending cuts could jeopardize its ability to compete in the global marketplace. Early hopes were that the most recent round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade would resolve trade disputes among the world's nations, they said. GATT made progress, but it did not eliminate all of the problems.

They explained that the European Union still maintains a three to one advantage over the U.S. in terms of its domestic support for agriculture and a six to one advantage in export subsidies. With nearly one out of six American jobs - a total of 21 million - attributable to agriculture, it is keenly important that the U.S. maintain a healthy agricultural industry, they indicated.

As required by the GATT agreement, the U.S. has already reduced its support for domestic farm programs by more than 20 percent. Further cuts would result in the U.S. unilaterally eliminating farm program protections, the groups told the budget committees. It would place our farmers at a gross disadvantage to their overseas counterparts.

In concluding the letter, the groups pointed out that farmers are not the only people who benefit from federal farm programs. Those who buy food, work in related industries, and wear clothes from home-grown materials all depend on a sound, healthy agricultural sector, the letter indicated.

Maryland Earns Grant For Organic Farming

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Lewis R. Riley has announced that the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Federal State Marketing Improvement Program (FSMIP) has awarded the Maryland Department of Agriculture a grant to determine the feasibility of establishing a cooperative to market organically grown local produce.

"Our organic farming program is growing in Maryland. We now have some 45 officially certified organic growers in the state and the number keeps growing. This grant will help us improve our efficiency in getting the organically grown local produce from the farmer to the consumer," Riley said.

The Maryland Department of Agriculture will match the grant, which is for $49,812. The money will be used to sustain the growth of this new agriculture program, which the Maryland Department of Agriculture started in 1991 as the Maryland Organic Certification Program.

"The growth in the retail business for organic producers in the last several years, shows that more and more people are interested in purchasing organically grown fresh fruits and vegetables. This grant will help to improve the marketing of these commodities," said Riley.

For more information on the Maryland Organic Certification Program and the FSMIP grant, contact the Maryland Department of Agriculture, Marketing Services, 50 Harry S. Truman Parkway, Annapolis, MD 21401, (410) 841-5770.

Holstein Association

NEWS

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Association Judging Schools are scheduled to be held mid-July, and registration is due June 26.

The state association offers two schools to all junior-aged people interested in dairy cattle, one in the western region of the state, the other in the eastern region. It is not reserved just for junior members of the Holstein Association.

Last year, because of concern over Bovine Viral Diarrhea (BVD), the western school was cancelled. This year, there are to again be two schools.

The schools teach basics of cattle judging through visits to different herds, discussions, actual judging and comparing of notes. The attempt is to cover the basics of animal evaluation and reasongiving.

Those who attend have the opportunity to learn terminology, animal and class breakdowns, and how to effectively give reasons justifying the judgements.

The schools are held on two consecutive days, running from noon to noon.

For those living close to the schools, who do not need overnight accomodations, the cost is $15, which covers school costs and an evening meal.

Those needing overnight accomodations, the cost is $25, which covers the school, an evening meal, and the cost of a hotel room.

A second member of a family who attends will receive $5 off the registration cost.

The western school is to be held July 10 and July 11, with the Butler County Holstein Club serving as host. Tom Smith, of Lancaster, is to teach the school.

The eastern school is scheduled for July 12-13, with the Bradford County Holstein Club serving as host. David Castrogivanni, of Montrose, is to teach.

In order to register, complete a form and mail it with a check made payable to the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, 839 Benner Pike, State College, 16801.

IPM Field Workshop June 21

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Potato leafhopper is one of the most destructive pests in field crops in southeast Pennsylvania. New stands of alfalfa are especially vulnerable.

A field workshop to train agricultural professionals in integrated pest management (IPM) techniques is scheduled on June 21 in Berks County. The goal of the workshop is to increase the skill of professional agriculturists in applying IPM principals when managing the pest.

Dennis Calvin, Department of Entomology, Penn State Cooperative Extension, and Mena Hautau, extension agent, will lead the workshop. Participants will actually scout an alfalfa field, identify the insect, and make decisions regarding management.

The National Resource Conservation Service will also present an overview of the Water Quality Incentive Program (WQIP) in Berks County for participants.

Registration for the workshop is due by Monday, June 19. No fee will be charged.

For more information about the IPM Workshop for Ag Professionals, contact Berks County Cooperative Extension, Berks County Ag Center, P.O. Box 520, Leesport, PA 19533, (610) 378-1327.

Farm, For Hershbergers, Is Good Family Life

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

MARTINSBURG (Blair Co.) — "Farming has a good future for those who can persevere," said Charles Hershberger.

Farm life in the Hershberger family dates back to the 1700s, when the family moved to Snake Spring Valley. The original Hershberger farm is still in the family.

Charles and his wife Dolores moved to their Dairy of Distinction Award-winning farm on April 16, 1957.

In the early spring, bright tulips and a rail fence lend a calendar picture quality to the farm. Calves chew contentedly in their new shed located behind the house where apple trees are in full blossom.

Charles' hobby, Morgan horses, is also housed in the calf barn. It's a hobby he's looking forward to enjoying more when he and Dolores retire in a few years.

"But we won't leave the farm," he said. "I'll still be here for advice and to help when I can."

"We came here with 20 cows," Dolores said. "That first year, hurricane rains swept through this area. The wind blew open the door into the feed room and several cows got into the chop and foundered."

"That was rough," Charles said. "But we never thought of bailing out. I've always said, when you get to the end of your rope, just tie a knot and hang on."

Farming Hershbergers include Charles, Dolores, son, Ross and his wife, Yvonne. Daughter, Christine Ebersole lives nearby and sometimes lends a hand.

Another daughter, Ellen Stuckey, was a former Bedford County dairy princess and another son, David, has a farm in Shippensburg.

Hershberger grandchildren total 14.

The Martinsburg farm, located near the borderline of Bedford and Blair counties, has 500 tillable acres. Ross is herdsman of 185 milking Holsteins, 95 percent of which are registered. He also does the breeding, always looking for good feet, legs, and udders when choosing bulls.

The cows are housed in a free-stall barn with side curtains and 160 stalls. A herringbone milking parlor was a welcome addition during remodeling in 1992.

Dry cows are separated from milk cows. All cows, regardless of milk output, are kept in one group. Latest milk production records show 20,261 pounds milk; with 762 fat and 649 protein.

Dad oversees the fieldwork. Almost all feed is raised on the farm and stored in three upright and three trench silos. There are two others that self-feed the 70 to 80 young cattle heifers. A TMR mixer is added to the diet.

"And," Ross said, "we are definitely anti-BST farmers which, I think, puts us with the majority."

Dolores is in charge of the 120 to 130 replacement heifers. And despite some arthritis in her hands, she helps with the milking until a school boy arrives about 4 p.m. to take over. Milk is shipped to Maryland and Virginia.

While growing up, all of the Hershbergers participated in 4-H shows. These days, time is limited with dairying production taking a precedent over shows.

However, there was time to win the central Pennsylvania championship last year with Rocky-Side Maverick Mae, "An excellent cow," said Charles. "We bought her at Carl Yoder's sale."

Two years ago, the Hershbergers also "cleaned up" at the Holstein show at Martinsburg, capturing the supreme champion and premier exhibitor awards.

Wise management allows for all to be community minded citizens. Ross serves on the park board at Martinsburg. Charles has served on the northern Bedford County school board for 34 years.

Ross, Charles, and their prize winning cow, Rocky-Side Maverick Mae.

He also is on the Dairy of Distinction Committee, is a member of the Pennsylvania Farmer Bureau, and the state Holstein association.

The family is active in the Faith Assembly of God Church at Roaring Spring, where Ross is the organist.

The younger Hershberger women have all enjoyed separate careers. Ellen is a music teacher, Yvonne taught special ed prior to the birth of her two children, and Christine is a registered nurse.

"Farming is a good family life," Dolores said, "It's hard work, but it's all worth it."

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

Linda Williams continues to be the Bedford/Blair County correspondent.

"Not much has changed," she said. "I've been writing for Lancaster Farming for nearly seven years and enjoy it very much. Doing the article on the Hershberger family was quite enjoyable, as I grew up with Charles' brother, Jerry."

Still an agent with DeArment Insurance in Bedford, Linda also loves to bike on her new Cannonedale bicycle (made in Bedford), and enjoys reading about the Civil War.

USDA Announces First Wetlands Reserve Program Signup

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)—Pennsylvania farmers will be able to sign up for the federal Wetland Reserve Program (WRP) May 30 through June 30 for the first time, said Janet L. Oertly, state conservationist for the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS).

"This is a great opportunity for farmers to receive financial incentives to maintain eligible areas as permanent wetland," Oertly said.

Under the voluntary program, USDA pays landowners for 30 year or permanent easements and cost-shares wetland restoration.

USDA will also reimburse voluntarily participating landowners for fees associated with filing the easement, including surveying the boundaries. Landowners agree to accept an easement price based on current agricultural land prices.

Eligible lands include all agricultural lands which can be restored to wetlands together with adjacent lands on which the wetlands are functionally dependent.

Other eligible land may include riparian areas that link wetlands protected by an easement or similar agreement, wetlands covered by an existing Conservation Reserve Program contract, or existing wetlands which may not otherwise be eligible.

During the signup, landowners register with the local NRCS office. Landowners retain ownership of the land and control access to it. Uses for eligible land include hunting, recreation, timber or firewood.

"The Department of the Interior's Fish and Wildlife Service will assist NRCS in determining the eligibility and environmental quality of the acres offered by landowners," Oertly said.

A state technical committee, which involves other federal and state agencies, will provide advice on such matters as easement values, rating criteria, cost-share levels, and eligible practices.

WRP, designed to protect and restore habitat for migratory birds and other wildlife, helps purify water supplies, and helps absorb flood waters.

About $92 million was allocated to enroll an estimated 118,000 acres into the program in fiscal year 1995.

"States will be given much discretion in selecting wetlands that meet specific state environmental goals, such as water quality, migratory birds and wildlife habitat benefits," Oertly said.

There are several changes in the program this year. For the first time, all 50 states will participate.

In addition, NRCS, formerly known as Soil Conservation Service, will administer the program for the first time.

For more information on the Wetland Reserve Program contact a local Natural Resource Conservation Service Office.

Balage: Promise, But Some Problems

JUD HEINRICHS
Penn State Professor
Dairy, Animal Science

Balage is rapidly becoming the hottest new topic on the forage-making scene in many parts of Pennsylvania. It was not uncommon last fall to see fields of an acre or more covered with wrapped round bales of silage — the stuff we refer to as balage.

Many producers see balage as a cure-all for their forage-making problems, yet as a dairy nutritionist, I see them as the potential cause of a wealth of problems. Many of these problems are not new, just the same old ones wrapped in a new container.

The bottom line is that all of the principles involved in making good forage in the form of hay crop silage for the silo or dry hay for the barn are the same for balage.

Two fundamental points must be understood:

1. All forage storage systems

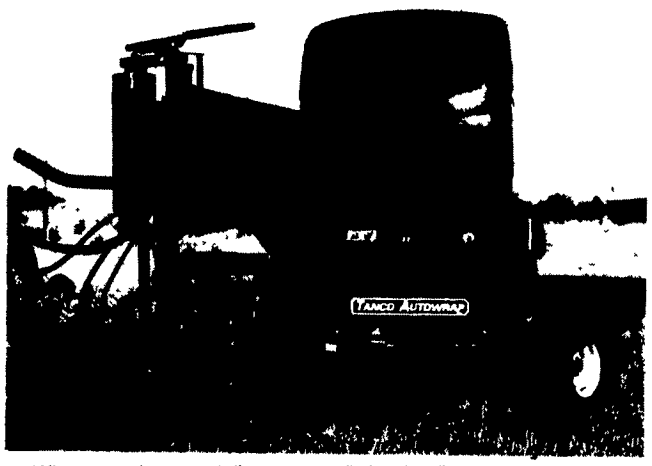
TANCO AUTOWRAP

THE WRAPPER THAT WRAPS BALES OTHERS WON'T

A complete range of Round, Square & Rectangular Wrappers.

Patented advantages like the unique "Deep Cradle" continuous full width belt, and fully supported turntable where four poly-urethane wheels provide Tanco's renowned even and balanced operation, even with overweight and misshapen bales. Quality wrapping and quality machines that has made Tanco among the World's leading manufacturers.



Why spend your dollars on a "job shop" type machine that requires a large tractor, needs near perfect bales to work properly, and is scary to see in operation.
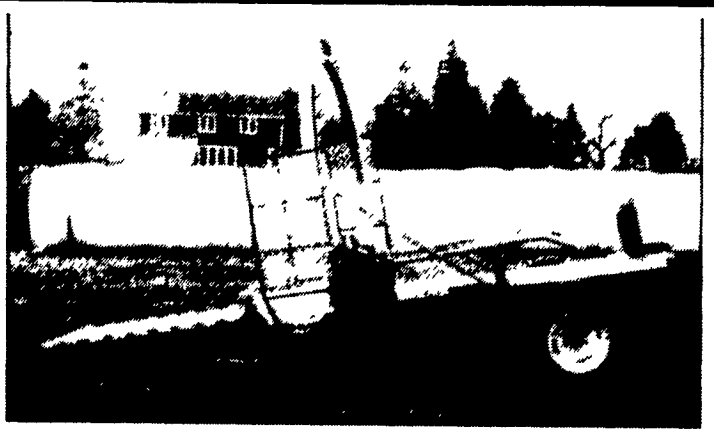
It takes a quality product to do quality work.

TUBE-LINE BALEWRAPPER



Gray's Patented Tube-Line Bale Wrappers offer the best of both worlds between individual wrappers and in-line bag machines.

By wrapping only the barrel of each bale, up to 40% less film is used, but since each bale is wrapped tightly, no air pockets can form between bales of unequal size.

Models available to accommodate all sizes of both round and large square bales.

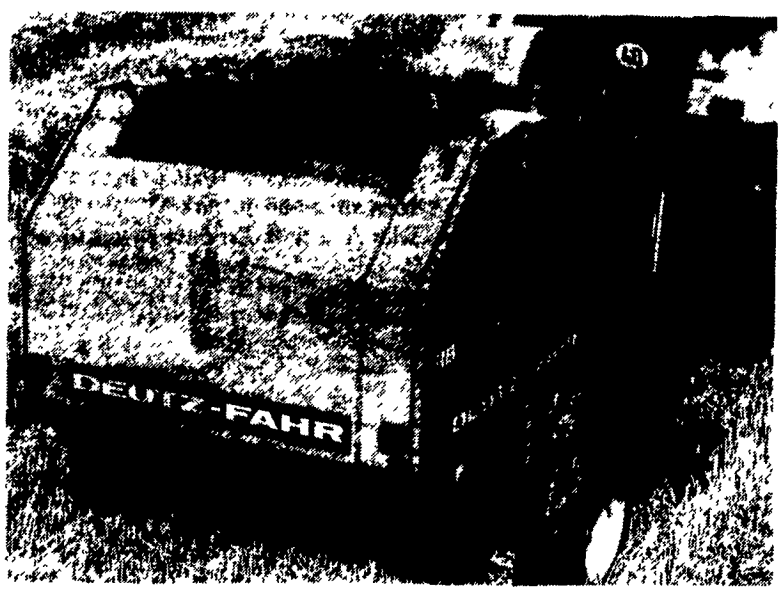
DEUTZ FAHR Round Balers

GREENLAND

Quality Equipment To Preserve Quality Crops.

Deutz-Fahr round balers have established a world-wide reputation for innovation, durability and performance.

Here Are Just A Few Reasons Why...



Standard Equipment on all Balers Includes:

- Hydraulically controlled pickup with dual pneumatic gauge wheels, baffle plate and galvanized scrapers.
- Efficient pickup tine spacing and open throat design to gently handle even large windrows without plugging.
- Internally re-enforced ribbed profile rollers, (17 on GP230, 22 on GP250) are designed to eliminate wedging and wrapping in wet crops, and reduce leaf loss in dry material. Ribbed profile rollers are less aggressive than large "dimpled" sheets.
- Driven roller shafts are splined, not keyed, for long life. No external chains and rollers bearings to replace either!
- Extra sturdy fixed chamber design:
  GP230 makes 4x4 bales
  GP250 makes 4x5 bales
- Central control, tractor mounted "Pilot Box" for electronic and hydraulic functions with both audible and visual indications.
- Single acting hydraulic remote is all that's needed for all hydraulic functions.
- Automatic chain lubrication system.
- Fully automatic "twin-fix" twine tying system, the fastest in the industry. (14 seconds!) (Optional net wrap attachment can be added any time)
- Bale ejector with extendable ramps.
- Safety light package.
- Wide angle PTO shaft
- Wide, heavy ply tires.

"Opticut" models available to increase high moisture bale density and bale feedability.

Check Out DEUTZ FAHR Balers Before you make a major purchase. You'll be impressed!

have optimal ranges of dry matter for the forage material to be harvested. The optimal range for balage is 40 percent to 50 percent dry matter.

2. Every time you change silos or cuttings within a silo, your cows go slightly off-feed (sometimes a lot), and the result is often a slight drop in milk production for a day or two.

Using balage from different bales that vary greatly in dry matter and nutrient content is like feeding forage from a different silo or cutting every day.

It is critical to harvest forage as balage at the proper dry matter content (40 percent to 50 percent). Forage baled any wetter than that significantly increases the formation of higher levels of butyric acid during the fermentation process. Butyric acid is less palatable and of lower feed value.

In addition, slime molds are more likely to form on wetter bales, leading to decreased intake by the cows. In contrast, balage that is too dry may not have enough moisture to ferment properly, leaving a material that is more vulnerable to spoilage, or that may result in heat damage in the core of the bale.

When feeding by the bale, changes in forage dry matter can alter the nutrient amounts that you thought you were feeding to your cows. For example, let's look at two 1,400-pound bales that will be fed to a group of 50 cows. On a dry matter basis, each bale tests 16 percent crude protein, but one bale is 50 percent dry matter and the other is 40 percent. On day one, the cows consume 16.8 pounds of dry matter per cow (840 pounds total) and 2.7 pounds of crude protein per cow from that forage. On day two, the cows consume 11.2 pounds of dry matter from the balage (560 pounds total), with only 1.8 pounds of protein. That is a wide variation in nutrient intake for high producing cows, especially if the balage is their only source of forage.

Consider also that a very different type and amount of acid formed during fermentation in the bale that was 60 percent dry matter than did the one with 40 percent. Frequent variation in the intake of levels and types of acids that enter a cow's rumen for further microbial breakdown and use by the cow tend to lower intake and digestibility while the population of microorganisms in the rumen adapts. Daily changes can make it nearly impossible for rumen microorganisms to completely use the nutrients taken in by the cow.

Several Susquehanna County farmers participated in a small study last fall and winter where they sampled every bale of balage fed to their herds for a four-month period. Most of them fed their cows only grain and balage. The illustration shows the daily dry matter variation observed in bale-to-bale dry matter as fed for a 29-day trial period.

The rate of variability of dry matter and nutrients on some of these farms was great. In fact, from a standpoint of properly feeding dairy cows, the rate was too great. Nutrient content of the bales also was significantly different. Bales ranged from 74 to 37 percent dry matter.

The key to making balage a success is to strive for a consistency of 40 to 50 percent dry matter in baled and wrapped forage.

Balage can solve many forage supply problems, but only if you harvest it at the proper maturity and moisture. It takes at least the same amount of management to put up good quality balage as it does any other forage. The advantages of balage are certainly outweighed by the disadvantages if the preparation is not properly managed.

Dairy Project Gains National Recognition

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A new farm-based initiative aimed at stemming the flow of agricultural pollutants into the Chesapeake and Delaware bays was recognized by the National Forum on Nonpoint Source Pollution as one of 25 projects throughout the country demonstrating innovative, nonregulatory approaches to reducing water pollution.

The initiative is the Dairy Network Partnership and is a coalition of farm and environmental organizations. Members of the Partnership include the Chesapeake Bay Foundation, the Rodale Institute Research Center, the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture, Penn State University and the Atlantic Dairy Cooperative. The Partnership project is funded by The Pew Charitable Trusts, the nation's largest private environmental grantmaker.

"The Dairy Network Partnership was selected because it represents a cooperative, locally based initiative to address the problem of nonpoint source pollution," said Jolene Chinchilli, Pennsylvania executive director for the Chesapeake Bay Foundation and co-chair of the Forum's Voluntary Initiatives Workgroup. "This is the only demonstration project in Pennsylvania, and one of only two in the Northeast recognized by the Forum."

Dairy farming is important to the economy and cultural heritage of southeastern Pennsylvania, but it can be a significant source of water pollution. The primary goal of the Partnership is to identify and implement new incentives that will encourage dairy farms to adopt farming practices that help protect water quality while supporting a strong farm economy.

Between 1987 and 1992, Pennsylvania lost 13 percent of its farms. To prevent further loss of farms to other land uses that are potentially more damaging to the environment, the Partnership will focus on practices that can improve the farmer's bottom line. One example is intensive grazing where livestock graze on small sections of pasture on a rotational basis. The result is improved grass growth, reduced erosion and runoff, increased forage supplies, and lower labor and production costs for the farmer.

The Dairy Network Partnership and the other 24 projects demonstrate how voluntary initiatives, education, and economic incentives can help combat nonpoint water pollution. The Forum, convened by The National Geographic Society and The Conservation Fund, is comprised of national leaders from business, the environment, government, media and philanthropy, including William C. Baker, president of the Chesapeake Bay Foundation, and Rebecca W. Rimel, president of The Pew Charitable Trusts.

Medicated Premix Approved For Use

NUTLEY, N.J.—Avatec® (lasalocid) Medicated Premix, a feed additive used successfully for many years by U.S. and international poultry producers, has been approved for use in turkeys by the Food and Drug Administration.

Produced and marketed by Roche Animal Nutrition and Health, a division of Hoffmann-La Roche Inc., Avatec is expected to become available to producers later this spring.

According to Roche, Avatec is the U.S. turkey industry's first and only "divalant" ionophore. "Avatec is effective against all three pathogenic Eimeria species of coccidia in turkeys—E. adenoeides, E. gallopavonis and E. meleagrimitis," said Dr. Annamaria Castiglia, a technical services veterinarian with Roche. "It protects against coccidiosis with minimal resistance and cross resistance."

As an added benefit, she said, Avatec does not depress weight gain, feed conversion or feed and water intake.

Avatec has also established a strong safety record. In product safety trials, feeding Avatec at levels three times the maximum approved dose for 16 weeks did not affect weight gain or feed conversion, she said. Toxicity has not been observed in turkeys treated with Avatec in the later stages of production.

"The product can be used in growing turkeys without worrying about problems associated with toxicity," Castiglia said.

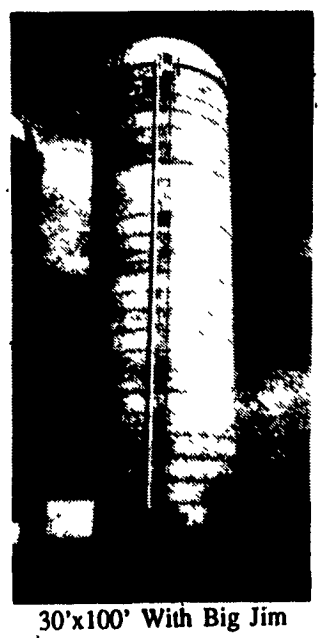
"THINK CONCRETE WHEN PLANNING FEED STORAGE"



30'x100' With Big Jim Drive Thru

"The Big Jim is doing a fine job bringing the feed down. We really believe the drive-thru, Big Jim System is worth anyone's consideration. It is costing more every year to grow forages and we feel our minimal quality and quantity losses are easily paying for the additional initial cost of this investment compared to that of a bunker. We are throwing no feed away and the cows are milking the best they ever have." (over 90 lbs. per cow.)
Signed/Atwater Farms
Rick Atwater

The Wheeling 2 oz. Seal of Quality coating represents the best of the best in the Wheeling Corrugating line of premium galvanized roofing and siding. Every panel that carries the 2 ounce coating assures you are getting the toughest, the most durable, the most corrosion resistant galvanized sheet available in today's marketplace.

2oz. Seal of Quality Wheeling

Genuine Old-Time Quality
Every Wheeling 2 oz sheet is manufactured from heavy gauge steel topped with an extra thick zinc coating and formed into profiles that contribute strength and good looks Build with a Wheeling 2 oz sheet and you'll be working with the kind of durability and dependability that s been a standard in the industry for almost 100 years

The Proof is in the Process
The performance behind the Wheeling 2 oz Seal of Quality is possible because of Wheeling s patented Cook Norteman manufacturing process This technology allows a more consistent quality product and a more uniform coating with unsurpassed zinc adhesion The process takes more handling and more time but the end result is a super premium panel that has its own limited 20 year performance warranty

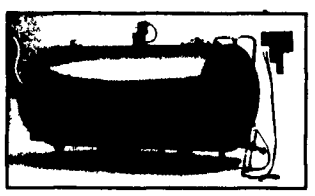
MUELLER DAIRY FARM EQUIPMENT

Scroll-Compressor Technology

New in 1994



You may pay less for some dairy farm equipment... but it can cost you more!

Equipment accounts for only 1% of the milk's cost of cooling milk

In the long run, total operating costs of a Mueller milk-cooling system are generally substantially less than those of "bargain-brand" milk-cooling equipment.

Example	Mueller	Competition
Cost of equipment	$31,000	$28,000
Cost of electricity @ .08 kW for 12,000 lbs milk/day for 10 years	$17,550	$22,850
Total operating cost for ten years	$48,550	$50,850
Savings	$ 2,300

LLAMAS LLAMAS LLAMAS

If you've been considering starting in llamas, or having a llama for a pet, why not stop in to see our herd.

Our young males start at $500, our weanling females at $2,500, our pregnant females at $3,500. A deposit will hold any of our crias (baby llamas) for you.

We prefer selling off the farm, rather than subjecting our animals to the stress of auctions.

All of our llamas are registered with the International Llama Registry. Some of the finest wool and blood lines can be found in our herd, including Otter Creek Harold.

All llamas can be halter led, and are gently trained by teenagers.

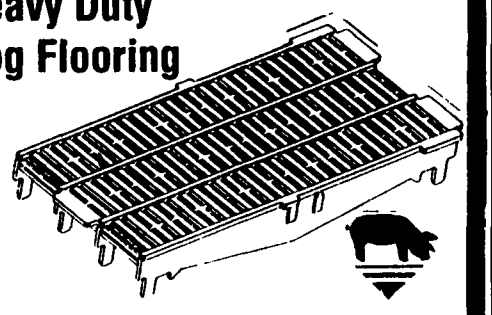
REPLACING HOG FLOORING? CONSIDERING NEW CONSTRUCTION?

☑ CHECK OUT Polygrate™

Heavy Duty Hog Flooring



Time Tested and Proven
This style of POLYGRATE was first introduced in 1981. Over the years Farocx has continued to refine this product. POLYGRATE is one of only a few "World Class" floors that has stood this test of time.

Outstanding Traction
POLYGRATE'S unique "high-low" finger design provides outstanding traction for pigs of all sizes, while enhancing safety and comfort.

- ◆ POLYGRATE'S rounded corners minimize injuries. The edges are beveled providing a smoother, safer surface that promotes comfort, too.

What Does This All Add Up To?

- ◆ More piglets survive until weaning
- ◆ Less splay/spraddle leg problems
- ◆ Heavier piglets at weaning
- ◆ Better conditioned sows at weaning

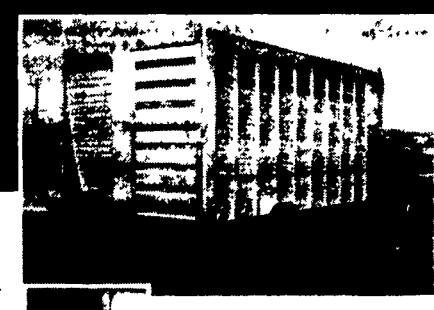
Agriculture Moves on EBY Bodies



M.H. Eby custom-builds aluminum truck bodies for the agri-transportation market. Nobody offers more sizes and options in:

- LIVESTOCK BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of heights and widths.
- GRAIN BODIES - Lengths to 24'; landscape and general purpose dumps to 12'.
- FLATBED BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of 5 widths.

For greater payload capacity, Eby's aluminum design is equal in strength to steel and up to 40% lighter. Our corrosion-resistant components never need painting. That means minimum maintenance, improved appearance and higher resale value.

Eby products have superior standard features. And we offer custom options for virtually any application. Agriculture is your business- building bodies to haul it is ours.

Let EBY custom build one for you.

Site Evaluation For Dairy Housing Systems

JOHN TYSON
Asst. Erie Co. Agent
ROBERT GRAVES
Professor, Ag Engineering
Penn State

A successful dairy production system starts with a good site. Whether you are expanding an existing dairy or building a new dairy, a few basic steps are important to assure a site that is good now and for many years into the future. The goal is to provide a site that allows for growth and prosperity of the operation in the years to come. Plan investments to allow you to build towards the future, not just spend more money on continuing the past. Answers to the following questions are needed before you proceed to evaluate sites for dairy construction.

•Why is the project being considered? Is it to allow for another member to be brought into the operation, is it simply that the operation must expand to be economically viable, or are the old facilities worn out and replacement is required?

•If you could build your dream operation, what would it be? What are logical steps that can be taken to reach this goal?

•What are your goals for the next 5, 10, and 15 years? This is needed to give an idea of approximate sizes for needed facilities. The site needs to be large enough to allow room for future changes and expansion. Consider the amount of change that has occurred on dairy farms in the last

Employee Receives Recognition

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) employee, Leonard (Chuck) Quietzsch, Jr. of Mifflintown, was presented an award on May 9 by USDA officials for significant services to his local community.

As part of Public Service Recognition Week ceremonies, Quietzsch was recognized for serving as a 4-H leader for 20 years and participating in the 4-H Seeing-Eye Club.

Quietzsch has been a 4-H leader for 20 years, being involved in the Dairy Club, Wildlife, and Photography clubs. He is assisting with the 4-H Seeing-Eye Club and is raising a seeing-eye puppy which will be given to a sightless person once completely trained.

This recognition was part of a statewide USDA ceremony celebrating the continuing efforts of USDA employees to serve their home communities. They not only serve rural customers in business matters every day, but also go home at the end of the work day and continue serving their communities by volunteering their time in many other ways.

Quietzsch is an assistant county supervisor in the USDA Rural Economic and Community Development (RECD), Bellefonte County Office (formerly Farmers Home Administration).

Cheryl L. Cook, acting state director for RECD, said "Chuck's volunteer work to his community shows his excellent character, integrity, and desire to help others — we are very proud of him."

N.E.DHIA Tries New Reports

ITHACA, N.Y. — Northeast Dairy Herd Improvement Association is in the process of developing a new records system for its 4,500 members, according to a news release.

Although testing of software to allow for faster and more customized service is only recently underway with six of its field technicians participating, the N.E.DHIA general manager, Nelvin Empet, has already announced that the software will be able to provide dairymen with "... more complete service at the farm and more flexibility in meeting member and Agriservice needs now, and into the next century."

The software is called "Day-One," according to the news release. It is to be fully compatible with Dairy Comp 305, and Scout herd management software.

The goal is to allow field technicians the ability to leave more reports on the farm, and to be able to customize those reports.

According to the news release, "The upgraded Day-One software has virtually no limit to the different kinds of management information that it can generate."

Other goals, whether or not achievable, include sharing the data stored on computer disc.

According to the association, using software that is widely compatible will allow field technicians to leave a diskette on the farm for a consultant or veterinarian to read into their software.

Further, the association projects that members will be able to choose the type of service they want, how often they test, which mail-back reports they receive and what types of laboratory services they want.

June National Dairy Month

We're proud to recognize the local dairy farmers as we celebrate June's National Dairy Month. Nourishing a nation is a big job, and these people accept the challenge each day. Their efforts allow us to enjoy the best in nutrition and quality at the most competitive prices possible, and we're proud to congratulate them on a job well done.

•How is the area surrounding your farm likely to change in the next 5-15 years? Will the area remain agricultural or are nonagricultural users creeping into the area?

For good planning, you need a description (maps, photos, words) of all possible sites and locations along with an evaluation of any existing facilities and their expected use. A simple map of the possible building sites is a must! This should indicate existing buildings, roads, streams, property lines, utility lines, drainage ways, wells, neighbors, and any other sensitive areas. With these resources and a team approach, site evaluation can be done very efficiently and effectively.

Resources for Site Evaluation

There are several resources available for site evaluation. Conservation maps, ASCS aerial maps, topographical maps, and soil survey maps not only provide valuable information, but give a different perspective of the site to be evaluated. Many farms have aerial display photographs that provide a good view of the existing farmstead and potential nearby sites.

Various people with different expertise can provide more ideas and view points than one person alone. Outsiders may see possibilities that you have missed. A team approach to site evaluation is very helpful. This team may consist of yourself, a cooperative extension agent, someone from your local Natural Resource Conservation Service (NRCS) or Conservation District office, a design engineer, your veterinarian, and your lending institution or financial advisor.

Site Characteristics

After identifying possible sites, develop a list of their characteristics. These preliminary sites are simply picked as possibilities and should not be ranked in preference until the last step of the evaluation process. Evaluate each site against a list of site factors. This list should include: water, drainage, required area, off-farm factors, utilities and access, climate, wastes, regulation/zoning, and personal preferences. Once the list of characteristics has been established, the selection of a site is more logical and objective.

Essential Site Factors

Sites that cannot meet the following four essential site factors should be eliminated.

1) Water: Water needs to be available at the site in the quality and quantity needed. If this cannot be met don't even consider the site. Twenty to twenty-five gallons per day per cow of drinking water is needed in addition to that used in the milking center and household.

2) Drainage: An animal facility needs to have proper surface and subsurface drainage. The topography of the site needs to allow clean water diversion away from the animal facility. A slope of 2 to 6% will provide drainage without erosion. Good subsurface drainage will help prevent frost heaving of foundations. Don't build in a hole!

3) Required area: This includes more than the size of the animal housing unit. The feed area, machine storage, vehicular traffic, water and electric upgrade, youngstock housing, manure handling, and adequate separation from neighbors must also be considered. Room will be needed to collect and control contaminated water from the animal units. Separation of the buildings is needed to prevent fire spread and allow good natural ventilation. How much grading will be required to develop an adequate building site?

4) Off-farm factors: These factors include the surrounding environment such as urban developments, building codes, and pollution requirements. The site needs to meet building codes and pollution requirements and should provide isolation from the surrounding environment.

Other Site Factors

Several other site factors are also important and may vary with different building systems.

1) Access: How hard will it be to construct drives and lanes to the new facilities? Is there access to crop fields for bringing in crops and hauling our manure? Fire prevention and protection, safety, and security are often related to access.

2) Utilities: What are the distances that electric, gas, and telephone lines need to be run?

3) Restrictions: Does the site have any easements, power lines, buried pipelines, or buried fuel tanks that may cause problems?

(814) 863-0471, TDD (814) 865-3175

4) Climate: What are the prevailing wind directions in the summer and winter? Is the site prone to drifting snow problems? Will excessive rainfall cause any problems? Will buildings be exposed to summer breezes for optimum cow comfort? Can the orientation of the building allow the sun to warm and dry surfaces in the winter, but provide shade in the summer?

5) Manure and Liquid Wastes: Can the site conform with all environmental regulations? Is the topography satisfactory for control of runoff from outside animal lots? Is there a satisfactory location for a manure storage to be built now or in the future? Can manure flow by gravity to the storage or will pumping be necessary? A soils evaluation will help tell what type of manure storage can be built on the site. Are prevailing winds, air drainage, and distance to sensitive areas such that the odors are directed any from sensitive areas?

6) Relation to Existing Facilities: Does the location of the site in relation to existing buildings allow incremental expansion? How far will the cows need to be moved and over what type of terrain?

Steps for Evaluation

Use 5, 10 and 15 year goals, space required for building systems, and site factors to work through the following four steps.

1) Make a scale map, including existing facilities if applicable, and locate the possible sites for construction. Include slopes, soil types, and size. Also, identify direction to fields, roads, off-farm influences such as neighbors, and critical environmental areas.

2) Use the four essential site factors to evaluate possible sites. This process may eliminate one or more of the possible sites identified.

3) Use the remaining site factors to finish the list of characteristics. See the check list on the back page of this fact sheet.

4) From this list of site characteristics the selection of a preferred site can be determined.

With the site selected, check the layout of the desired facilities to see if they will fit. This is an iterative process, and some changes may need to be made in the facilities layout to fit them to the site. The facilities and dimensional sizes used in the site evaluation were only to give a rough idea of size requirements and may need altered to conform to the site. However, if compromises are made to the point that the facilities are no longer useful, then another site needs to be considered. After a layout is determined, stake out the buildings on the site. This will give a much better feeling for how the facility will look. Do areas left for drainage ways, turning trucks and equipment look adequate?

Site evaluation is not a process that will be done in an hour, but it is a very important step in a farm building project. The site selected will affect future decisions for years to come and should reflect the long-term goals of your operation. Site evaluation is best done with a team approach to bring out as many ideas and view points as possible. Some extra time planning now will save headaches and money in the future. Make your mistakes with pencil and paper, not concrete and re-bar. Remember, be sure to leave room for future growth or changes. A farmstead is always changing. Plan this project to be the first step in your future modern dairy production system, not just an addition to the past!

8315 Disc Mower Conditioner

15 Foot Swing Frame, Pull Type

First Of Its Kind

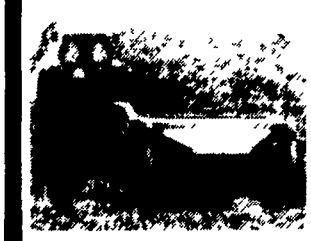
The 8315 is the first mower conditioner of its kind to combine a center-pivot tongue and mechanical drive with 15'3" (4.65m) rotary disc cutting performance. With its wide cutting width, the 8315 is designed to handle large acreage hay production.

A hydraulic center-pivot tongue and swivel gearbox hitch enables the 8315 to cut fields in both directions or turn corners with ease. Its rotary disc header features a heavy-duty spur gear cutterbar and 10 oval cutting discs that are powered by a belt and gearbox drive. High-speed discs are heat treated spring steel for durability and spin at 2,600 rpm to slice through the toughest crop conditions. Header tilt is also hydraulically controlled from the cab.

The wide 110" (2.79m) steel-on-steel intermeshing conditioning rolls feature automatic separation for non-plug operation, and adjustable roll spacing and pressure. A swath baffle and adjustable windrow forming shields are standard.

See Binkley & Hurst Today In Stock For Delivery Now!

FULL-FEATURED PERFORMER



The Case International 8340 mower conditioner offers you features in a 9 foot plus cutting width that you'd only expect to find as options, or on a larger more expensive machine.

Features like a heavy box-beam frame and tongue that you hydraulically position from the tractor. Quickly steer around field obstacles or switch between field and transport positions. Low maintenace describes the 1700-stroke per minute sickle. Sickle sections bolt-on for quick and convenient replacement.

A five-bat reel feeds the crop uniformly into the conditioning rolls. Rolls automatically separate to reduce the chance of plugging

And there are even more features that make the Case International 8340 a truly deluxe high performance mower conditioner. Stop in and see them all.

Your Best Buy In Balers is From Binkley & Hurst Bros., Inc.

The Baler That Works!

WHY STRAIGHT IS BETTER THAN SIDEWAYS . . .

Reason #1 Transport width ranges from 7'11" to only 8'88" on our 8550 Model. Conventional balers are generally 1-foot wider in transport.

Reason #2 No need to widen our baler out once you're in the field or narrowing when leaving the field. The conventional baler must be narrowed and widened. Reduced time and effort means money.

Reason #3 Never a need to pick up bales when opening a field and cropping them on the ground — you can even leave the bale thrower on and drop the back chute. Since the baler and tractor straddles the windrow, the bales dropped on the ground from previous rounds never interfere with the operation.

Reason #4 Gauge wheels are mounted on both sides for better performance. Not so with conventional balers

Reason #5 Our pickup is half the height of conventional balers. This means less leaves are lost because less travel distance up and over the pickup is required. An optional hydraulic pickup lift is even available

Reason #6 Conventional balers use high maintenance cross feeders or sweep arms to move hay to the chamber. Our baler feeds hay from the pickup straight into the chamber by the use of a simple stuffer mechanism. Leaves don't fall to the bottom of the chamber and later fall out the back. Due to our design, leaves are placed evenly throughout the bale — the leaves are not given time to settle to the bottom.

Reason #7 Due to our design, our plunger stroke distance is 25-30% less than conventional balers. Example: John Deere 327, 337, 347 and 467 Models = 30" stroke; Case IH 8520 = 21.6" stroke and a high of 23" on our 8550. The result: Less wear, less side to side stress force and less repairs!

Reason #8 The clearance of our needles from the ground far exceeds conventional balers due to the high position of our chamber. This translates to less breakage and bending of the needles due to hitting high places in the field, etc.

Reason #9 We have equal baler weight distribution on both carrying wheels for easier handling and less side pull on hills

Reason #10 The distance from the end of our bale chamber to the thrower belts is enough so that the thrower doesn't fight the bale, i.e., the bale is not still wedged in the chamber when the thrower first contacts the bale

Reason #11 Our bale edges are sharp and corners are square on all types of hay - excellent when stackers are used or hay is hauled by truck.

Reason #12 Proven and reliable Deering type knotters on all center line balers

CASE IH 2100 Series Axial Flow Combines

DO IT!

WITH DEPENDABILITY

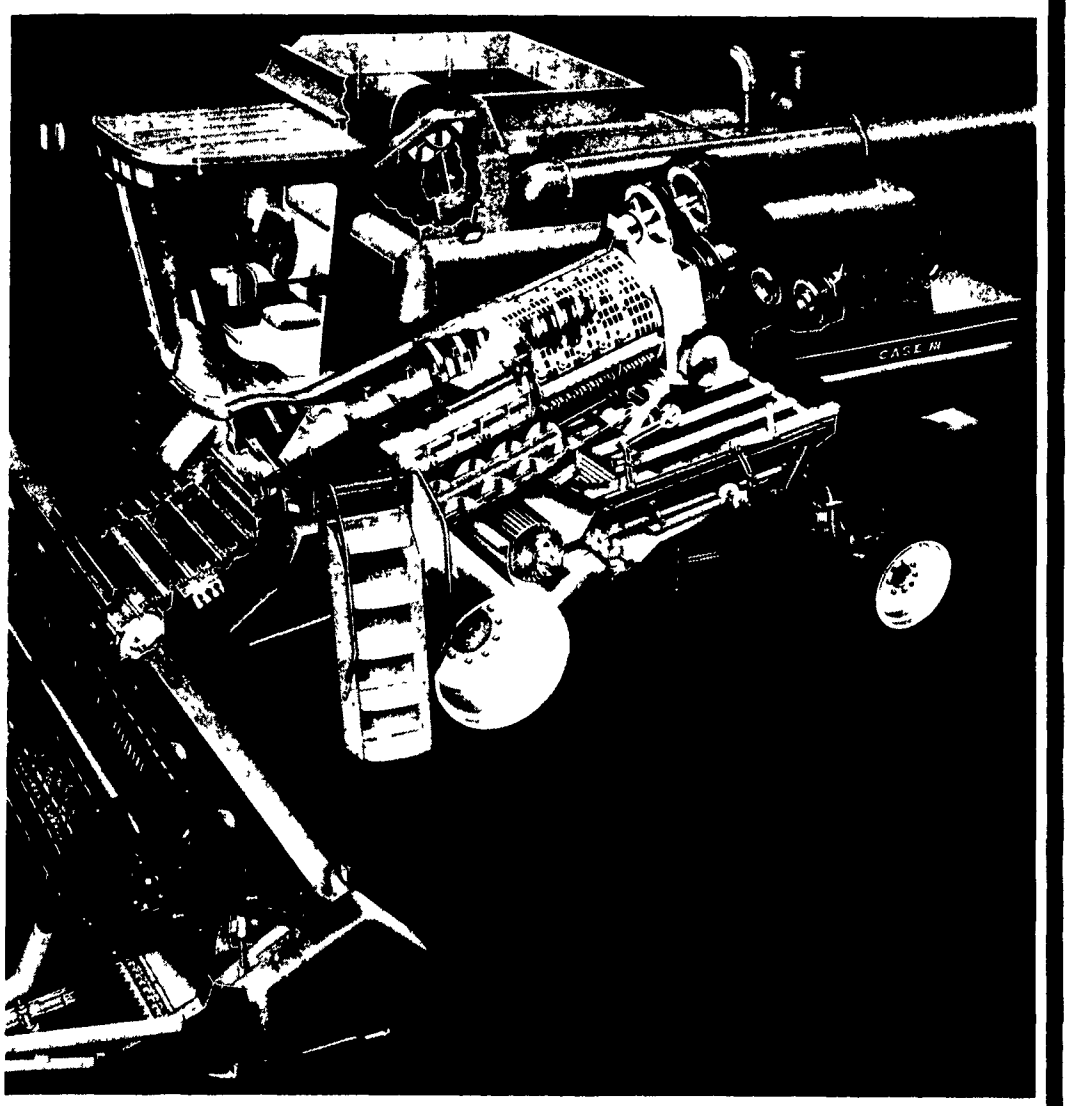
... Moving when the grain and weather conditions are fit: that is what the CASE IH Axial Flow combines do. And they are built tough to last. Many are running over 5,000 hours. How long will an Axial Flow last? We do not know yet.

WITH RELIABILITY

... Compared to conventional or other style Rotary combines, the Axial Flow puts more premium quality grain in the tank and leaves less grain in the field. Why else do most all growers of food quality corn own CASE IH Axial Flow Combines?

WITH COMFORT

... The new cab on the 2100 Series makes your long days seem shorter, because the controls you use most are on the HYDRO-PROPULSION Lever which is attached to the seat. You have less operator stress - therefore, more personal productivity per day.



WITH A COMBINE DEALER

... C. B. HOOBER & SON INC. HAS SPECIALIZED IN COMBINES SALES AND SERVICE SINCE THE AXIAL FLOW WAS INTRODUCED IN 1977. (7) HOOBER SERVICEMEN ARE FACTORY TRAINED TO WORK ON AXIAL FLOW COMBINES YEAR ROUND - NOT JUST DURING COMBINE SEASON. AND OUR MECHANICS SERVICE OVER 300 AXIAL FLOW COMBINES. CAN YOU GET THAT KIND OF SUPPORT ANYWHERE ELSE?

Get the Advantage of the Unbeatable COMBINE COMBINATION: The CASE IH Axial Flow Combine and HOOBER Service.

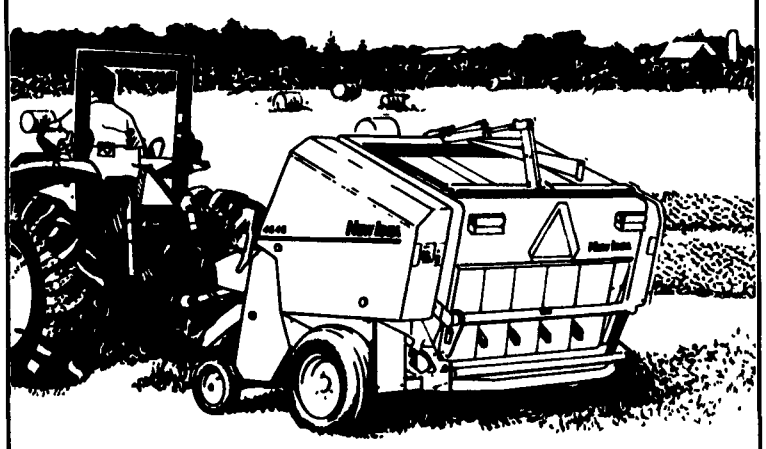
Dense Shell Won't Sag



New Idea bales won't sag like others.

- Fixed chamber design creates bale with dense shell that won't sag. New Idea bales keep their shape longer.
- Wide, endless belts handle leaf material carefully. More nutrient-rich leaves make it to the bale, fewer end up on the ground.
- Belt design is more reliable, with less downtime due to repair.
- Durable machine keeps working cutting after cutting, season after season.
- Big, open throat lets you start bales easily with less plugging.
- Three models available:

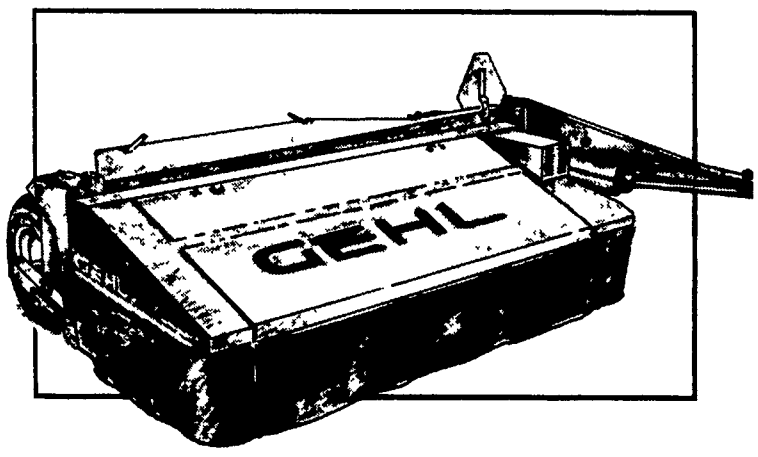
COST CUTTERS



Gehl all-new disc mower conditioners to cut your crop down to size, fast and easy. The DC2360 has 8 discs and a 10½ foot cutting width.

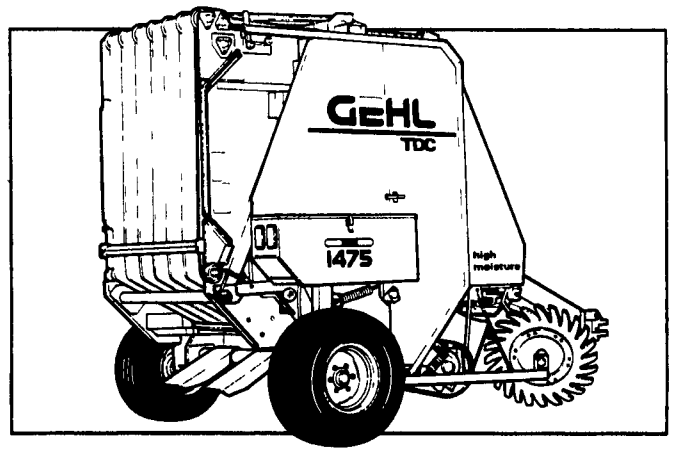
- Standard hydraulic tongue – Makes it easy to position the unit without leaving the tractor seat.

Total Bale Control



...With Gehl's 1475 high moisture baler.

- Total density control (TDC) - Lets you custom-build bales according to changing crop and moisture conditions for maximum nutrient value
- Bale control system - Monitors complete baling function
- Two models - Make bales 3'9" wide and up to 5' in diameter, or 5' wide and up to 6' in diameter
- Quick-wrap option - Speeds your baling operation and helps preserve hay quality
- Constant velocity driveline - For smooth operation
- Electric dual twine wrap - With manual or auto control
- Low horsepower requirement - Lets you bale with a tractor as small as 40 horsepower

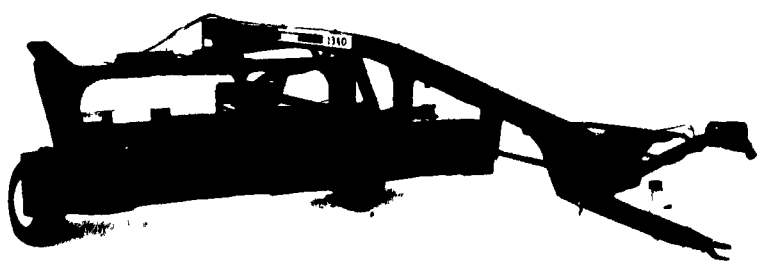
FOR WHEN THE GOOD EARTH ISN'T SO GOOD.



This Rotary Disc Mower Conditioner will get you out of any tight spot in a hurry.

The 1340's innovative 12' Center Pivot is designed for fast cutting, and its long 110" conditioner makes for even faster drying. You'll get unmatched maneuverability with the 1340, and it's easy to set for swathing or fluffy windrows.

A 12' cutting width and a revolutionary mechanical drive line guarantees top efficiency. All 16 high speed swingaway knives are designed to cut right through tough spots in damp and problem fields. Making anthills and gopher mounds history. Mounted on low-maintenance rotary discs, the knives are reversible for twice the life.

See your AGCO/Hesston dealer listed here and ask about our flexible financing plans for the 1340, best of all, it's backed by the AGCO Warranty Program.

HESSTON AGCO THE PRIME LINE

LEAVES SHOULD FALL AFTER SUMMER. NOT AFTER YOUR BALER.

Most of hay's nutrients are in its leaves. The more leaves, the better.

That's why the new Hesston 555 Round Baler has a low-profile pickup. It reduces leaf loss, protecting the nutrient and feed value of your crop.

There's our 555S, standard, or the 555T—a semi-automatic version that lets you release the bale right from your seat. Both produce bales 4 ft. wide and up to 75" in diameter. Plus, each has dual twine arms for faster tie-off. So you get long-lasting field performance, improved efficiency and better quality bales.

See the 555S and 555T at your AGCO Hesston dealer today, along with a wide selection of equipment for all your hay and forage needs. And ask about flexible AGCO financing.

CLAAS
Thorough hard work

Grass silage is top quality and high energy forage. The CLAAS pickup makes sure that it is clean and none of it is left on the field. Its high power design is characterized by the cranked spring steel tines, the roller crop press and the intake auger with its high auger flights to transport a smooth crop flow to the machine. The CLAAS Contour system keeps the pickup floating over the ground, minimizing wear and tear on it.

The pickup follows ground contours by means of adjustable support wheels, enhancing a clean, thorough harvest.

Bumps and ground irregularities leave the CLAAS pickup unimpressed. It is flexiable and hugs the ground. It copmpensates in travel direction and laterally, being both spring balanced and flexibly mounted.

GOODYEAR MONTHLY MAINTENANCE TIP

USE OF A RIM WIDER THAN RECOMMENDED

Use of a wider rim results in flattening of the tread face. This feature may improve traction in some looser soil conditions. In hard soils, however, the flatter tread penetrates less effectively and tractive effort is reduced. Additional stresses concentrated in the shoulder area tend to increase the rate of shoulder treadwear. By spacing the tire beads farther apart the sidewalls are forced to flex in an area lower than normal and this can result in circumferential carcass breaks and/or separation.

SUSTAINABILITY AND ANIMAL AGRICULTURE

Lowell L. Wilson
Professor Of
Animal Science
And Linda L. Smith
Communications Specialist

Attention to the sustainability of farm animal production systems has increased during the past several years, partly because of relatively low prices for almost every animal-derived commodity.

Dr. Lowell L. Wilson, professor of animal science, recently summarized how the concept of sustainability relates to various farm animal systems.

Wilson began by pointing out that the idea of sustainability on U.S. farms is not new. It is, however, being approached in novel ways.

"We must not lose sight of the various components of sustainability," he said. "Farm operations must be sustainable in the modern-day sense."

Applied to farm animal systems, sustainability requires the following essentials:

- The operation must remain profitable
- The system must be environmentally sound
- It must provide for basic human needs
- Methods must be socially acceptable
- New farming methods must enhance the quality of farm life.

Profitability

The primary requirement of any farm operation is that it must be profitable. Farming is, after all, a business, and the essence of business is profit. A sustainable operation must, however, begin to address the question of long-term versus short-term profitability.

This may require closer attention to the current cost of inputs or resources as well their continued availability at a reasonable cost. In other words, if a resource becomes so scarce that the price increases beyond affordability, then using that resource does not conform to the definition of sustainability, and another resource must be substituted.

Environmentally Sound

The farming system must be environmentally sound. That is, the operation's resources must be renewable.

Crop rotation is an excellent example of ensuring that soil continues to be a renewable resource. Without the proper nutrients being put back into the land, it ceases to support the necessary crops and fails the test of sustainability. If valuable resources such as phosphate and oil reserves are eventually depleted — and they will be without conservation — sustainability (hence, profitability) of the farm operation will become impossible.

Provide Basic Needs

Animals are used for many purposes, including recreation and companionship, but society must not lose sight of their most basic and unique contribution, that of providing the raw materials for food and the many non-food products that Americans use daily.

Socially Acceptable

With only about two percent of the U. S. population now living on farms, people have become so removed from the practices of animal agriculture that many no longer understand the processes by which food finds its way from the farm to the dining table.

This, coupled with increasing attacks from animal activists, dictates the importance of continued attention to the care and handling of our farm animals and to the need to educate the public on the facts about acceptable farm animal practices.

Socially unacceptable practices eventually will result either in the loss of markets or legislation that will destroy our ability to farm profitably.

Enhance Quality Of Life

Sustainable farm operations seek to enhance the quality of life on the farm for the animals and the people who care for them.

For instance, increased use of pasture coupled with seasonal grazing may not only result in improved health for the animals, but also in smaller feed bills and a much needed break for the farm family during winter months.

Optimize Rather Than Maximize

To achieve this concept of sustainability, it might be necessary for farmers to examine the way they basically think about farming. While optimizing inputs and maximizing yields (production per animal) are not mutually exclusive, it can be tricky to achieve them simultaneously.

It is the availability of the resources over a long period of time that will determine the continuing profitability of the operation. If the resources are sacrificed for short-term goals, profits in the long run will suffer.

Consider, for example, two different beef cow herds with identical genetic potential. One of the herds may have a 205-day weaning weight of 600 pounds and the other, fed more grain as calf creep feed, may weigh in at 700 pounds. Over a number of years, would the use of that additional grain truly be considered profitable?

Likewise, a dairy herd average of 24,000 pounds may not be more profitable than the 20,000 pound herd that uses fewer resources. Producers must ask the difficult question of whether or not maximum production justifies the use of additional resources — labor, management, feed, fertilizer, fuel, pesticides.

Looking at the larger picture, input (resources), not output (production) may be the baseline measure of sustainability. Wilson points out that farmers and those who serve them — animal scientists and educators — have always attempted to foster sustainability.

General management practices may not have been labeled "sustainable," but many of them advanced the principles of sustainability. Take, for instance, increased use of pasture, less grain used in beef and dairy systems, better housing, improved efficiency in collecting and recycling animal waste materials, alternative or value-added enterprises, and decreased use of pesticides and other chemicals.

Even the use of some of the more controversial practices such as antibiotics and growth promotants should increase sustainability and ultimately profitabilty in all sizes and types of animal operations.

According to Wilson, "If animal agriculture is going to survive, prosper, and be responsible and sustainable, there must be more integration of traditional and sustainable principles. We have not done enough. The methods we use in the future will be a combination of conventional, intensively managed, small- and large-scale agriculture with the incorporation of the principals of sustainability."

PENNSYLVANIA DAIRY MANAGERS AND ADVISERS JOIN THE INFORMATION SUPER HIGHWAY (INTERNET)

William Heald and Lisa Holden
Dairy And Animal Science
Penn State

Did you ever wish that you could have the best advice from 1,200 other farmers and dairy advisers, including national and international experts?

Did you ever wish you could tell someone else your farm problem to see if they experienced the same thing and find out how they solve the problem?

Want to know what they would do differently?

Maybe you never thought about it. If you are a computer user or plan to be, it is time you consider using the Internet for information retrieval.

Communicating with other farmers anywhere in the world at the touch of a keyboard is not some dream for tomorrow. It can be a very real part of your everyday life today!

A small group of farmers, consultants, veterinarians, students, and researchers in Pennsylvania are using the Internet to their advantage everyday. They hear about farm problems, offer advice, and learn from others' experiences.

The cost for farmers is little other than the cost of a computer attached to a telephone line and a network company. It can be done for $10 per month if you have a computer and modem.

Internet (a free international computer network) users send notes to each other and don't have to worry about whether or not someone is there to answer.

Sending notes can be done at any time — when they are free of management duties. It is much like sending a letter but faster and easier (no stamps). The recipients respond at their pleasure, when it suits them. The response could be in minutes, hours, or days, depending when the responder next uses their computer.

It is private, confidential, and cheaper that telephone calls. Other information is available such as daily commodity prices, market news, weather forecasts, newspapers, magazines, and entertainment.

Listservs, electronic gathering places for people of common interests, are the popular thing on the Internet. One popular listserv is Dairy-L. Other users of listservs include graziers, cattlemen, veterinarians, genealogists, collectors, researchers, writers, and the list goes on.

Foot problems, BST, greenhouse structures for cattle housing, ways to store cottonseed, suggestions for labor management, mycotoxins, vaccinations, rare diseases, ways to save bedding, how to cool cows, milk marketing, futures, "where do I find..." or "what is Jack's address," or "have you ever seen..." are examples of discussion topics on the program called Dairy-L, hosted by Mark Varner, University of Maryland and Rodger Cady, Washington State University. A small number for Pennsylvania producers, veterinarians, consultants, county agents, and researchers participate.

Another such listserv is called Graze-L for those producers interested in grazing topics. Discussions were fast and furious this spring regarding bloat and adjusting from indoor feeding to grazing paddocks. Lately, the economics of intensive rotational grazing and the resources available for graziers have been hot topics. The Graze-L list is hosted by Noel Bridgeman from Taranaki Polytech in New Zealand and Michele Gale-Sinnox at the University of Wisconsin. Several Pennsylvania folks are participating. Ask your county agent or send an e-mail to Lisa Holden at LAH7@PSU.EDU for more information about Graze-L.

If you are interested and want more information, ask a computer friend. Today that could be a neighbor, vetcrinarian, feed dealer, county agent, or you can send an e-mail to Bill Heald at CWH3@PSU.EDU. He coordinates a start-up group of Pennsylvania users, offers classes, and plans to offer education materials by Internet.

Ask your county agent to plan an Internet training experience. A national effort is under way to set up a World Wide Web for dairy users and the Penn State faculty are busy developing their home page to be browsed by Interent users. Plan to join the informal Pennsylvania dairy e-mail group to keep abreast of this fast-changing technology.

When you are on line, send a note to Bill and indicate whether you want to be added to the e-mail address list and want mail from other Internet users.

Pasture Walk June 21

FREDERICK, Md.—The June Pasture Walk for Frederick County, Maryland will be held on Wednesday, June 21, from 10 a.m. until noon. Ron and Kathy Holter will be hosting the event.

This is the first year of grazing for Holterholm Farms. They have about 30 bred heifers on pasture with plans to move the 95-cow milking herd onto pasture within a year. Ron has been busy building fence, installing a water system, and planting additional acreage into permanent pasture.

The purpose of the pasture walk is to allow livestock producers a chance to learn more about the use of rotational grazing as a way to increase agricultural profitability. Most of the time will be spent walking through the pastures discussing plant growth, fencing, watering systems, and animal performance.

For more information, contact Stanley W. Fultz, extension agent, dairy science, (301) 694-1594.

District Employs Resource Conservationist

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.)—The Chester County Conservation District announces the employment of Ken Wilson as Chesapeake Bay resource conservationist.

Wilson is from Atglen, and began employment with the conservation district on Monday, May 15. His background includes a lifelong farming experience associated with the operation of his family's southern Chester County farm.

Wilson's agricultural experience also includes prior employment with the Chester/Delaware Counties' Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service (ASCS), the Lancaster County Conservation District as an agronomist administering their Chesapeake Bay Program, and most recently as an agronomist for Browning Ferris Industries' (BFI) Organics Division.

As Chesapeake Bay Resource Conservationist, Wilson will be directly involved with Chester County's Chesapeake Bay watershed area. He will administer technical direction to cooperating landowners for the implementation of nutrient management plans as well as best management practices.

Efforts will be focused on promotion of the wise use of nutrient and pesticide management and erosion control practices. These practices can help reduce the amounts of nutrients, chemicals and sediment which can pollute area water sources due to typical agriculture activities.

Part of the Chesapeake Bay Program involves contacting and working directly with agricultural operators, collecting and analyzing site-specific information. This effort, combined with regional and county statistical data, is used to assist landowners in developing and implementing various components essential to maintaining a high standard of water quality, as well as an effective conservation plan.

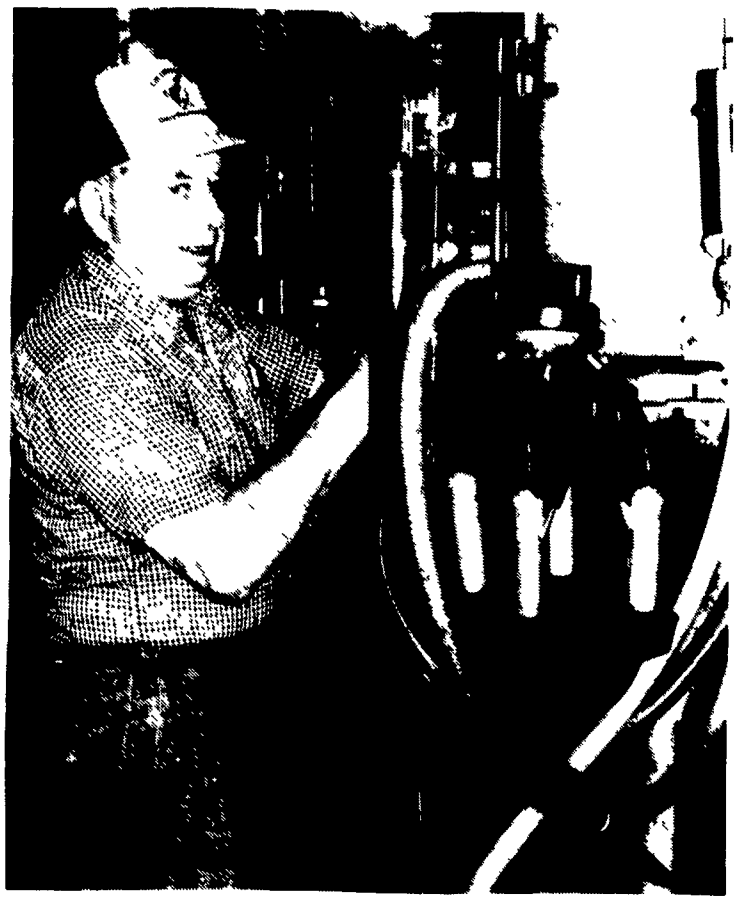
Miller, Pa.DHIA Together For 50 Years



Gerald Miller, 77, of Cochranville, still drives the backroads and highways of Chester County traveling from one dairy barn to the next to collect milk samples and perform calculations for dairymen.

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

UNIONVILLE (Chester Co.) — A self-described "gypsy," after more than 50 years and six cars, Gerald Miller, 77, of Cochranville, still drives the backroads and highways of Chester County traveling from one dairy barn to the next to attend milkings.

He is familiar with many of the parlors and stanchion setups in Chester County, a lot of the cows, and every dairy farmer on his circuit.

Miller is the most senior technician on the staff of the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association (Pa.DHIA). It is a distinction that brings mixed emotions, he said.

On one hand working any job more than 50 years is an achievement. On the other, it means there are fewer peers left.

"I feel good," he said recently, while testing milk at Brooklawn Farms Dairy in Unionville. "Except for this knee," he added, pointing to his right knee. "It's worn down, otherwise I'd move around faster."

While he installed testing devices on the double-six milking parlor machines, and checked them, he talked about the possibility of having his knee repaired and how fast recovery is these days with such surgery.

Meticulously, but also routinely, he positioned a white plastic foam insulated base loaded with pre-numbered milk test containers, and a checklist.

As the cows came into the parlor, he marked down their number and as they finished being milked, he took the appropriate container and filled it with milk from the testing apparatus.

He talked about the merger between Chester DHIA and Pa.DHIA, the changes in national DHIA, the dairy industry and, in a sense, current living conditions.

He smiled and cajoled with the assistant herdsman, Ben Bartlett. They talked about the fox hunts that are held in the area, with Brooklawn Farms serving as host for a fox hunt every year.

The two men said the hunts are filled with lots of people talking, their cars, horses, dogs, the sounds, the smells and the sheer entertainment of watching these people and their horses thunder through woods and pastures and leap over rail fences.

Bartlett said he came to the farm recently and watched the crowds and commotion from the parlor-barn area.

Miller said he's seen them and said they were impressive. It is one of the more unusual sights he's seen, being a DHIA technician.

While Miller was single when he started working for DHIA, he has not been on the road alone for all those years. His wife Freida Luella is also a DHIA technician, though since she started later, she doesn't quite have in as many years.

Together, they have been serving Chester County DHIA members for 30 years, doing things from taking milk samples, doing reports, checking charts for conversions, to entering data into a portable computer and sending the information over the telephone to the records processing center.

The accuracy required of the job is, and always has been taken seriously by Gerald and by the people he works with.

These are records which need to be used to track a dairy herd in a variety of ways for a variety of reasons — to catch drops in milk production, trends in butterfat or protein production, the health of the udder, monitor reproduction times, etc. — in order to make money.

Dairy farmers who can't make money selling milk or cattle have to sell something else.

It's a fact of life that having good records and being able to use them gives a dairy farmer an edge — knowing as much as possible about the herd's performance is the first step in being able to detect and correct problems. It's an ongoing process.

And Miller has been almost as ongoing.

On April Fool's Day, 1943, Miller joined the team at Pa.DHIA as a technician, traveling from his coal mining hometown of Westernport, Md. to State College where he spent a couple of weeks learning testing techniques and living in a boarding house.

He said he had worked on farms for a number of years growing up, and had been working for the Carnation Milk Company as an assistant manager in receiving for the plant in western Maryland when his cousin started talking to him about being a Pa.DHIA technician, or a milk tester, as they were more commonly referred.

Miller said that while the two were going to try to get jobs at the same time, his cousin backed out. Alone, Miller hit the road for State College.

After completing his initial couple of weeks training, staying in a boarding house, Miller said there were two jobs from which to

DAVID SLUSSER
General Manager

PA DHIA has made major accomplishments over the last 15 months. Our quality standards has held or improved. 78% of our records are usable for genetic evaluation. Our lab quality control score was 99%, and our field service staff is the best trained in the nation. We have three in-depth training sessions a year. All of our 150 technicians are using laptop computers and electronically transmitting data. PA DHIA is the only stand alone full service DHIA Cooperative in America. The PA DHIA Board of Directors govern and control, a full field service, a modern up-to-date milk testing lab, and a Dairy Records Processing Center. We offer more innovative programs than anyone else and we have a highter percentage of cows on A/P testing than anyone. Our Herd Summary I and II reports are first class and are a result of member input through our District Delegate meetings and DRPC Committee. Our turnaround time is second to none.

If the truth was known, or could be told we could probably boast of the highest percent of useable records, and the highest percent of identified cattle. Most likely we are the best all around DHIA provider in America.

As we improved and developed our service, we made great strides in our efficienty, and continue to do so. We have thirty less employees than we did 15 months ago. The downtown office was closed, the lab employees became DHIA employees, we have gone to a one day annual meeting, the Laboratory Director and the Membership Relations Director have been combined. Because of the large number of herds switching to A/P testing, our overall gross income has dropped considerably. In other words, our members as a whole with the fee adjustments are spending less money for testing this year than they did last year. We lowered DHIA testing cost to our members.

As a result of our top service and our new efficiency, cow numbers on PA DHIA test has stabilized. Cash flow has improved, opportunity for improved field technicians income has occurred, we are repaying our loans, and membership confidence in our cooperative has improved.

As your General Manager, I have spent more than half my time on the road meeting with members, and making farm visits. I am trying to attend every county committee meeting at least once a year, and I want to attend as many local annual meetings as possible. Last fall I attended over 30 annual meetings and more county committee meetings.

The staff and employees of PA DHIA cares. They work hard for you and they want you to succeed in farming, we work hard at our motto "PA DHIA Cares."

Industry Trends, What Can We Do?

DAVID SLUSSER
General Manager

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The dairy industry in Pennsylvania is facing rapid changes.

We can react to these changes and live with what happens, or we can plan for the future.

Let's first look at the "big picture" of world milk production, the trends of United States milk production, and trends in Northeastern dairy production.

We need to project what we feel will occur over the next 10 years in the Northeast, and how we can positively affect these trends for the benefit of the dairy farmer in the region.

World Markets

As the nations of the world develop their economic systems, consumption of milk and other dairy products will increase.

Milk is high in nutrition, especially proteins and calcium, and, because of new technology and management skills, is very efficiently produced.

The dairy cow is a very efficient source of complete protein, both from milk and beef, and is very adaptable to many different climates and geographic conditions.

Dairy cows can play a major role in soil erosion control, because of their ruminative nature they can digest a wide variety of forages, which include grasses. These forages blend well in crop rotation programs, and grow well on land not suited for row crop and food crop production.

Animal waste can be recycled to the benefit of the soil.

Presently, the United States holds the leadership position in dairy farm management skills, and in dairy cattle genetics.

New Zealand can produce milk cheaper than the United States, but only because of the climate — they can pasture dairy cattle yearround. However, the island is small and can only produce a limited portion of the dairy products needed by the world.

The next most abundant source of economically produced milk is the United States.

The adoption of GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade) hopefully will change the protectionist policies of Europe and Asia over the next 10 years. The United States government and the dairy industry need to work as partners to develop world markets for dairy products and dairy cattle genetics.

Our DHIA cooperatives must do their part to make sure our members will maintain this world leadership position in management skills and superior genetics.

National Trends

The dairy industry in the United States has changed over the last 10 years. Wisconsin is no longer the number one dairy state. California is.

Dairy cow numbers are growing the most in the Western and Southwestern states, while in the upper Midwest and in the Northeast they are declining.

Western dairy farmers can grow or purchase top quality forage from irrigated land, and their management skills are outstanding.

Cow numbers continue to decline nationwide, while milk production continues to increase.

Improving management skills, improving genetics and new technology (such as BST) will continue this change at an ever-increasing rate.

Because of our geographical location to the populations, Class I sales (fluid milk) will remain strong, however milk sales for processed products will depend on the competitive management skills of our producers.

Since most international sales will be processed dairy products, and since these products will continue to play a major part in dairy products sales in the Northeast, we in DHIA and other related industries must do whatever is necessary to help our dairy farmers with management tools and dairy cattle genetics.

DHIAs, artificial insemination organizations, dairy cattle breed associations, farm consultants, and financial institutions need to work together in non-traditional ways to provide Northeastern dairy farmers with the best tools possible at the least cost possible.

They have to work togther to combine their financial and human resources to make this region of the United States highly competitive, and a strong part of the world dairy picture.

By working together, we can lead into the future, and not react to it.

The move from government support programs to the free market economy will add speed and fuel to these changes.

Northeastern Trends

The Northeastern United States dairy industry appears to be faring better that the upper Midwest, however it is still losing ground to the West and Southwest.

The top five dairy states are California, Wisconsin, New York, Pennsylvania and Minnesota. As you see, two of those states are in the Northeast.

Cow numbers will continue to drop, however total milk production will probably continue to grow.

The milk-production advantages for this region are: one third of the U.S. population is located here; climate is favorable for milk production; terrain is more adaptable to forage production and grasses, and less to row crops and food crops; dairy farm management skills are outstanding; and the infrastructure of dairy farm support industries is strong.

Who Is That Heifer?

Larry W. Specht
Professor of Dairy Science
Penn State University

How often do dairy producers (and visitors) ask the question, "Who is the sire and/or dam of that good-looking heifer?" and then find that the information is missing from the herd records? Not often, if they utilize the cow and heifer identification reports available through DHIA.

DHIA organizations must be certified each year as to the quality of their lab, field, and processing center services. At least 95 percent of the animals in a herd must have permanent identification in order to maintain official status with the national DHIA program. Permanent identification is defined as: a breed association registration number or identification number, a metal standard series eartage, or a Verified Identification Program (VIP) number. These are in contrast to plastic tags, chain numbers, chalk, crayon or other removable identification.

Dairy records processing centers reduce missing permanent identification situations to an absolute minimum. This can be attributed to herds and DHIA technicians that report information accurately the first time. They also cooperate with the breed associations when verifying birthdates and parentage on registered animals.

There are many benefits to permanently identifying animals. These reasons begin with the need for an animal inventory and expand as dairy producers find reasons to track production, animal health, reproductive status, genetic evaluations, veterinary treatment, growth and animal location. Many herds participate in breed programs including registration, type evaluations and merchandising. Accurate identification becomes critical. On a broader scale, the AI industry, the Animal Improvement Programs Lab (AIPL) of the USDA as well as extension and research personnel need accurate records to provide a data base for the research and genetic evaluation needs of the U.S. dairy cattle population.

Participants at the recent National DHIA annual meeting held in Burlington, Vermont spend considerable time discussing a new approach to record evaluation. This revolutionary idea is still in the developmental stage but has evolved far enough to warrant discussion.

The key change is to stop evaluating cow and herd records on the basis of the name of the testing program, i.e., not to assume that DHIA 2X records are more accurate then A-P records or that A-P records are more reliable than records made in the Owner-Sampler program. Each type of record keeping program has always been accompanied by a host of rules and regulations designed to keep people from biasing on individual cows and herds. Rules and regulations work up to a point but are costly to enforce and almost ruinous to a DHIA affiliate if a lawsuit rears its ugly head.

The cow and herd profile approach is to describe the set of conditions under which the herd is tested and to let the end-user (AI, cattle buyer, breed association, etc.) decide for themselves if they are comfortable with the conditions under which a record or group of records was made. For example, records from many different herds on daughters of a progeny test sire would not be subject to the same standards as would be required for records on cows that are competing for production awards or records on a potential bull dam.

Some statistics that need to be kept on all herds would be: number of tests per year or per lactation; number of tests with component sampling; number of tests done by the DHIA technician and/or number of tests with data supplied by the dairyman. Other information would include the shape of the lactation curve on individual cows compared to the lactation curves on their contemporaries and the percentage of animals in the herd with permanent identification.

One interesting aspect of the herd profile is the plot of the deviations of individual cow records. Do the deviations follow a normal distribution or are there one or more cows with extremely large deviations? If there is a 60,000 pound milk record in a herd that averages 15,000 pounds per cow we might suspect that the cow received special treatment that was not available to the rest of the herd. One final note—herds must be willing to make an open disclosure of all information related to cow and herd profiles. Those who do not wish to do so should not expect to sell breeding stock to well informed buyers.

Herd and cow profiles will not be available on a routine basis for 12 to 18 months at the earliest but they will become a fact of life for DHIA and the dairy breeding industry.

DHIA Changes For Next Century

Pennsylvania is putting an increased emphasis on AM/PM DHIA testing and innovative programs to position DHIA for the next century. Recently announced changes in pricing place AM/PM plans in a more favorable light against the traditional twice a day regimen, and new experimental types of test may help some dairymen save additional money on their monthly DHIA bills.

In the last year alone, about 20 percent of DHIA members have switched from 2X programs to AM/PM programs, and the move to AM/PM hasn't slowed yet. In just the closing weeks of the year, more than a hundred herds changed testing schemes, continuing a trend that was strong throughout 1994.

"There's no doubt that AP is the wave of the future," said Dean Amick, PA DHIA's director of field services. "We're now at 2/3 of all herds on test using AP, and I wouldn't be surprised if that number is more like 3/4 of herds by spring."

The charts of enrollment in various types of test in 1993 and 1994 tell the story. While official records continued to provide the bread and butter of DHIA's business at around 90 percent — a number that has remained stable over the years — the shift in official plans to AM/PM is clear. (see charts)

"I think two things really account for the push," Amick said, "the Holstein Association's acceptance of AP tests was one factor, and of course our own pricing changes were the other."

Are members happy about the change?

"For the most part, yes," Amick said, "although some folks are still skeptical about AP. No matter how long the program's been around, or how good the research is, there will always be some skeptics. But we really don't have any choice. By far and away the biggest cost we have is putting a technician on the farm on test day, and AM/PM reduces that cost to the farmer, and to us, by one test per day. It's as simple as that."

But is there any reason to be suspicious of AP testing?

Not according to Jim Boyer, Pennsylvania DHIA's Processing Center manager.

"If you look at the comparison between milk shipped and milk weighed on test day, that's what counts. And we see virtually no difference between AP and 2X plans. In fact the overage between 2X milk weighed and shipped, and the same numbers for AP is slightly smaller, showing that, if anything, AP testing may be just slightly more accurate. Statistically speaking we see virtually the same average, and the same overall distribution." (see chart)

"If you don't think the numbers will apply in your herd, there's a good test available," he said. "The DHIA technician's laptop program allows him to calculate total milk weights. If you're currently testing 2X, have the technician run the AP total calculation the next time he's in your barn. Right after the first milking print off a list of total milk weights and compare the results with what you actually see after the cows are milked the second time. Maybe you'll still find that AP isn't for you, but you may be surprised.

On the leading edge of DHIA testing plans are the LER, or Labor Efficient Records programs, now in their seventh year.

Under LER testing, a farmer with electronic metering equipment takes milk weights on a monthly or semi-monthly basis and forwards those results to the DHIA processing center, either electronically or on diskette. Milk is only actually weighed and sampled by the DHIA technician on a quarterly basis.

"Pennsylvania DHIA was one of the first in the country to be involved in this program, and we've seen slow but steady growth," Boyer said.

"As on-farm computing becomes more and more common, I expect the LER type programs to really take off. At this point, I'm not sure how many of our dairymen really even know about them. We have about two dozen herds on the option. Mostly, but not exclusively, the larger herds have signed up so far."

Beyond LER there are a number of innovative or experimental programs. Some of the options available include: alternate DHI supervised and owner supervised tests on test day, alternate DHI supervised and owner supervised tests on a monthly basis, APCS quarterly sampling, and a number of variations on the 2X LER program for those herds with electronic meters.

Amick said that right now Pennsylvania has about 75 herds enrolled in various innovative options, and points out that not all of them are restricted to herds with electronic equipment.

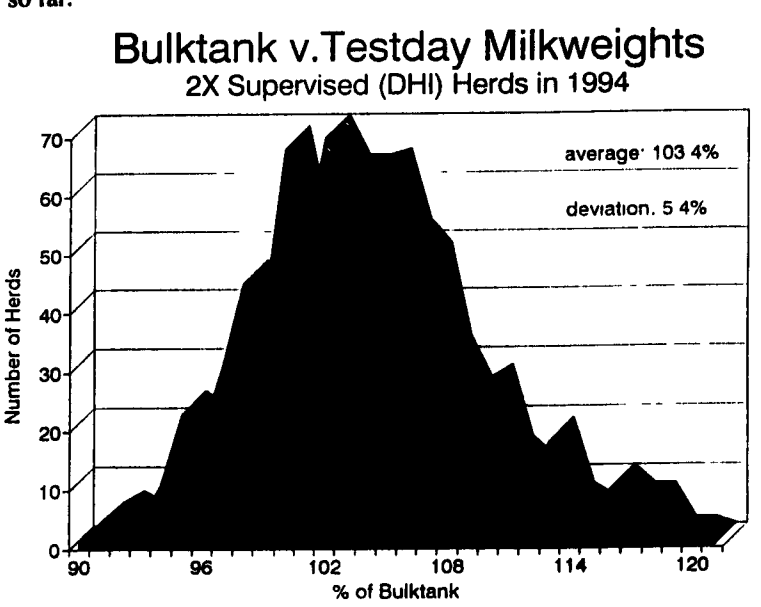
"Some of the best innovative plans are designed around letting the member take some of the milk weights and have the technician take the others when he comes to sample," he said.

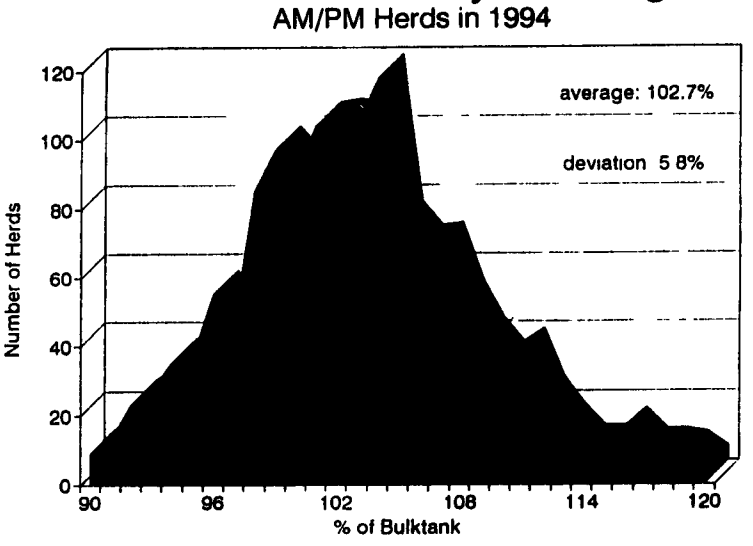
"There are a lot of alternatives, both for cost-savings, and in order to minimize the amount of inconvenience a DHIA technician might cause on test day. I really say that no technician should have anybody quit DHIA anymore. We just have so mush flexibility in what we can allow in official programs that we never had in the past."

But Amick cautioned that the innovative plans, while official, are regarded as "provisional" by National DHIA.

"I don't doubt in the ling run most of these are going to be made regular DHIA tests," Amick said. "That's what happened with LER, which was once an innovative plan. In the meantime, I have dairymen check with their AI units, or with their breed associations to see how they feel about a particular innovative program. While we might allow it, somebody at a bull stud might have questions if the herd is on a young sire program, for example. When in doubt, call the people who are using your records outside of DHIA to be sure."

Call DHIA if you're interested in LER or innovative plans for your own herd, and ask for Dean Amick at 1-800-DHI-TEST.





Kindig Receives Leadership Award

Robert Kindig

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Robert Kindig, the Pennsylvania dairyman from Conestoga in Lancaster County, received the Clyde Robinson Leadership Award at the Pennsylvania DHIA annual meeting.

The award created two years ago by the board of directors is in memory of the late Clyde Robinson, who spent a lifetime in service to the dairy industry and especially DHIA. It is given to a dairy farmer who has proven to be a leader in the dairy industry.

Frank Orner, association president, made the presentation and said Kindig exemplifies the ideals that were put forth in the award. Having completed an unprecedented three-year term as president of the National DHIA, Kindig has also served as president of his state and local DHIA, as well as the local school board. In addition, he has been a 4-H leader and served on the local extension board and the county Holstein board.

In a written tribute, Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County Agent, said Kindig is perceptive to the needs of the dairy industry and how people, in spite of differences, can work together to the mutual benefit of all.

Obviously moved by the award, Kindig said the award was especially meaningful because of whom it was named. "Clyde was my mentor," Kindig said. "I try to live up to the ideals he set for DHIA, but I never profess to have achieved that stature in the industry. Clyde was an example to follow and it is with sincere gratitude that I accept the award."

Westfalia Certifies Pa.DHIA Personnel

DAVID BIGELOW
Training Coordinator

UNIVERSITY PARK, (Centre Co.)—Westfalia Systemat recently held a certification seminar for 20 Pa. DHIA personnel.

The list of personnel who received the Westfalia certification included 10 technicians, region managers, training coordinator, director of field operations, and members of the processing staff, as well as the help desk.

Receiving the Westfalia training certification gives the participants of the seminar the education needed to provide advanced training to the technicians and members of Pa. DHIA.

The seminar involved three days of education on all aspects of the Westfalia Dairy Plan. The Westfalia Dairy Plan takes the input from the Quick Barnsheet program and creates a data base, which allows the technician to create basically any report the dairymen may request.

Representing Westfalia Systemat and teaching the seminar were Paul Bergstrom, programmer, and Bob Turner and Rob Kolb, sales representatives. This was a great opportunity, to be taught from a programmer's point-of-view as well as being taught from the sales representative's.

Basic data, such as adding a cow to the system, entering feed amounts and entering monthly milk data was covered in the beginning of the seminar.

The proper way to enter Vet Action Entries was covered next on the seminar agenda. Vet Action Entries include Cow Calving, Heat Observation, Insemination, Pregnancy check entries and a Vet Checklist.

The highlight of the seminar was the participants being taught how to design a quick report, as well as create graphs. In this process, it was made clear how to change report limits, sorting, columns and headings.

At Pa. DHIA, we feel that these reports can give our members another tool in the management of dairy records, in today's fast paced dairy industry.

Westfalia Dairy Plan reports are available on test day from your Pa. DHIA technician.

Ask your technician or region manager about Westfalia Dairy Plan Reports. Also, feel free to contact Dean Amick at 1-800-344-8378, if you have any questions.

National DHIA Considers Rules Change

DAVID SLUSSER
General Manager

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The National DHIA Convention recently held in Burlington, Vermont was very informative and well organized.

The highlight of the convention was the passing of a resolution supporting the development of the Herd and Cow Profiles Program to replace the Official Rules System. Most of what used to be called rules were standard operating procedues effecting on-farm date collecting procedures.

These standard procedures are essential and will be continued to ensure the integrity of the national dairy database, which includes technician training, sample and data collection and milk meter calibration and operations.

Once development is finished, the Herd and Cow Profiles will replace the official rules.

This concept is a snapshot of information pertaining to how records are collected and developed.

The basic herd profile could be a minimum for participation in young sire sampling programs and breed association programs. In order for a herd to participate in these programs, they would have to agree to "open disclosure" of the information in the Herd and/or Cow Profile. The only exception would be "farm only" records.

The Herd Profile is designed to present herd performance and descriptive information. The profile would be uniform throughout the DHIA system.

The Herd Profile may contain information on rolling herd average, average lactation curbe, bulk tank comparisons, number of supervised and unsupervised tests, number of component samplings, PTA distribution, M.E. distributions, number of cows, ID changes in last year, percent usable records, percent cows completing lactation, and percent average USDA weighting.

Possible and probable outlier cows will be identified on the PTA and M.E distribution graphs.

These cows' exceptional production may be due to 1) high genetic merit, 2) unintended environmental bias, 3) errors in data collection, or 4) intentional bias. The method of resolving the reasons for the outlier cows will depend on the users of this information.

The following are several identified users of DHIA information and how they might use the program.

1) Members not interested in marketing cattle or participating in industry programs. They could use the Herd Profile information just for management purposes and not want verifications of outlier information.

2) Non-marketing herds that would like to see their herd averages or cow information listed. Other producers could rely on the reputation of members, or could request additional verification for a fee.

3) Local committees or local DHIA may choose to publish verified records only, underwriting the cost of verification.

4) Herds actively marketing cattle may receive extra value from verified outlier cattle. They would pay for the cost of verification test and benefit from the market place.

5) AI and breed organizations may choose to verify specific animals, and develop guidelines covering the ordering and payment of verification test.

Research is still in progress on this new system.

The resolution passed at the convention indicated support for continued development of the Herd and Cow Profile Program. Implementation of the program will occur after research and development results are finished, and the results indicate intended purposes are met.

Together For 50 Years

choose. One was in Dauphin County, the other in Chester. He has lived in Chester County ever since.

"I like it here," he said of the area he works in Chester County, much changed from when he started. "I always felt I was doing something worthwhile," he said.

He said that for 45 years, he worked seven days per week, excepting vacations.

In the early years, especially, he would stay overnight on a lot of farms, not only since everybody on test needed the tester to perform at two milkings per day, but because fuel prices were too high, and gas not as available.

He said there were times when he would do testing at 11 a.m. and again at 11 p.m., finish at 4 a.m., and drive to the next farm to wait until that farm was ready to go.

"At that time, I always carried a suitcase," he said.

The biggest herd he's ever tested numbered 600 head. He would test between 5,400 to 6,000 cows per month on his circuit.

Gerald Miller is the most senior technician on the staff of the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association.

Up until eight years ago, he served 72 herds on his circuit, most of them on DHIA.

He said that part of the reason he was attracted to the job in the first place was because of the benefits package that came along with the job. "We had a good retirement," he said.

But there's more to it, he said. There's the atmosphere, the outside work, the being able to be home almost everyday to see and help his children growing up.

"I like my work," Miller said. "I like working with people and working with cows. And I like things that are farm oriented. I like that kind of work. I can't tolerate a lazy person."

He played softball regularly up until he was 60, but now spends a lot of his free time traveling and camping.

He and his wife and now, sometimes their eight grandchildren, go camping and sightseeing to West Virginia's Smokey Mountains, or, more frequently, to the French Creek State Park, or to Muddy Run.

"I guess I'm a bit of a gyspy," he smiled, turning to mark down the number of a cow that just entered the parlor.

Quality Assured

DIXIE BURRIS
Director Lab. Services

Quality is one of the most important aspects of your Pa. DHIA monthly report.

You'll never see a quality score anywhere on your report, or a little sticker saying, "These samples inspected by No. 4," but sample testing quality affects every aspect of the information you pay for.

Think about it. How do you know that the fat, protein, and somatic cell count results on your monthly report are accurate?

You base feeding, breeding, and even culling decisions on these results. To use this information effectively, you must have confidence in the test results.

As Laboratory Quality Control Specialist for Pa. DHIA I'd like to share with you some of the steps we take, every day, to assure that the results you receive are of the highest possible quality.

First, let me describe several aspects of sample testing that influence the "correctness" of test results.

An instrument must be specific for the component in question. There should not be background noise that causes elevated or depressed readings.

An instrument must produce repeatable results. A given sample should have the same result each time it is tested by the machine.

Of course, each instrument must be accurate, giving the right answer each time a sample is tested.

Every week, I run a battery of quality checks on each machine in the lab to make sure that it reads samples specifically, repeatably and accurately. Each machine is calibrated to standards produced by a nationally distributed company.

The standards cover a wide range of values for fat, protein, lactose and somatic cell count, thus ensuring that the machines are reading all samples correctly whether, for instance, the somatic cell count is 150,000 or 1,000,000.

Each morning, before any producer samples are tested, the machine operators go through a series of start-up tests to verify machine performance: Is there any background noise? Does the machine produce the correct value on a known sample? Is it giving the same value each time the sample is tested?

Any machine which does not pass all of the performance checks is not used until we can rectify the problem, then verify machine performance.

Every hour during the day, "check test" samples of known value are tested to verify that the machines are reading accurately and consistently. Again, any machine not passing all quality checks at any time is taken off line until we feel confident that it is functioning properly.

Throughout the course of a normal working day, each work station is subjected to a minimum of 73 quality checks!

Of course, these sophisticated machines don't run by themselves. A critical part of the machine operator's job is monitoring the parts of quality that any number of machine tests can't control.

Things like identification, temperature at testing, and condition of samples are monitored by the machine operator as each herd is tested. Quality is the most important aspect of the job for our machine operators.

Although we strive for quick turnaround time, getting the right answer is always more important than getting a fast answer.

Did you know that Pa. DHIA's laboratory scored 99 out of a possible 100 on our last annual certification for National DHIA?

Whenever your samples are tested, and whatever type of testing you request, you can be assured that the test results you get from Pa. DHIA are of the highest possible quality.

At Pa. DHIA, we care!

'Nature's Best' Processed At Maryland Dairy

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

FREDERICK, Md. — Five days a week, the tractor trailers carrying milk from dairy farms throughout Maryland roll into the receiving bay at Dairy Maid Dairy, unloading more than two million pounds of nature's best a week.

It is at this processing company in Frederick, one of five such dairies in the state, that the milk is processed, packaged, and then distributed throughout central Maryland, Northern Virginia, and into Washington, D.C.

In 1946, Dairy Maid's owner Joseph Vona purchased what was at that time the old Excelsior Dairy on Vernon Avenue. Vona was from Pennsylvania, and he married a Frederick girl. Vona operated Excelsior until in the early 1960s, when he combined it with several other small dairies and formed Dairy Maid. The company has continued to grow, and today

This machine fills and seals 110 half-gallons per minute. The jugs are manufactured in-house through a blowmold procedure.

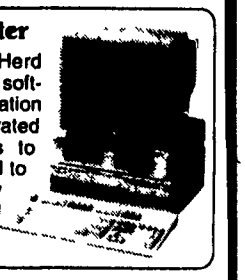
BOUMATIC
First In Product Innovation

Opti-Flo
(Milk transfer System)

This control allows the milk pump to deliver a steady, gentle flow of milk to the plate cooler to achieve more efficient cooling Since milk goes through the plate cooler at a slower pace, the water has a better chance to take the heat out of the milk, and increase the quality of the milk.

Agri-Comp Computer



The Agri-comp 2045 Herd Management Computer and software are state-of-the-art innovation at its finest. The totally integrated package with direct link-ups to detachers with milk meters and to feed stations updates cow data instantly in three vital areas: 1) milk production, 2) feeding and 3) breeding

Air-Star Vacuum Pump

Save Money – The Air-Star vacuum pump does not consume oil like a conventional oil vane vacuum pump, saving the cost of pump oil.

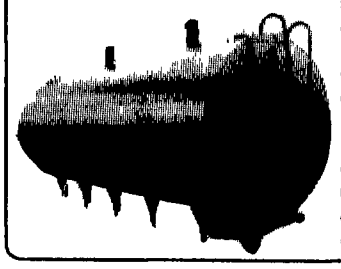
High Performance – The Air-Star vacuum pump creates stable vacuum with low power consumption. Air-Star vacuum pumps are available in sizes from 5 HP to 25 HP

Flo-Star Claws

Its unique design helps maintain healthy udders by protecting against cross-contamination while promoting faster, gentler milking and improved milk quality

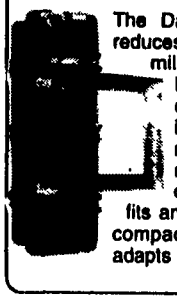
No other milking claw can match the outstanding performance of Flo-Star.

Dari-Kool Milk Cooler



Dari-Kool milk coolers, larger than 800 gallons, are constructed with two or more independent, full-flow cooling plates. this fail-safe design distributes the cooling load efficiency and equally between compressors. Should one compressor fail, milk will be cooled by the other independent system, thereby avoiding the loss of a tank of milk.

Dari-Kool Plate Cooler



The Dari-Kool Plate Cooler reduces risk of downgraded milk and income loss, because quick cooling ensures you ship quality milk. It cuts bulk milk cooler run time, reducing wear and tear on the compressor It fits any existing system it's compact, economical, and adapts to your needs.

er of milk for the Baltimore-Washington metropolitan area. They distribute gallon, half-gallon, and quart containers of milk for the grocery store and chain store market and provide half-pints for schools, nursing homes, and hospitals. One million, two hundred-thousand half-pints a week go to the schools alone. Dairy Maid is the supplier for all District of Columbia schools and many Maryland county schools. About 10 years ago, Dairy Maid's excellent reputation also started to bring the company operational contracts with the U.S. military.

In addition to fluid milk, Dairy Maid produces sour cream, low fat and whole chocolates, and buttermilk. They also distribute 100 percent orange juice, apple juice, and pineapple juice, and a full line of juice drinks and bottled water.

Dairy Maid is unique in that, under the direction of the brothers in 1984 or 1985, the company developed innovative packaging for their milk and began manufacturing their own plastic gallon and half-gallon jugs through a blow-molding process. They also now sell these jugs to other processors. The plastic manufacturing operation runs in two 10-hour shifts. Fifty half-gallon containers can be produced in one minute, and 40 gallon containers.

Eight to 10 loads of FO 4 milk a day are brought in by Mid-American Dairyman Inc. There is 100 percent antibiotic screening done on all loads. The operation is totally automatic and everything is washed in place. The receiving area includes two 25,000-gallon raw milk silos, where the milk is pumped when it first arrives. All tanks are bulkheaded in the sanitary part of the building.

The first step in processing the milk is pasteurization. Milk is heated to a minimum of 165 degrees for 15 seconds, then cooled to 35 degrees. Next, to homogenize the milk, it is put under 1,500 pounds per square inch of pressure to break down the fat globules. Then milk is standardized to the correct butterfat: 1 percent, 2 percent, or skim. It is separated while hot, then completely re-blended using a centrifuge.

"That's why our milk tastes so good," says Jeff Flora.

Blending creates whole chocolate or lowfat chocolate. Milk is then pumped through six filling lines to tanks, where it is held until packaging.

A water conservation program was implemented about five years ago, and has cut the amount of water used during these processes in half.

Milk is packaged in a completely automated environment in half-pints, gallons, or half-gallons. The only thing manpower is needed for is to feed the containers into the machines. Three hundred ½ pints a minute can be filled using this system, 110 gallons a minute, and about 140 half-gallons per minute. Milk is pumped into the containers in preset amounts, then the containers are sealed by machine. Letting machines do so much of the work is something the Vonas have achieved through an extensively computerized system.

From the filling lines, containers of milk go to a 65-foot high, eight-level storage building, from which they are loaded out. One hundred-fifty thousand gallons of produce can be stored at one time. Containers are stacked in groups of nine of a like kind in completely cleaned and sanitized cages.

All product is rotated on a first-in, first-out basis, monitored by computer. A philosophy of making everything easier for the technician pervades this and all parts of the operation, according to Jimmy Vona.

"Everything is controlled by computer to within ½ an inch. The concept is to make the job easy for people. That also leads to a better product."

Levels 2-8 are devoted to storing the milk; the first level is where the trucks pick it up.

Dairy Maid maintains its own fleet of 55 of the familiar red and white trucks. Trucks are lifted to dock level for loading.

A whole floor of the plant is devoted to the engine room that keeps everything operating smoothly, and to other support systems. Dairy Maid maintains its own in-house maintenance staff, and keeps parts in stock should anything need fixed.

There is no backup generator; the plant is on a priority electrical line with the nearby hospital. They did lose their electric for a short period of time two years ago, but that was in December, so there were no problems. Should anything go wrong with the refrigeration, the product could be taken out and stored in refrigerated trucks.

Dairy Maid places a strong emphasis on quality throughout its whole operation. There is an on-site laboratory for quality control. Tests for butterfat analysis, standard plate count, coliform bacteria, freezing point, antibiotics, and many other tests are run on a regular basis.

Said Jimmy Vona, "We're in an industry that expects that everything is perfect."

Groups Call For Strategy In Global Marketplace

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Testifying on behalf of 16 national agricultural organizations, Dwayne Andreas, chairman of Archer Daniels Midland Company, called for a U.S. trade strategy that will enable American agriculture to be well positioned to remain a growth industry well into the 21st century.

Andreas told members of Congress that without a strategy to effectively position the U.S. to compete in today's post-GATT global marketplace, "American agriculture's ability to remain viable and competitive long term will be seriously threatened. Such a result," he said, "would not only reduce agriculture's ability to meet the food and fiber needs of consumers at home and abroad, it would also have significant implications for our entire economy."

The food company executive pointed out that agriculture is our nation's largest single industry — bigger than General Motors, Chrysler, and Ford combined — and accounts for nearly one out of every six jobs. As a result, our economy is heavily dependent on agriculture's ability to compete in the global marketplace.

"Yet, in the context of debate on the budget and the 1995 Farm Bill, we hear it said that now is the time to sharply reduce or even eliminate many of our existing policies and programs, and simply allow the free market to work," Andreas said. "Well, let me tell you, when it comes to agriculture, there is no such thing as the free market."

He explained that every country in the world has a set of policies and programs designed to help it meet the food needs of its citizens and to capitalize on potential trade opportunities. "The GATT agreement has not changed this," he said. "It did not eliminate the use of export subsidies or other unfair trade practices. It only reduced their overall level."

Between 1990 and 1994, the European Union spent on average $10.6 billion annually in export subsidies, while the U.S. spent less than $2 billion. Since the GATT agreement requires all countries to reduce subsidies by the same relative percentage, the European Union will still be able to maintain its historical advantage. In addition, many of our major competitors are also moving to increase their use of non-trade distorting programs to maintain and expand their share of the world market. Without a similar commitment, American agriculture will be at a serious disadvantage.

"This is the real world of global competition," Andreas said. "America's farmers and ranchers are the most competitive in the world. But in today's global marketplace, that is not enough. We must have policies and programs that are equally competitive with those of other countries against whom we must compete. We can not and should not expect American agriculture to compete alone against foreign governments."

The ADM chairman outlined five points that an overall trade strategy should contain:

- Ensure that other countries fully live up to the terms of their commitments under GATT, especially with regard to market access.
- Ensure that U.S. policies remain equally competitive with those of our foreign competitors, including full funding for direct export, export credit, market development, promotion, and food assistance programs.
- Be flexible to allow both USDA and industry to respond to the changing dynamics of the global marketplace.
- Provide for investment in research and development, including new technologies and alternative uses, improve productivity, expand demand, and enhance American agriculture's overall competitiveness.
- Provide for investment in long-term economic and market development, involving the private sector rather than simply relying on government to government transactions.

Andreas concluded by noting that between now and the year 2000, most of the world's population growth will occur in the non-industrialized world. "These countries represent developing and emerging new markets for U.S. agriculture," he said. "But only if we develop a strategy to capitalize on such opportunities."

75th Anniversary Marks DCI's Commitment To Nutrition Education

SOUTHAMPTON (Bucks Co.)—From the Roaring '20s to the Yet-to-be-Named '90s, Dairy Council, Inc. (DCI) has been keeping up with times while staying steadfast in its mission of providing sound nutrition education information to Americans.

Whether it was through plays and puppets or radio and TV, for 75 years Dairy Council has kept its focus on keeping Americans healthy with messages about the role dairy foods play in personal health.

After National Dairy Council was established in 1915, it was believed that grassroots efforts on a statewide basis would add to the effectiveness of spreading sound nutrition information across the nation. In some instances, these Dairy Council units were formed within state lines, and in other areas they were built around milk markets.

So in 1920, a Pennsylvania-based Dairy Council was created—funded through dairy farmers and distributors each paying one cent per hundred pounds of milk produced or purchased. Following this "milk-to-market" concept, this new organization would work throughout the tristate area of southeastern and southcentral Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey, and Delaware.

1920s—Free Milk and Quality Control

"Sleep many hours with the windows open" and "Take a bath oftener than once a week" were two of Dairy Council's Eight Health Rules in the 1920s. While these rules may sound archaic, they reflected the needs of the times.

Undernourishment, for example, was a major problem in the 1920s. In response to this problem, Dairy Council began to fulfill its health mandate by giving away milk.

DCI provided a pint of free milk daily to more than 20,000 undernourished children in the Philadelphia public schools. During the first year, Dairy Council contributed more than $13,000 worth of free milk and conducted nutrition classes. This actually became the forerunner to Pennsylvania's School Lunch Program.

In its first year of operation alone, Dairy Council reached more than 280,000 school students through nutrition classes, plays, brochures, and posters.

In addition to building strong relationships with the public schools in the twenties, Dairy Council also worked with dairy farmers to ensure quality milk. As part of a Milk Quality Control Program, Dairy Council staff visited dairy farms, giving demonstrations on milking, straining, and cooling milk. By 1923, Dairy Council hosted the World's Dairy Congress, attended by 1,000 dairy farmers worldwide.

1930s—Drama In the Depression Years

Undernourishment continued to be a problem through the Depression years, so Dairy Council stepped up its free milk program. Free milk was even provided to employees of several major department stores in the Philadelphia area, such as Bonwit Teller, Gimbel's, and Strawbridge & Clothier. The Dairy Council "ladies"—as they were called—developed nutrition materials such as "Feeding a Family of Five for $8 Per Week."

This decade also saw the beginning of a working relationship with the Philadelphia Zoo that continues today. In 1936, a dairy barn with live cows was opened there. More than 100,000 visitors flocked in a single day to view the bovine residents.

The ingenuity and creativity shown by the staff continued in the form of the dramatic arts—literature, plays, and music. Dairy Council established its dramatic department, writing and producing its own health plays and original songs. This unique approach to nutrition education appears to have been a wise move—milk consumption in Philadelphia was 50 percent higher than the average in the United States during this time.

1940s—Nutrition Education Marches On

In the 1940s Dairy Council became involved in the military effort by purchasing war bonds and developing materials targeted to those working on behalf of the war effort. In 1942 alone, 451 defense plants were supplied with nutritional posters, reaching more than 360,000 employees.

And despite transportation problems because of gas rationing, Dairy Council's Dramatic Department staff took to the street cars to log more than 2,000 puppet shows in the 1944-1945 school year.

In 1946, nearly 600,000 children attended the puppet shows, health plays, and talks given in schools by the nutritionists. This same year the Philadelphia Interstate Dairy Council officially changed its name to Dairy Council, Inc.

1950s—Puppets and Princesses

Suburbia, Elvis, and "I Love Lucy"—times were good after the war years. Enter the princesses.

During the 1950s, Dairy Council helped initiate the Dairy Princess Program in Pennsylvania, a program which was later emulated by other states. The annual dairy princess winners represented the dairy industry at various social and business occasions.

Today, dairy princesses work with schools to help students understand dairy farming and to interest them in the importance of milk to their health.

Dairy Council's puppeteer program, launched in the early '30s, was in full swing by the 1950s. Giving "Howdy Doody" a little competition, the puppets became TV stars during this decade in a series of short films. One puppet, "Happy the Healthy," had such a following that he even had his own fan club.

Dairy Council's collection of several hundred hand-held puppets, worth thousands of dollars, was retired from service in the 1970s, but still can be seen on display in the DCI lobby. The puppets serve as a reminder to staff to continue to search for creative ways to communicate the message of good nutrition.

1960s—The Miracle of Milk

In the 1960s, "Geraldine," the now famous life-sized traveling fiberglass cow, joined the Dairy Council staff. She helped spread nutrition messages about milk throughout Dairy Council's territory by making public appearances at schools, shopping malls, fairs—anyplace she could capture the attention of the community.

Not only was Geraldine constantly on the move in the '60s, but so too was Dairy Council's newest exhibit, the "Miracle of Milk." This fueled-up 30-foot-long trailer caught the attention of children everywhere.

In 1972, the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association became the major funding source for DCI's nutrition education activities, providing new opportunities for Dairy Council programs.

In the early 1970s, Dairy Council introduced "Big Ideas," a curriculum for children from kindergarten through sixth grade. For the first time, the nutrition staff offered in-service programs to teachers on how to teach nutrition.

Lacewing Larva Beneficial

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — The green lacewing is an insect predator, available as a biological control of aphids and other soft-bodied pests in your garden. The voracious larvae are sometimes called aphid lions. They will eat just about anything they can subdue and suck dry with their large, piercing mandibles.

Green lacewings are sold as eggs or larvae. Larvae are costly, but may be a better value, since they may survive shipment better, and because other predators often eat a great portion of lacewing eggs.

Sprinkle the eggs or larvae near a serious infestation of a pest. The larvae will feed in an area as long as there is plenty of prey, and then the population will disperse.

Adult lacewings are pollen feeders. Their presence can be encouraged by having a diverse planting of plants and vegetables and by keeping the use of chemical pesticides to a minimum.

JOHN DEERE

PACKED WITH CONSISTENCY BALE AFTER BALE

Here's a performance you'll like repeated again and again in your fields: solid, stackable square bales that hold in feed quality.

How do John Deere square balers do it?

For starters, the low-profile pickup rides close to the ground to gather in more hay. And narrow-channel strippers help save leaves and short material.

Once the hay's in the baler, it gets packed solid as a unique design pre-compresses hay inside a tapered chamber. Feeder forks then fold the compressed hay into the baling chamber – delivering solid bales that stay together.

Caterpillars Cause Tree Defoliation

ANNAPOLIS, Md.— Maryland Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Dr. Henry A. Virts has announced that the forest tent and looper caterpillars are doing extensive damage to trees, particularly in Worcester, Wicomico, and Somerset counties.

"Many people confuse these loopers and tent caterpillars with the gypsy moth which we are attempting to control through spraying. Our gypsy moth supression program is nearly complete for the year and treatments in many areas may have been early enough to control most of the forest tent caterpillars and loopers in the spray areas. Treatment for gypsy moth caterpillars, however, occurs in localized blocks and therefore areas not sprayed may still have a looper and forest tent caterpillar problem," Virts said.

Maryland Department of Agriculture Forest Pest management scientists have noted that an outbreak of a type of looper caterpillar — the fall cankerworm — is occurring this spring especially in the Salisbury area. South of Route 50 from Hebron through Salisbury to Powellville loopers are numerous enough to cause a nuisance to people as well as defoliation of trees. These caterpillars are much smaller than full grown gypsy moth caterpillars, so the need to be very numerous to cause defoliation. Defoliated trees are already evident around Salisbury, Fruitland, and along Rt. 350 west of Salisbury.

Full-grown loopers, also called inchworms, are about one inch long, hairless, and vary from light green to dark brown in color. They are easily identified by their characteristic looping or inching walk.

Another species — the forest tent caterpillar — has been found throughout much of the same area this spring, but is especially prevalent along the Pocomoke River and its tributaries. Full grown forest tent caterpillars are about 2 inches long, have pale bluish lines along their sides and are characterized by a row of whitish, footshaped spots along the middle of their backs. Although they are called tent caterpillars, they do not make silk tents (or webs) as do the related Eastern tent caterpillars. Eastern tent caterpillars are numerous this year, but usually are found on roadside wild cherry and crabapple trees and are less of a threat to the forest trees.

The forest tent caterpillars, as well as loopers, feed on a wide variety of hardwood trees. Forest tent caterpillars are often found on sweetgum, black gum and oaks, and loopers are commonly found on oaks and red maples. In areas where these caterpillars occur together severe tree defoliation may result.

While defoliation by the various caterpillars is expected to peak in the next week, defoliation by gypsy moth should not be evident until early June. Currently, gypsy moth caterpillars are still small — about ½ inch long — and are black and hairy.

Since forest tent caterpillars and loopers are nearly full grown, feeding should end in the next week or two. Chemical control should be applied early in the caterpillar's life cycle — usually by early May. At this time, since caterpillars are larger and feeding is nearly completed, control is much more difficult. In most areas, chemical control is no longer an alternative.

The Maryland Department of Agriculture annually monitors pest conditions in Maryland forests and will continue to monitor the extent and severity of the outbreak. Questions should be directed to Dr. Robert Rabaglia, forest pest management, at (410) 841-5922.

Plant Drought-Resistant Varieties

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — In most landscapes, there are plants that survive periods of drought better than others. Proper spacing of these plants in the garden reduces the need to supply extra water during periods of inadequate rainfall.

When planning and designing the landscape, select plants for the growing conditions found at a particular site. Create a site plan that groups plants with similar water needs. In the site plan, consider three basic divisions: very low water zone, low water zone, and moderate water zone.

The following trees and shrubs are some that should be considered for low and very low zones: Hedge Maple, American Maple, Japanese Barberry, Flowering Quince, Cotoneaster, Juniper, Bayberry, Burr Oak, Chestnut Oak, Sumac, and Tamarack.

The annuals and perennials to consider for these areas are Yarrow, Snow-in-Summer, Blue Lyme Grass, Blanket Flower, Lavender, Russian Sage, Prairie Coneflower, Lavender-Cotton, Lamb's Ears, Globe Amaranth, Creeping Zinnia, and Marigold.

75th Anniversary Marks

In 1972, the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association became the major funding source for DCI's nutrition education activities, providing new opportunities for Dairy Council programs.

In the early 1970s, Dairy Council introduced "Big Ideas," a curriculum for children from kindergarten through sixth grade. For the first time, the nutrition staff offered in-service programs to teachers on how to teach nutrition.

Thousands of school children participated in these nutrition lessons, which became the first nationwide nutrition program.

1980s—More Technologies, Less Time

The stress-filled, busy lifestyle made its mark in the 1980s. While personal computers, fax machines, and other new technologies evolved to make our lives easier, time became our most precious commodity.

Finding more time for ourselves became a priority. As a result, the '80s also brought on increased attention to fitness and health. Consumers were more sophisticated and committed to healthy eating.

Dairy Council addressed these concerns with contemporary programs geared for adults, such as "Nutrition and Your Busy Lifestyle" and "Lifesteps: Weight Management."

When cholestoral was on everyone's minds in the late '80s, Dairy Council responded with "Checking it Out," a popular consumer brochure on fat and cholestoral distributed nationwide.

Also in the early 1980s, "Nutri-Runs for Fitness" were cosponsored by Dairy Council and the Philadelphia Dietetic Association. At the last sponsored run in 1984, more than 800 people participated in the 10K event.

1990s—Dairy Council Tradition Continues

For Dairy Council, Inc., the 1990s is a decade of innovation, teamwork, and strengthened alliances. Dairy Council continues with its tradition of reaching educators, students, health professionals, adult consumers, and other audiences with nutrition education materials and programs.

The '90s also brought changes to DCI so it can meet the changing needs and demands of the times. Dairy Council, Inc., was completely restructured and began to work in teams rather than by territorial division.

Customer Service became central to the heart of Dairy Council, together with a growing awareness of its partnership with the dairy farmers.

By 1992, school breakfast programs had become a central issue, both locally and nationally. The DCI staff developed school breakfast promotion events that included working with school districts to increase participation in their school breakfast programs.

This past year, more than 2,300 teachers, school nurses, coaches, food service personnel, and health professionals attended Dairy Council workshops or meetings. Health professionals ordered more than 30,000 brochures on osteoporosis, women's health, and calcium in 1994. More than 233,000 pieces of nutrition information were mailed to DCI customers.

Showing no signs of slowing down, this 75-year-old organization is anxiously preparing for nutrition education in the year 2000 and beyond.

You can also count on a long, trouble-free life from your John Deere baler. Compared to others, John Deere balers are just plain beefier. Heavy-duty bale cases and a heavy, side-mounted flywheel – plus simple John Deere design and fewer moving parts – mean season after season of beautiful bales.
